in making Small the governor of Illinois, just missing making Smith their United States senator, and Thompson and Lundin became chief patronage dispensers. Small made Smith the chairman of the public utilities commission, the most powerful body in the state, with jurisdiction over billions of dollars in property employed in the public service.

Calls Insull Utility Monarch.

"The present senior senator from Illinois—Senator McKinley—was the head of one of the largest utility corporations in the state, and Samuel Insull was the real utility monarch—who is reputed to have poured millions into primary and election campaigns in the last few years.

"I am told that his contributions haven't always been made willingly; but, as he operated utility properties with a gross of over $100,000,000 a year, he found it more profitable to 'come across' whenever he was asked than to refuse to pay and take his chance of losing millions in decreased rates at the hands of unfriendly public officials.

"I have been astonished to learn that the successful senatorial candidate in the recent Illinois Republican primary held on to his job as chairman of the utilities commission throughout his primary campaign and will do likewise during the campaign for election this fall.

Cites Small Interest Suit.

"Small, with the aid of his Chicago crowd, including the state's attorney of Cook county and the Chicago sanitdistrict, was reelected governor of Illinois in 1924 notwithstanding the Supreme court has decided he owes the state over $1,000,000 in interest on funds he had collected and retained—on state money he had unlawfully used for his own gain while in his custody as treasurer of the state.

"I have been told that money was one of the chief commodities of trade and commerce in Illinois during the recent Republican senatorial campaign. The unsuccessful candidate is charged with the expenditure of $1,000,000, and the successful candidate, it is claimed, distributed at least twice as much.

It is openly charged that, being chairman of the utilities commission, the successful candidate received enormous contributions from the heads of the public utilities of the state; that Samuel Insull, either individually or through his utility organizations, contributed over $500,000. I have heard that a man named Messere, claiming direct authority from Insull, offered nearly $100,000 in advertising to the foreign language newspapers of Chicago in return for their supporting Smith for senator. I have been told they refused to sell out, but I want to know the truth about it.

Rollins Deal Charges.

"It is said that, contemporaneous with the issuance of orders by the public utilities commission affecting certain public utilities, large contributions flowed into the Smith campaign war chest; that a utility deal involving about $20,000,000 of property drew, from the interested bankers, E. H. Rollins and Sons, more than $100,000 into the hands of Allen Moore, Smith's campaign manager. Moore is also the Republican national committeeman from Illinois.

"I want the committee to compel Allen Moore to tell how much he received in contributions to Smith's campaign funds and from whom he received it, and what connection these people had with Illinois public utilities.

"I want to know how much money was given to John Walker and Frank Farrington, the men who are said to have handled the labor vote in Illinois; I want to know how much was spent in maintaining palatial headquarters in the Congress hotel in Chicago, which, it is said, were conducted on the scale of a national campaign, with traveling representatives going out all over the state, displaying great quantities of currency.

Wants to Know Many Things.

"I want to know whether the charge is true that an army of state payrollers, and a like army of federal job holders, deserted their offices and, at public expense, went into the highways and byways of Illinois to nominate a candidate for United States senator.

"If it is true, as charged that a man, John Flanigan, boasted of lining up the railroads and public utilities, many of whom he represented, to contribute to a senatorial primary fund, we want to know it as a part of our information in determining the course of railroad legislation in this body."

"We want to know," he said at another point, "the truth concerning the operations of the Crowe-Barrett-Thompson-Small-Lundin-Smith combination to control Illinois politics. We want to know who paid for all of the newspaper advertising and the bill board advertising and what it cost.

"A man by the name of Dan Schuyler is said to have spent vast sums to collect votes in the so-called colored wards and foreign language groups in Chicago.

Tells of Income Tax Charges.

"I find," referring to a file on his desk, "only a few years ago this man Schuyler was under indictment for making false income tax returns and that his real defense was that the money he was shown to have received from Insull and other corporation heads was really only contributions to the Thompson-Crowe-Barrett-Lundin campaign fund. Under a Republican attorney general, the indictment against him was dismissed. I understand the public utilities and railroads are his best clients and yet he seldom appears in court or before any public tribunal.

"It is charged that Small's tax commission functioned very efficiently in the recent primary. And it is also charged that use of money was not confined to men. I am told that Allen Moore's secretary, a man named Barnes, sent out checks to individual men and women of from $100 to $500, inviting them to visit the imposing headquarters in Chicago, and, awed by the promise of easy money, they sallied forth with vast sums to organize—organize—organize."

Palmer Boasted, He Says.

The boasts by Lon Palmer, campaign manager for Senator McKinley in the latter's home county, of unlimited sums for use in the contest and his frequent display of great sums of cash, according to Senator Caraway, "called forth unusually heavy outpourings from the other side."

"I believe," he concluded, "it will be a good thing for Illinois and especially for Chicago, if even part of the charges of corruption that are made are true, that the people become informed.

"It is said the Republican party in Chicago is a joke. It is simply a case of which faction has the most money. I do not want to see the Democratic candidate for senator in Illinois laboring under the unfair disadvantage, of competing with a Republican adversary, who, under the Small régime, hangs on to the chairmanship of a commission which passes on all security issues and fixes the rates for all the utilities of the state, and who by reason of his position, has it in his power to raise vast contributions from public service corporations.

"The opportunity for corruption cannot be denied. We want the committee to find out how much of it has been used. The people want to know the facts."

IRENE CASTLE SORRY NOW SHE STARTED BOBBED HAIR CRAZE

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—The woman who started the bobbed hair idea in America a dozen years ago now regrets it, for she sees its development into the boyish bob and masculine women. Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, former dancer, wife of Frederic McLaughlin of Chicago, expressed these views today when she sailed on the liner France to Paris.

IRENE CASTLE McLAUGHLIN. [P. & A. Photo.]

"I'm sorry I began it," she said today, "because it has gone into the boyish bob in so many cases. I think that is too extreme, too masculine, and I don't like women to be masculine."

Mrs. McLaughlin confessed that she has tried five times to let her tresses grow long again, but each time when they reached the awkward stage she had them cut, but not in the extreme.

CHARGES SILLY—MOORE

Decatur, Ill., June 26.—(AP)—Charges of Senator Caraway of Arkansas in the senate today that Frank L. Smith, Republican candidate who defeated Senator McKinley, had spent $2,000,000 in his campaign were characterized here as "absolutely silly" by Allen F. Moore, campaign manager for Smith.

He also branded as false the statement of Senator Caraway that E. H. Rollins & Sons, bankers, had contributed $100,000 to the Smith campaign funds, coincidental with the issuance of orders from the Illinois commerce commission affecting a $20,000,000 public utilities deal.

Knows Nothing of Deal.

"I know nothing whatever of such a deal," Moore said. "No such amount as $2,000,000 ever went through my hands or the hands of any others in the Smith campaign committee in the interests of Smith's candidacy.

"I was one of the heaviest contributors to the Smith campaign funds, but I gave no such amount of $500,000, as Senator Caraway has charged. The senator has placed his decimal point one space too far to the right."

He said that Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities magnate, could speak for himself regarding contributions of $500,000 as charged by Senator Caraway.

WIDOW SEEKS GEMS IN TEETH OF DEAD "FITZ"

Two small diamonds, set in the teeth of Bob Fitzsimmons, one time world's champion heavyweight prizefighter, may cause the exhumation of the pugilist's body from Rosehill cemetery some time this week.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons, his widow, told Chief of Police Collins yesterday that she needed the gems to keep the wolf from the door. She said their sale would help replace the fortune she has spent for charity work, and asked aid in obtaining them.

Chief Collins promised to take up the case with Corporation Counsel Busch, Coroner Wolff and the cemetery authorities and do what he could to help her. Mrs. Fitzsimmons said she would return in a few days to see him. She left no address.

Lou Houseman, manager of the Adelphi theater and a friend of Fitzsimmons in his prime, recalled the fortunes. One weighs a carat and a half, the other a carat and has a flaw, he said.

ENTIRE NATION FACES QUIZ ON DRY LAW COST

Churches, Wets, Drys and Klan Included.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Probably the most sweeping inquiry into wet and dry propaganda and political activities since the enactment of the 18th amendment got under way today. The senate's special election slush fund committee determined upon an investigation of every organization—secular or religious—which has engaged in the fight for or against the national prohibition law.

The committee's decision to throw open the flood-gates followed the disclosure by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America, that state subsidiaries of the national league in New York, New Jersey, Ohio, and Indiana have spent more than $3,500,000 in campaigns for dry congressional candidates, propaganda, salaries, and "educational work" in their respective communities during the last five years.

Committee Is Amazed.

The obvious disparity between Wheeler's report of the expenditures in four states for five years since the passage of the Volstead act and his earlier estimate of the total cost of putting prohibition over—$35,000,000—amazed the committee and after an executive session conference, its chairman, Senator Reed [Dem., Mo.], announced that every organization which has had anything to do with prohibition politically, "whether it is church, Ku Klux Klan, Anti-Saloon league, anti-Volstead, anti-eighteenth amendment, or anything else," is to be investigated.

The first move of the committee to get the facts it desires was to dispatch its own accountant to the Westerville, O., headquarters of the national Anti-Saloon league to search the records of that organization, as well as of its publication, the American Issue, and bare the names of every contributor of more than $500, as well as the use to which the funds have been put.

Wheeler Is Warned.

Meanwhile, Wheeler was directed to secure promptly for the committee, itemized statements from the fiscal officers of every state Anti-Saloon league organization showing their total receipts since 1917 and their expenditures during the same period. The direction was accompanied with a sharp warning to Wheeler that any attempt to hamper the accountant sent to Westerville or any disposition on the part of state league authorities to quibble in furnishing the information sought will result in drastic action by the committee.

Wheeler, profuse in his promises of willing coöperation with the committee, protested against the publication of the names of the contributors to the league's treasury, on the ground that it would subject the donors to annoyance and embarrassment as the targets of senatorial investigation.

Should Be Public Records.

"So far as I am concerned," declared La Follette [Rep., Wis.], "I feel that those contributors, if they are made to an organization which is engaged in political work, should be upon the public records, just as the other contributions and expenditures which have heretofore been taken by the committee."

"I agree with that," Senator Reed said. "We cannot draw any lines on this. We have asked men here about their bank accounts, and we are going to ask some more of them about their bank accounts; and possibly bring their bank accounts in here before we get through. I will drop into the vernacular and say that any man who monkeys with the political situation must expect to tell what he is doing."

Reed Is Angered.

"We will do it," responded Wheeler, evidently nonplused by the turn of events and the display of anger by Senator Reed when Wheeler appeared without the financial records of the national league, which the committee had ordered produced a week or more ago.

Wheeler's statements from the New York, New Jersey, Ohio, and Indiana state leagues was received without audible comment by the committee, which, after a moment or two of whispered conversation, left for a secret conference in an adjoining room.

On their return Senator Reed announced that the committee would send an accountant to Westerville to audit the books of the league and of its organ, the American Issue.

"We want you also to obtain and have for us these statements of the state organizations," Reed then continued.

"That is, as to their disbursements and their income?" asked Wheeler.

"And contributions," added Senator Reed.

"Yes, I have three or four of them right here now," said Wheeler.

Demands the Names.

"I know," said Senator Reed, "but you only have three or four. We want the names of all contributors who contribute above $500 and we will not go below that."

"The accountant can see them," promised Wheeler. "That is from the national end of it."

"In the states we are just asking you to have the states report any contributions above $500," said Senator Reed.

Then came Wheeler's second surprise of the morning when Senator King [Dem., Utah], one of the most ardent drys in the senate, broke in with plain warning.

"Just a moment," said Senator King. "Of course, it must be understood that if the states do not furnish the information through you, we may be compelled to take some other course."

"I think we can get it, all right," assured Wheeler.

"And also," continued Senator King, "when our representative goes to Westerville, if he does not get the information which we ask him to get, we will feel constrained then to have the books brought here—so that you better see that he gets full information."

Promises Coöperation.

"They will coöperate with you to the fullest extent in getting the amounts raised and distributed," promised Wheeler.

"And the names of the contributors to the fund?" added Senator Reed.

"And the contributors," agreed Wheeler, renewing his plea for suppression of the names of the donors and drawing forth Senator La Follette's insistence that the whole record be made public.

"And that applies not only to your organizations, but to any other organizations that are engaged in political activities."

"We have had a conversation," declared Senator Reed, "and we have concluded that our examination of you, Mr. Wheeler, will be vastly shortened after we get this information, and that it is useless to go on asking a great number of questions, when what we want is largely in these books.

Called Wet Leaders.

"I want to say that we have directed that the heads of an organization which has been gotten up for the repeal of the Volstead act and the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and other purposes generally, to overthrow prohibition, will be summoned, and we propose to make the same sort of examination of that organization that we are making of yours."

It was then revealed that suopoenas have been issued by the committee for the appearance of Capt. William H. Stayton, founder and president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, as well as other officials of the organization, and the production of the association's books.

"And any other organizations that can furnish us reasonable information which will warrant us proceeding," continued Senator Reed, "we propose to investigate in so far as they have got anything to do with politics, and that includes every organization, I do not care whether it is church or Ku Klux Klan, Anti-Saloon league, anti-Volstead, anti-eighteenth amendment, or anything else; and if you have got any information along that line we will welcome it.

Plenty of Information.

"We have plenty of it" asserted Wheeler, smiling broadly.

"All right, and you can furnish it to us," said Senator Reed.

In the statement of receipts and expenditures of the state Anti-Saloon leagues in New York, New Jersey, Ohio, and Indiana, it was indicated that during the five years including 1920 and the first five months of 1926, the New York league has received a total of $1,856,822 and has expended a total of $1,927,060, leaving an apparent deficit when the statement was made of $70,238.

Contributions to the New Jersey state league aggregated $412,390 during the same period, and according to the statement, slightly more than $407,874 was expended. The Ohio league received donations of $900,865 and spent of that amount $882,397, while in Indiana the state league was given $392,795 and spent $386,175.

Details of the contributions and of the expenditures were not given in the statement and it was returned to Wheeler to be completed and offered to the committee with the reports from the other 44 state subsidiary organizations.

SCANT HOPE OF STOPPING STRIKE, VIEW OF DEVER

A strike of 461 technical engineers of the city for a 30 per cent increase in pay, called for next Wednesday, seemed inevitable yesterday when Mayor Dever expressed little hope for a settlement.

"The council is in a difficult situation," the mayor said. "With other groups of employés clamoring for salary increases and no money available it places them in a very serious situation.

"There has been much pressure used on behalf of the fire and police departments. The only thing for the city employés who are seeking increases to do is to bear patiently with the aldermen and the city administration."

Representatives of the engineers are to meet with the mayor tomorrow to make a final statement of their demands. The council finance committee will meet Tuesday, but Chairman Ross Woodhull has served notice that no salary increases can be considered.

ALL U. S. JAZZ BANDS BARRED FROM FRANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 26.—The ministry of labor has issued an order excluding all American orchestras, which intend to play for dances, and has ordered all others which have arrived since 1923 to leave the country. The French jazz players, after taking lessons from dozens of American bands, forced the ministry to place the ban on foreign musicians, who put them out of work every summer.

Opposition to the American bands, which are playing in practically every first rate place in the Montmartre and at most of the big hotels, arose some time ago, when the labor ministry decreed that they could not accept an engagement for longer than six weeks. But the Yankee tune twisters got around this rule by reorganizing every six weeks or trading engagements with other bands.

Now they are excluded altogether except when they come to play concerts, as in the case of Paul Whitman, who is opening at the Les Ambassadeurs on July 2. He must play from a regular stage and the patrons are not supposed to dance.

POLAND TAKES U. S. AS MODEL FOR NEW RULE

President Moscicki Says Democracy Will Live.

tion, knows a firm executive has absolutely nothing to do with dictatorship. In America the executive has more power than any other executive in the world; yet America remains the foremost democracy in the world.

"There is no body in Poland that seriously would think of introducing a dictatorship and abandoning the democratic principles of government."

This last observation is one which might be questioned by those who were in Warsaw during the days of May when Marshal Josef Pilsudski marched on the capital and threw out the old government with losses totaling 500 killed and 1,500 wounded. The street fighting in Warsaw, the storming of Belvedere palace, and the flight of the president, all not six weeks old, still is fresh in many minds.

"How will the policy of the new government differ from that of its predecessor?" I asked. "What new element, if any, will be called on?"

Government Strictly Constitutional.

"The former government was too short-lived to have any definite policy to speak of," the president replied, and I recalled that the administration of former Premier Witos had been in power but a short two weeks when it fled before the cannon and bayonets of Marshal Pilsudski.

"That government was formed under the pressure of party politics within parliament," the president continued. "That is a system you wisely avoid in America and the method has worked out badly for us. It is a place where the American and the old European system of democratic government differs.

"The new government has been formed strictly according to the constitution, which gives the president the full right to form a government according to his own will. It was formed, without a poll of parliament, just as the President of the United States selects his cabinet."

Discusses Poland's Neighbors.

From internal politics to external dangers, the interview gradually came around, and I asked:

"What do you think, Mr. President, is the greatest safeguard to peace in Europe and what does Poland consider as its duty toward maintaining that peace?"

"The life in this new community of nations must be founded on a strict basis of justice which should determine their mutual relations. The keystone of international law is formed by existing international treaties and conventions. If these are tampered with, all the relations between the nations would become liquidated again.

CROWD OF 40,000 CHEERS SWEDISH PRINCE DURING ADDRESS AT EVANSTON

PRINCE SPEAKS TO 40,000 IN MOTHER TONGUE

Royal Pair Attend Fete at Swedish Home.

Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and Princess Louise of Sweden visited the Swedish Old People's home in Evanston yesterday on the 25th anniversary of its founding.

Speaking in Swedish, the prince addressed a crowd of 40,000 for more than 40 minutes, revealing his impressions of America. He has found us to be a thrifty, energetic, progressive and realistic country, he said. He praised American ideas of freedom and equality, pointing out their similarity to the liberty loving spirit of Sweden.

A short introductory talk was made by Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Evanston. The Great Lakes Naval Training station band played national airs of both America and Sweden and the United Swedish Singers' chorus sang under the direction of William Norden.

Ask to Be Life Members.

Gifts totaling $35,000 to the endowment fund of the home were announced by Mrs. John P. Friedlund, chairman of the Ladies' Life Membership club. When the prince asked that he and the princess become life members there was hearty applause.

Earlier in the day the prince became a godfather. It was at the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest and the lucky baby was 9 months old Gustave Romaine Solbert, daughter of Col. Omar Solbert, of 311 College road, who was appointed by President Coolidge to accompany the royal visitors on their tour.

Mrs. Omar Abermachy of Kansas City, who held the child while the Rev. Herbert W. Prince pronounced the christening, acted as godmother.

Plays 14 Holes of Golf.

In the garb of a business man, while in three companions, Charles Schweppe, McCormick Blair and James Simpson, essayed regular golfing attire, the prince played fourteen holes of golf at the Old Elm Golf club in Lake Forest. His score for the first nine holes was 59 and for the next five 35.

Seventeen year old Arthur Berg, senior at Waukegan high school, who caddied for the prince, declared he played a pretty good game "in spots."

"It was just like caddying for anybody else," Arthur explained, "except his highness used more refined language when he made a bad shot. He's the best natured golfer I ever saw."

An informal luncheon, consisting of Jack bean soup, corn beef hash, lemonade, and peach pie was served at the club. The princess was entertained at luncheon at the home of Mrs. Schweppe.

Guests at Morris Dinner.

At a dinner given for the prince and princess by Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris in the Casino club last evening the following guests were invited: Chamberlain Nils Rudebeck, Count Col. Posse, Capt. USES CHICAGO TO POINT EVILS OF PROHIBITION

Social Breakdown Is Described.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Prohibition and Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, the man charged with its enforcement were bitterly attacked during debate in the house today on the second deficiency bill providing additional funds for the enforcement of the Volstead act.

REP. GORMAN.

Representative Gorman [Rep., Ill.] led the bombardment against the Volstead act with the charge that prohibition had caused an increase in crime in Chicago, that drunkenness among girls and young men had been increased during the dry régime, and that the whole moral and physical fiber of the future fathers and mothers of America was being destroyed by the dry laws.

Calls Prohibition a Curse.

Taking his most striking illustrations from the working neighborhoods of Chicago, where for seven years he was a mail carrier, Mr. Gorman told the members of the house that prohibition was the curse of the nation, that the simple people of the country were worse off because of the Volstead act, that it has made "bums out of good respectable people, and millionaires out of bums."

Mr. Gorman charged the dry laws with bridging the chasm between the otherwise law-abiding and the lawbreakers, with transforming the moderately drinking people into heavy drinkers, and with glorifying the use of hard liquor.

He asesrted it had resulted in more drinking among young girls and had aggragated immorality.

As a remedy Mr. Gorman urged his fellow members of the house to pass legislation permitting the manufacture and sale of beer with an alcoholic content of 2.75 per cent.

Prior to Gorman's outburst, Representatives La Guardia [Soc., N. Y.] and Hill [Rep., Md.], leader of the wets in the house, criticized Gen. Andrews.

Representative Hill was bitter in his opposition to an item in the deficiency bill in which Gen. Andrews asked for additional funds to finance under-cover squads of investigators to check up on state officials.

Denounces Dry Spies.

"Here," Mr. Hill said, "is an appropriation of more than $2,500,000, a large part of which is to provide a crowd of spies by which the federal government can detect the delinquencies of alleged conspiracies and criminal actions of state officers in violating the national prohibition act. I say that when it is necessary for the federal government to spy on the state officers who do not enforce the prohibition law, it is time to repeal the law."

Representative La Guardia charged Mr. Andrews with discrimination in enforcing the dry law.

Once Was a Dry.

Mr. Gorman, who was once rated as a dry, declared his statements were the result of real contact with the people and an active investigation. He said his experiences as a mail carrier to contrast conditions before and after passage of the dry law.

"The routes I traveled were in those sections of the city commonly called workingmen's neighborhoods," Mr. Gorman said.

"The open saloon was as common as the neighborhood market or grocery store. I saw plenty of drinking in the saloons of those days. It was confined to the men almost entirely and to a limited extent, it existed among youths who were arriving or had lately arrived at manhood. I never saw a woman drink in these saloons, with the exception of the saloonkeeper's wife, who, in tending bar, would join with the customers in a round.

Beer Brought Happiness.

"Taken by and large, the people, poor by birth and rearing, attached to employments which invited only the common and uneducated classes, lived in a circle of constant labor and even of drudgery, to which the only ingredient to add happiness and contentment came from quaffing wholesome and stimulating beer at the close of each day's work.

"Within recent weeks, I spent several days in a re-visit to the scene of my former work. In those poor workingmen's neighborhoods I made thorough inquiries about them and I will state what I learned from those good people and much of what I was able to see for myself.

"A crop of bootleggers, young and old, male and female, had sprung up to take care of the wants of those who were not sufficiently supplied by home-brew or by the saloons in disguise. The beer drinkers of then now drink poison drinks of all sorts, labeled whisky, gin, brandy, and what not.

Finds Much Crime.

"In this orderly community, as I knew it, there is now much crime. Theft, especially of automobiles, is common.

"Young boys and girls in the days I traveled there, now grown into early manhood and womanhood, instead of drinking beer in their own homes, as was the custom of their parents, now drink poison at parties, dances, cabarets, and elsewhere.

"The young men all drink and they get stupidly drunk from the rotten stuff they drink. Other vices have come

"How much longer will the slaughter of the innocents go on to satisfy the stubborn Volsteadian pride of those who are so blind that they will not see?"

Mr. Gorman asserted that the thrill that comes from breaking the law will disapear if a good wholesome beer is supplied to those who wish to drink it.

"Adoption of a 2.75 alcoholic per cent beer," Mr. Gorman said, "will have a tendency to stop the agitation and unrest among the people. It will decrease the drinking of poison. It will bring respect for the law."

among these plain folks as a result of strong drinking.

RIDE WATER WAGON TO THE WHITE HOUSE, DEMOCRATS ADVISED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Speaking on the subject, "What Is the Future of the Democratic Party, If Any?" Representative W. D. Upshaw [Dem., Go.], outstanding dry zealot in the house, made an impassioned plea today for his party to get on the water wagon and ride to the White House.

He criticized the use of the radio at national conventions, asserting that the only reason the Democrats failed to rebuke the Republicans at the last election was because the story of the snarl and tragedy of Madison Square Garden was carried to the four corners of the nation.

"The hoodlum hoots of Madison Square Garden, the insults to great Americans were heard throughout the land," Upshaw asserted. "And the American people decided they would rather have a high tariff than that kind of a democracy."

"The Democrats," he said, "went to Madison Square Garden with the Democratic elections sewed up, but they came away with their coat tails in tatters. The whole vacillating, equivocating procedure of the Harding-Coolidge program had cured the people of desire for any more of such administration."

Mr. Upshaw asserted the Democrats would win in 1928 if they would demand the strict enforcement of the prohibition laws and send out such an announcement that will electrify the watching world.

"If the Democratic donkey ever expects to graze on the refreshing verdure of the White House lawn," Mr. Upshaw said, "he must not stop long in the big 'wet' pastures, for if he does, some blind wet politician will load him down with beer kegs, and some 'damp' fool candidate will jump astride his back and ride him to a brewery instead of the White House."

WET ISSUE SPLITS NEW YORK G. O. P. ON WADSWORTH

Drys Hasten to Name Independent.

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—Separate headquarters and a personal platform will be features of the campaign for re-election of United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., who finds himself the target of Democrats and drys who have named former State Senator Franklin W. Cristman, a Republican, as an independent candidate to oppose Wadsworth.

SENATOR WADSWORTH. [H. & E. Photo.]

The circulation of nominating petitions for Mr. Cristman will begin next week, and the drys are planning, as an object lesson of their power in the state, to attempt the gigantic task of finding 500,000 signers to the Cristman petitions, while all they need in order to compel the placing of his name on the general ballot is the names of 12,000 qualified voters.

The Democrats have not yet found a candidate to place in the field against the personally popular leader of the opposition party, although there are a number of aspirants. Gov. Smith already is said to be on the lookout for a Democrat of caliber.

State headquarters for the Wadsworth campaign will be located at Syracuse, with Fred W. Hammond, one of the most acute and influential Republican leaders, in charge.

Senator Wadsworth is expected to go all the way of his recent declaration in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

The Republicans are not prepared to go nearly so far in their state platform. Any attempt on the part of Senator Wadsworth to force an out-and-out wet declaration into that document would bring about a split in the Republican party.

PLAN NURSERY FOR BABIES IN DOCTORS' NEW LOOP BUILDING

Plans for a day nursery in the new Medical Arts building, to be built at Wabash avenue and Lake street, where 700 babies may be "parked" every day, were disclosed yesterday by Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen.

Application for a permit for the nursery was made to the commissioner by Hayden Hodges, 731 Montrose avenue. Dr. Bundesen referred the request to Corporation Counsel Busch, who ruled that the issuance of such a permit was discretionary with the health department.

It is planned to locate the loop skyscraper nursery on the 20th and 21st floors of the building. It would be in charge of women physicians and trained nurses, Dr. Bundesen was informed, and would accept only children under 8 years old.

The proposed charges are 50 cents for the first hour and 25 cents for each succeeding hour, two dollars a day, or ten dollars a week. Dr. Bundesen said he is not quite satisfied that mothers can afford such prices. He said he would make a further investigation of the nursery scheme.

STREW ROSES IN PATH OF AIMEE AT HOMECOMING

Disciples Kiss Hem of Her Dress.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—Preceded to this city by news that the cabin of her mysterious kidnapers may have been found in the Sonora hills, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson was greeted at the Los Angeles depot by 30,000 persons this afternoon.

The crowd of idolizing followers broke a cordon of 100 policemen and 50 firemen. Women dressed in white threw roses on a pathway which opened through the throng, men bared their heads, a band struck up a hymn, and the priestess of "Four Square Gospel" was borne to her automobile for a triumphant return to Angelus temple.

Blesses the Multitude.

The woman who has centered the nation's attention on a remarkable story of disappearance and dramatic return, utilized the platform of her Pullman for a speech. She gave thanks to God, avowed the truth of every particular in her story of being kidnaped at Venice, Cal., last May 18, and bestowed a blessing on the throng.

Women scrambled to kiss the hem of her dress as she was borne along the flowered pathway to her automobile. There the band fell in and six mounted cowboy guards preceded her through downtown streets, from which city officials had banished traffic.

Confused at Tucson.

Mrs. McPherson gave no sign here of the confusion she manifested at Tucson, Ariz., where her Pullman was boarded by B. P. Greenwood, city building inspector of that city, who identified her as the woman he saw in Tucson four weeks ago.

Mrs. McPherson paled and Detective Captain Herman Cline of the Los Angeles police, who was escorting her, informed Greenwood that the night on which the Tucson man saw Mrs. McPherson in that city was one of the nights on which Mrs. McPherson, according to her story, was a captive in Mexico.

Greenwood then said, "the eyes, the features, are the same." Mrs. McPherson in agitation walked up and down the aisle. Greenwood then said, "You seem to have a slightly different walk. But if it was not you I saw, it was your twin sister."

Calls It an Injustice.

Mrs. McPherson told Greenwood, "You are doing me a terrible injustice."

Mrs. McPherson will address her church followers tomorrow upon her experiences since she disappeared. The address will be broadcast.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Mrs. McPherson, announced the woman pastor will make a world tour to proclaim her story of miraculous escape.

Chief Doubts Story.

Douglas, Ariz., June 26.—[Special.]—Chief of Police Percy Bowden and Constable O. A. Ash differed here tonight over Ash's belief that he had located the shack from which Mrs. Aimee McPherson announced she had fled last Wednesday.

Ash said the cabin is eighteen miles southeast of Agua Prieta, Mexico, at the end of a stretch of desert which was almost impassable to his party.

Chief Bowden declared Ash's description and that of Mrs. McPherson did not correspond, and said Ash's cabin has been known and visited for four months.

SURFACE LINES WORKERS DENIED RAISE, IS REPORT

Although the wage agreement of union motormen and conductors employed by the Chicago Surface Lines expired on June 1, no new arrangement has been made, and it is said that the operating heads of the street railway company are unwilling to meet demands of the men.

The officials, according to authentic reports, have refused to consider the signing of any agreement that extends beyond Feb. 1, 1927, when the present franchises expire. Heretofore wage scales have been adopted for periods of one, two, or three years.

Union leaders are demanding a blanket raise of 5 cents an hour, a $1,000 insurance policy, and a $20 a week sick benefit for each employé. This would raise the maximum pay from 75 cents to 80 cents an hour. No definite negotiations will be entered into until August, union heads said. Similar demands have been made by the elevated workers' union.

BETTY ON STAND SACRIFICES SELF TO GET DURKIN

Tells of His Promise to Shoot It Out.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK

Betty Andrews Werner took the stand yesterday in Judge Harry B. Miller's courtroom and sacrificed her own reputation in order to testify against Martin James Durkin, the former sweetheart who had helped tarnish that reputation.

Technically, her brisk, nimble story made just one fundamental accusation against Durkin, on trial for the murder, Oct. 11, 1925, of Federal Agent Edwin C. Shanahan.

Tells Durkin's Shooting Plans.

That accusation came when Betty, over the objections of Attorneys Eugene McGarry and Roland Libonati, court appointed defense counsel, told that on her ride home from California with Marty (and she still calls him Marty) in a stolen automobile last October, he had said:

"We've got to go the southern route; they're looking for us on the northern. If anybody comes, you drop to the bottom of the car. If I can't talk 'em out of it, I'll have to shoot it out."

Assistant State's Attorney Michael Romano quickly brought out that the "anybody" meant "the coppers."

Backs Up State's Case.

This alleged remark of Durkin's, as relayed to the jury by Betty, is significant, because it leads, of course, in a wide arc to the state's contention that Durkin's every action was predicated on this threat to shoot it out with the police. And it seeks to puncture Durkin's defense theory that he didn't know that Shanahan was an officer, and that he shot him in self-defense.

In a flash of syllables, Betty added a postscript to her quotation from Marty when she said: "He told me the coppers wanted him because he had shot three coppers back in Chicago."

Judge Miller immediately ordered that remark stricken for he has ruled that Durkin is to be tried specifically on the one crime, the killing of Shanahan, with no tangents leading to other police blotter records. But jurors have ears, and Betty had a quick tongue.

Judge Warns Prosecutor.

The judge ordered the jury out of the room while he admonished the state, saying:

"The court will not tolerate any more irrelevant, incompetent evidence brought in by subterfuges on the part of the state's attorney. Now, Mr. Romano, you know that is improper."

The jury was recalled and Attorney Romano was allowed to bring out that Durkin's remark, on that ride, had been a general threat toward all policemen.

Beyond this important bit of evidence, the rest of Betty's vivid and forthright story really swings in balance, with only the jury's psychological interpretation to sway it to the side of the defense or of the prosecution.

Her Testifying a Tossup.

On the state's side there is this: Betty is attractive; she is courageous. She's the kind of woman a juror, or anybody else, would want to have stick with him if he were in a tight spot And she gives the impression that she'd know how to stick. When, therefore, she takes the stand and turns against the man she lived with for six months, it seems as if it wouldn't help the man much.

On the defense side there is this: Betty admitted she might be tried as accessory to the theft of an automobile stolen by Durkin in California, but denied that she was testifying in order to gain immunity on that charge. She admitted she had lived, unmarried, with Durkin for six months, admitted she had worn the clothes she says he stole for her, and then she concluded it all by saying: "Sure. I care for him as much now as I ever did. That was never very much."

Intent Crowd In Court.

But the listeners who crowded into the court room yesterday weren't balancing the young woman's story. They were listening to it, every word of it.

Durkin looked straight ahead as Betty walked to the stand and was sworn. Her auburn hair was all but concealed under a graceful large black hat, with drooping brim. She wore a black satin frock and carried a white leather purse. Very personable she looked.

Briefly she gave her name, age and the like. Then Prosecutor Romano asked her if she had any children.

Yes, I have a boy, 2 years old, and she tightened her voice as she replied.

What is his name?

Before Betty could answer Attorney McGarry shouted, if he has a name.

Betty began to cry. Her head bent low; her shoulders shook; the more she tried to stop her tears, the faster they came. Presently, when she was in a state of semi-collapse, Judge Miller rebuked Attorney McGarry for having interposed the remark. Then he was obliged to call a recess until Betty was able to go on with her story.

It was on Feb. 22, 1925, she told the jury, that she met Durkin in a restaurant at 63rd street and Cottage Grove avenue. They spent that night at the Wenthworth hotel and left Chicago, Feb. 25, with Betty's small son, and drove to Hollywood, Durkin, she said, had told her he was employed as a pathfinder for an automobile company, but never, all the time she knew him, she declared, had he done a day's work.

Second Trip to California.

There was a second trip to California, and it was on the return that he is alleged to have made the remark about shooting it out with the coppers.

And a third trip. At this time, Sept. 24, 1925, Betty recalled this incident.

"It was about 11 at night. Marty drove to the D. E. McDonald Packard agency in Los Angeles, and left me parked half a block away in our Chrysler car. The agency was dark. I saw the lights flash on. Fifteen minutes later Marty drove out in a Packard sedan. I drove the Chrysler, and he the Packard to Hollywood; then we switched and I drove the Packard to the Santa Monica garage."

Start Back to Chicago.

A day or so later they started back to Chicago. In Albuquerque, N. M., they picked up Harlow George and his wife [Betty's aunt]. The Georges were broke and Durkin drove them back to Chicago. Betty and Durkin quarreled on the way in, and were not on speaking terms when they arrived, Oct. 8, at the home of Betty's uncle, Clarence Ward, 225 Englewood avenue.

On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 11, Betty came in at 6 o'clock and saw Durkin leave soon afterward. Later she went to the corner of Princeton and Englewood avenues, saw the crowd, and learned there had been a shooting.

That was her story, on direct examination.

When Attorney McGarry took her for cross-examination, all her spunk and resoluteness came forward, even when it meant putting herself through an ordeal of revelation.

For instance, at the very beginning of the fencing there was this:

Q.—You've never been married at all. A.—No, I've never been married.

Q.—He bought the baby food? A.—The baby had to eat.

Q.—He bought you clothes? A.—He did not. He stole them.

Q.—You knew he stole them? A.—Absolutely.

Then Mr. McGarry got one flare-up of what looked like loyalty to Marty when he began to talk of Harlow George. It was George, it was alleged, who, following a quarrel over clothes with Marty, threatened to turn Durkin over to the police and later made good the threat. Durkin is said to have called him a "dirty rat."

Durkin Registers Admiration.

"But," the defense lawyer inquired, "you yourself said Harlow George was a rat?"

"I certainly did. And I still think so," the girl shouted out and Durkin looked at her admiringly.

Then Attorney McGarry sought to cross her testimony with the shadow of the fact that she was but a semi-voluntary witness against her former sweetheart, having taken the stand for the state in order to avoid punishment.

"I'm here of my own accord," Betty said doggedly.

Q.—Do you expect to be punished? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Has the state made you any promises? A.—Not a one.

Doesn't Fear Punishment.

And, with a toss of her big brimmed hat, "I'll take what's coming to me. If I deserve it, I'll get it."

Durkin was pleased with her spirit. So was the courtroom.

"Don't you know," the attorney went on, "that they might send you to the penitentiary for the Mann act?"

"I've already been through an investigation at the federal building," she tossed back coolly.

Then the talk turned to Durkin and his money.

Q.—Didn't Marty always have a roll of money? A.—I don't know if it was a roll.

Q.—Well, it wasn't a milk can, was it? A.—You don't take a milk can out of your pocket.

Scornful of Durkin's Gift.

When the attorney referred to Durkin's generosity in giving her a bank account, the girl was amused and scornful.

"Did I have a bank account? I had it for just one day. I made out one check, then he drew out all the money."

There was more argument over Betty's present status as a guest of state's attorney's office for some six months at a loop hotel, with a policewoman buying her meals and paying for her entertainment. When the lawyer wanted to know about her gown, and her hat, she said, indignantly:

"I bought those clothes myself, with money I earned before last January."

Then, just before adjournment, Mr. McGarry asked about the clothes Marty had given her. The judge ordered stricken her remarks that he had sent her a fur coat, but that "a woman from California identified nine of them as those Marty stole from her," and similar statements which she gave with considerable zest.

And, at the very last:

Q.—You haven't any ill-will against Marty, have you? A.—No.

Q.—You have just as much feeling for him now as you ever had? A.—Just as much.

Q.—And that wasn't very much? A.—Not much.

Q.—But you lived with him six months and took his money and clothes? A.—Yes.

Court was adjourned until tomorrow morning.

Former Sweetheart Denounces Durkin at Trial

Betty Andrews Werner, former sweetheart of Martin Durkin, on trial for murder, is shown on the witness stand yesterday. She is being questioned by Assistant State's Attorney Michael Romano. The girl denounced the slayer in her testimony, which was given to aid the prosecution.

Burial of several hundred victims of the flood at Leon Guanajuato, in trenches and without identification, as necessary, has been ordered by the authorities as a precaution against epidemic.

It is estimated that probably 15,000 or 20,000 persons are homeless and that the property damage may reach 20,000,000 pesos ($15,000,000).

MODERN GIRLS NEED CURBING, MATRONS AVER

But Police Captain O. K.'s Them; Blames Boys.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

I have been asked, as a veteran police reporter, to get some light on the subject of morals among the young people, especially on the much debated problem whether young people of today are less good and less circumspect than the folks of the same age a generation or so ago—in the gay '90s for instance.

And whether young men are losing the traditional respect for young womanhood?

And what is the explanation of shocking incidents in life like those recently revealed in the cases of co-eds—the Battle Creek case and the De Kalb case?

Some views are herewith presented. The first is a composite interview with four police matrons—Mesdames McNulty, Daly, Wiltz, and Henneberry—all of whom have seen many years of service in their calling and have handled thousands of girls, both good and wayward. Probably no women in Chicago are better able to discuss the causes of these atrocious attacks than the four veteran matrons at the old Harrison street and later South Clark street station annex.

The concluding interview is with Capt. Charles L. Larkin, who for more than a third of a century has been a member of the police department. He is a keen observer.

What the Matrons Say.

The absence of old fashioned home life, the indifference of most parents, the lack of modesty, the love of a "good time," the close intermingling of the sexes, the neglect of religious training, the desire to be attractive, even at the expense of decency; the disregard of parental advice—these are a few of the causes as set forth by the matrons for existing conditions.

"When I was a girl," one said, "we were not allowed to run around with boys, as girls do of the present age. We could have them call at our home, where our brothers and sisters and parents joined in the innocent pastimes. We sang old fashioned songs and played old fashioned games and enjoyed ourselves, I dare say, as much as the young people of today."

"But there is no home life now," interrupted one of the matrons. "Unless a girl has a beau who sports an automobile she is behind the times. To my way of thinking the automobile is in a large degree responsible for present conditions. To use a common expression, girls fall for a fellow who has a car, and that's the starting point of their entrance on what they think is a gay life. The primrose path turns out to be one of thistles.

Blame for Parents, Too.

"Parents give their children too much liberty. No girl should be permitted to go automobile riding with a young man unless accompanied by an older person. There is too much temptation, or rather the opportunity for a girl to forget herself is there when she is alone with a young man in an auto. The young man drives to some secluded place, such as 'Lovers' Lane,' a lonely spot in the country, and is it any wonder that the girl submits to his advances, especially if she is stupefied by liquor? It is quite the proper thing these days for young men to have a bottle on the hip when they go for a ride. It may be that in some instances the girl never before tasted liquor, but she is urged to take 'just a little,' and soon her brain is in a whirl. In my opinion moonshine whisky is a large contributing cause in young girls falling from grace."

Here another matron interjected with "yes, and cigaret smoking, too. A cigaret in itself is harmless, for many respectable women smoke them, but it is abhorrent to see a young girl puffing away at a 'fag.' Ninety per cent of the women who pass through the annex are addicted to cigarets. I don't say that cigaret smoking made them what they are, but in some cases it was the starting point on the downward path.

"Bobbed hair and scant attire are two notable causes why girls cannot command the proper respect from men," the speaker continued. "Most girls dress indecently. I mean just what I say. If they had attired themselves in the same raiment a few years ago they would have been arrested.

Rouge, but Don't Read.

"There is no doubt that the way many young girls dress and make up with rouge and powder is the cause of their getting into trouble. All they think of is to look pretty. They never read a good book that would improve their mind. They don't wash a dish at home, and their mothers don't want them to do any housework, because it might make their hands red. You seldom see a girl nowadays knitting or crocheting. There isn't one of us four who didn't have to make our own dresses when we were young girls. But we're old fashioned."

"I agree with all of you," the fourth matron said, "but there are other reasons besides those mentioned why girls are insulted. What about the flapper who stands at the curb waiting for some fellow driving an automobile to come along and offer her a lift? Many girls who are employed downtown boast about the 'swell cars' in which they ride home from the office. I have often seen them standing at the curb, making believe they are waiting for a motor bus, and when some automobilist, whom they never saw before, pulls up they hop in.

"They will accept an invitation to dinner at some cabaret, if invited, and after the meal they dawnce—not dance. Jazz music has been the cause of many a girl going wrong. She probably had a good home, but her parents were indifferent. It seems to me that the lack of parental restraint is the underlying cause of most cases in which girls went to the bad."

Matrons Wrong, Captain Thinks.

Capt. Larkin doesn't think that scant attire or bobbed hair have anything to do with the causes why girls are victims of so called cavemen.

"Dr. Evans tells you," the captain said, "that women folk dress more sensibly now than ever before. When I was a boy it was the style for women to wear dresses that swept the ground. Underneath the dress they wore underskirts, petticoats and goodness knows what not. It would have been regarded an offense against decency for a woman to expose her nether limbs.

"I don't see anything wrong in the present style of women's attire. You remember the old French maxim in McGuffey's reader, 'Honi soit qui mal pense'—evil to him who evil thinks.

He's for Some Bobs.

"Neither do I decry bobbed hair. I think it improves the looks of many women. I will admit that some of them are rather lavish with the paint pot, but that's their business.

"But bobbed hair or scant attire never have been the causes of a woman being attacked. As regards the attacks on the two young women—the case at Battle Creek, Mich., and the other out here in De Kalb county—I followed them closely in the newspapers and am of the opinion that justice was meted out.

"The Michigan case was particularly atrocious. In that instance the assailant was the son of a man who had suddenly acquired riches. He thought because his dad had money he could get away with anything. The jury gave him what he deserved, and I have no pity for him.

Believe Boys Are Bad.

"I see no mitigating circumstances in the De Kalb county case, and there, too, the judge performed his duty.

"But why do we have such crimes? Is it a growing disrespect for women, or are the young men of the present day more depraved than those of half a century ago?

"To my mind most girls are good, and most boys are bad. Some of them are damn bad. But you would hardly expect to find bad boys—such as the ones who were guilty of attacking Miss King and Miss Westervelt—in small towns. Those young men were college boys and had the best of home environment. One would think that young men of their education and refinement would be the protectors of womankind. No doubt they all had good mothers and fathers, and why they should commit such heinous crimes is a mystery.

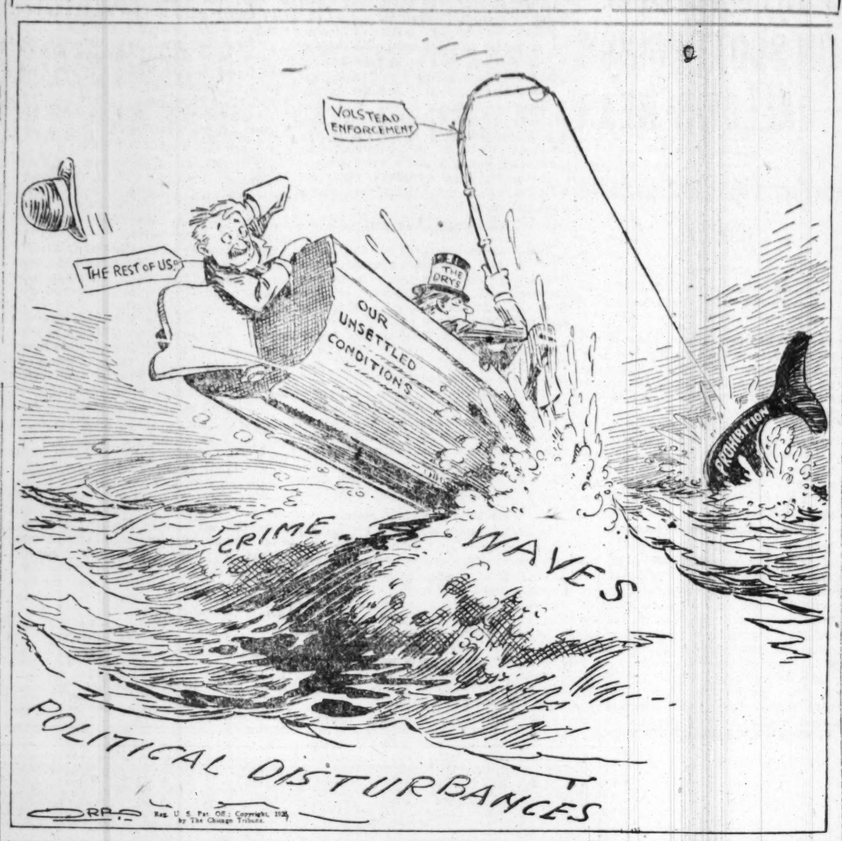
"Crimes of that nature were unheard of when I was a boy, and I am forced to believe that the youth of 40 or 50 years ago was more circumspect in such things than the young man of the present age. We had a wholesome respect for womanhood.

Problem Old as Rack.

"The sex problem will be with us as long as the human race exists. It would seem that the wide publicity given the Michigan case would act as a deterrent, but it did not.

"Petting and so called 'necking' parties probably are to blame for many girls going wrong. I don't know what parents are thinking of. They should not permit their daughters to go out automobile riding with young men. It's dangerous.

"But after all, it's a pretty good old world. There are more good people in it than bad ones. Unfortunately we read only of the misdeeds of a few, and not the good deeds of the millions."



BOY KILLED BY AUTO; DRIVER IS HELD; TOLL 377

Motorist Has Narrow Escape as Car Upsets.

An unidentified boy, about 8 years old, was fatally injured yesterday when he was struck by an automobile at 88th street and Escanaba avenue. He was taken to the South Shore hospital, where he died.

Joseph Tess, 20 years old, 8526 Manistee avenue, the driver, was taken into custody after witnesses declared he was speeding. The boy's death raised the Cook county toll of motor accidents in 1926 to 377.

Near Death in Accident.

James Walacka, 31 years old, 9740 Avenue L, narrowly escaped death yesterday when his sedan crashed through a rope guard placed across the roadway at 106th street and the Calumet river while the bridge was turned. The car plunged into the water, but Walacka managed to open a door, get out and swim ashore.

West Park Policeman Thomas Pavis, 4026 West 24th street, was struck and seriously injured yesterday when he was struck at Marshall boulevard and Ogden avenue by a car driven by Miss Hazel Parfitt, 207 Rockford avenue, Forest Park. The latter was learning to drive. The skull of Pavis was fractured.

Find Death Accidental.

A coroner's jury in Aurora yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death over the body of Mary Elizabeth Solfisburg, seven months old daughter of Attorney Roy Solfisburg of Aurora, who was killed in an auto accident Friday.

Mr. Solfisburg, his wife and their three children were driving west of Aurora on the Galena road on a country trip. As they neared the entrance to a farmhouse close to the city a new car, piloted by Mrs. C. A. Edwards of Aurora, who was learning to drive it, backed out of the farm lane in the way of the approaching Solfisburg machine. Becoming confused, yesterday's testimony revealed, Mrs. Edwards pressed the accelerator instead of the brake and her machine crashed into the approaching one, turning it over.

REPLACE SOCIAL WORKERS.

CHANG IN PEKING TO MAP OUT NEW RULE FOR CHINA

PEKING, June 26.—(AP)—Marshal Chang Tso-lin, ruler of Manchuria, arrived here today for the long deferred conference with Marshal Wu Pei-fu which is expected to result in a campaign to eliminate the national peoples armies of the recently deposed government.

Dispersal of the national armies is considered first on the program of Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu in the establishment of a new government in which they are the moving factors. Completion of the cabinet and recall of the parliament are secondary.

Chang Tso-lin's entry was a military one. Two brigades of bodyguards escorted him. The streets through which he passed, though beflagged in his honor, were heavily picketed.

Completes Fifty Years of Service with Field Co.

Hugh Smyth of the packing department of Marshall Field & Co. yesterday completed his fiftieth year of service with the firm. Born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1848, Mr. Smyth joined the organization shortly after his arrival in America. His only comment on his anniversary was that he hoped to continue indefinitely in his present position.

ALDA DISMISSES DIVORCE RUMOR WITH A LAUGH

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—The latest of the perennial rumors that have had Mme. Frances Alda, Metropolitan soprano, on the verge of divorcing Giulio Gatti-Casazza, director of the Metropolitan opera, received a laughing but firm denial from the singer today.

This latest topic of gossips, she said, commenting on a cabled dispatch from Paris, has been the latest topic of gossips for eighteen years and it's just as true on this occasion as it has been in each of the last eighteen years.

M'MILLAN POLL VICTORY PERILED BY VOTE RECOUNT

Discrepancies Cut Lead to Narrow Margin.

Recounting of the Republican primary ballots yesterday revealed further discrepancies and jeopardized the nomination of Robert E. McMillan for Municipal judge. The proclamation had given him a lead of more than 800 over Judge William L. Morgan, but two precincts sliced 539 from that margin between nomination and defeat.

The tabulation of the votes for Municipal judges was so erroneous as to induce a motion from the attorneys for the defeated candidates to reject all the ballots of the 11th precinct of the Twentieth ward. Should this be allowed by County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki it would affect approximately 700 votes, most of which were credited to the winning Crowe-Barrett candidates.

Would Defeat McMillan.

Such action would place McMillan, and perhaps one or two of the others, in the list of defeated rather than successful contenders—pending only a recount of the ballots all over the city to ascertain those truly and actually nominated.

The opening of the ballots cast in the two precincts—the 11th of the 20th ward and the 12th of the 27th ward—has so far sustained, in a measure, some of the allegations of the Lundin-Deneen candidates that they did not receive a fair count. These were precincts designated by them.

The Crowe-Barrett nominees, on the other hand, say they will be able to show other precincts in which the Lundin-Deneen candidates were the favored ones in the count, if not in the casting of the votes. The indications yesterday were that, because of the showing made, the entire vote will be recounted, keeping the Republican factions at war all summer.

Heth to Be Assistant.

The special grand jury, under direction of Special State's Attorney Charles A. McDonald, is expected to take official cognizance of conditions in the two precincts as well as in all future ballot boxes opened. Attorney Lloyd Heth, president of the Hamilton club, was approved yesterday by Prosecutor McDonald as an assistant and will be assigned to draft the indictments hitherto voted and those to be voted by the special grand jury.

Prosecutor McDonald and his first assistant, Attorney James C. O'Brien, were seeking yesterday for a legal way to keep this special jury in existence after this week. Should it be necessary to discharge these twenty-three men and impanel twenty-three others, that will be done, they said, and from month to month as long as there is work for a grand jury.

It was said yesterday that Dr. Jacob Epstein, precinct captain of the 11th precinct in the Twentieth ward, may be among the first called to explain, if he can, how the votes were allotted. In some instances the judges and clerks were close to being accurate; in others, far off.

Cut Total for Savage.

Joseph P. Savage, nominated for county judge, was credited with 705 votes in this precinct by the judges and clerks. The recount shows he should have received 700. Judge Trude was given four votes and should have been given but three, the ballots showed.

For other major offices the figures were nearly right, Arnold for sheriff receiving 695 instead of 692, Titus Haffa for assessor being given 700 instead of 697, Boutell for president of the county board getting 689 votes, whereas the recount gives him 690.

For the ten places as members of the county board the men nominated were credited with an average of about fifty votes more than they should have received, an exception being made in the figures for Charles S. Peterson, who was credited with 218 when he should have been given 343. Joe Esposito, too, was given 575 votes, though the recount shows his correct vote to have been 401.

Changes in Vote Total.

More important among the changes in the Municipal court vote are these:

	Given.	Actually received.
Armstrong	475	357
Auw	682	350
Bugee	701	653
Fairbank	480	349
Fetzer	674	310
Gentsel	687	351
Heller	702	667
Jacobs	678	443
Klatzco	695	513
Klein	692	408
McMillan	689	343
Sbarbaro	700	666
Schulman	701	675
Morgan	0	97

A number of the candidates who were credited with no votes were found to have received a few, Morgan being highest with 97 and King being next with 70 votes.

GALLOWS AGAIN DECREED AS SCOTT'S FATE

SANITY VERDICT ON SCOTT BRINGS GALLOWS NEAR

Further Fight to Save Life Likely.

save Scott had failed, when Gov. Small finally had turned down his last plea for a reprieve, went before Judge Joseph B. David and obtained the insanity trial which sent the slayer to the prison at Chester, Ill.

Maurer, drug clerk, was shot to death in the City Hall pharmacy, where he was employed, on the evening of April 2, 1924. Both Russell Scott and his brother, Robert, were known to have been in the store at the time of the shooting.

Former Actor and Promoter.

Russell was arrested the next day, and then the amazing story of his career was made public. It developed that he had been an actor, and later a promoter, with an elaborate suite of offices in Detroit. He had failed for $2,000,000, trying to promote an international bridge over the Detroit river, linking Detroit and Windsor.

Russell Scott insisted at the beginning that his brother, Robert, not he, killed Maurer. Russell has insisted on that all along. Robert was missing for a long time, but after Russell had been found insane by a jury and sent to Chester Robert was found in San Quentin prison, California.

Robert was brought back to Chicago. He is to go to trial tomorrow before Judge William N. Gemmill as having taken part in the murder of Maurer.

Scott plead guilty to murder before William J. Lindsay. The plea was made by Attorney Walter T. Stanton. But when Judge Lindsay started to sentence Scott to the gallows, both Scott and Stanton made tearful pleas to be allowed to withdraw the first plea, to plead not guilty and stand trial before a jury.

Wins Change of Plea.

The technical error that the court reporter had not been present when the guilty plea was made later was revealed and Judge Lindsay allowed Scott to withdraw his plea of guilty and enter one of not guilty.

Scott finally was tried before Judge Thomas J. Lynch early in December, 1924, found guilty by the jury and sentenced to the gallows.

The next move was to obtain a continuance to gain time to appeal to the Supreme court for a writ of error. Scott was given 30 days. The Supreme court denied his plea. Then Scott appealed for the first time to Gov. Small. He was given a reprieve a few days before the date set for the execution.

Wife Gets Women's Help.

The new reprieve set the date for his hanging as July 17, 1925. As that day drew near, there were great efforts on behalf of Scott. His wife, Katherine, started a plea for funds, many Detroit clubwomen became active for him and money was raised.

In the meantime, Scott's insistance that it was his brother Robert who had killed Maurer grew more and more persistent. He appealed to Robert through the press to come and save him. Robert did not appear.

On July 16, a telegraph operator with a sympathy complex wired that he was Robert Scott and was coming to take the blame for the murder. Gov. Small gave Russell Scott another reprieve—that time for a week.

During that week the telegraph operator, who signed "Robert Scott," was found by the Detroit police. He confessed that he had done it out of sympathy—he did not believe in capital punishment. Again all hope appeared to fade for Scott.

Wife Calls on Small.

Scott was to be executed on July 24, and on that day late in the afternoon his wife, his father, and several women friends from Windsor, Ont., went to make a last plea before the governor. That failed.

Scott was under death watch at the time. He had eaten what he supposed would be his last meal. Spiritual advisers had visited him. He had resigned himself to death.

Suddenly at midnight word was received that Detroit friends had raised $5,000, that Attorney Stewart had been retained to make an insanity plea on the petition of Scott's father that Scott had become insane since conviction.

Saves Scott from Rope.

Attorney Stewart had been retained and he went hunting a judge to hear his plea. He found Judge David at a club. He demanded that the jurist convene court and hear him. Judge David said that he could not, under the law, refuse that plea. The judge opened court at 2 o'clock in the morning. Exactly 11 minutes later Judge David had granted a stay. The sanity trial followed and Scott was sent to Chester. Now further legal battles impend, perhaps repeating many moves already made.

BOAT UPSETS; ONE DROWNS.

Goshen, Ind., June 26.—[Special.]—James Gephardt, 28, recently of Fond du Lac, Wis., was drowned in Stone lake when his boat upset. His companion, Charles Walker of South Bend, was rescued by Ray Garman of Goshen. Walker was arrested on a charge of intoxication.

Jackson Shore Apartments

Five Opportunities

ONE YEAR AGO THE JACKSON SHORE APARTMENT BUILDING, an imposing eleven-story structure, located on the lake at 55th Street, containing but twenty apartments, was Chicago's greatest rental value.

HOUSING SOME OF CHICAGO'S MOST PROMINENT FAMILIES in its suites of ten to thirteen rooms, it was then conceded to be the finest in arrangement and appointments of Chicago's luxurious apartment dwellings and residence here has always been a mark of distinction.

NO LONGER ON THE RENTAL MARKET, ITS TENANTS, WHO assume no personal liability, have taken over the interest of the former owners at a figure which is half a million dollars less than today's replacement cost, and all but five of the apartments now belong to the occupants.

SINCE MAY 1ST, 1926, WHEN "THE SHORELAND," THE WORLD'S finest residential hotel opened, the desirability of the Jackson Shore as a residence has doubled, for there is a physical connection (a covered passageway) between the two buildlings, and all the facilities of this fine hotel are equally at the command of the Jackson Shore apartment owners.

NOW RESIDENTS IN THE JACKSON SHORE MAY HAVE THE use of all the catering facilities of "The Shoreland." Its barber and beauty shops, laundry, valet and all other services may be utilized without going out of doors. Owners of the Jackson Shore have use of "The Shoreland's" ballroom, private dining rooms, and other entertainment features without the charges usually made to nonresidents. "The Shoreland's" wonderful food shop, when completed, will afford Jackson Shore owners the opportunity to do all marketing without going out of doors.

NO OTHER OWNERSHIP PROPOSITION IN CHICAGO CAN OFfer such location, facilities or economical upkeep charges, for the Jackson Shore is completely serviced by "The Shoreland"—its power, light, heat and refrigeration all being contracted for at about one-half the usual cost.

AN INVESTMENT OF BUT $22,500.00 WILL SECURE ONE OF these magnificent homes, and the carrying charges total but $270.00 per month—less than one-third the normal rental.

THERE ARE BUT FIVE APARTMENTS REMAINING TO BE SOLD —social and financial references are required of prospective owners.

SEIPEL URGES CATHOLIC WORLD DRIVE FOR PEACE

U. S. Should Be Starting Point, He Declares.

Springfield, Ill., June 26.—[Special.]—Foundation of a world-wide Catholic movement for universal peace was urged tonight by Msgr. Ignatius Seipel, savior of Austria, in an address before members of the Catholic Central Verein of America in convention here tonight.

It was revealed that the Central Verein had been asked by Pope Benedict XV., before his death, to undertake this great work and Msgr. Seipel, in his address, urged that the immediate present, following the greatest Eucharistic congress, would be the ideal time for the organization of such a movement, and that its starting point should be the United States of America.

Catholic Attitude Changed.

It is not long since the Catholic church looked with scepticism on every movement for world peace and every pacifist effort, he declared. The ideal of world peace was regarded as utopian. "But if Americans did not believe this ideal were possible," he continued, "there would be no America. You would remain Europeans in the new world. On the ideal of peace America became great."

The mistake in pre-war plans for peace, he pointed out, was that they were built on humanitarianism alone. There was no talk of Christianity. "It was a mistake for Catholics to have held themselves aloof from The Hague peace efforts," Msgr. Seipel declared.

Cardinal Piffl of Vienna flayed the injustices of the Versailles treaty and called it a "peace of suffering." Bishop Waitz of Innsbrueck dwelt on the sufferings of his people in the south Tyrol.

Claims Lincoln for World.

In the afternoon the visiting prelates visited the tomb of Lincoln, where the Austrian prelate and Cardinals Piffl and Von Faulhaber laid wreaths on the tomb. The occasion was a pilgrimage of the German-American Catholic verein to the shrine. In an address, Msgr. Seipel claimed Lincoln for all the world.

His message to German-Americans and to all Americans was brief, but big with the inspiration which guided the life and deeds of our martyred President. It was a message to all who live in this land to remain true to ideals for which Abraham Lincoln gave his life—the ideal of a united nation, and the ideal of American patriotism.

Dr. Seipl's Address.

"Americans," he said, "not Germans, not Austrian, or German-Americans, but Americans: As I, coming from the heart of Europe, reached American soil, my first pilgrimage was to the broad reaches of the Potomac, where stand the house and grave of Washington. Today again I have seen the tomb of a great man and have placed a wreath on the grave of Abraham Lincoln to honor him as that greatest of Americans, who lives not only in your hearts, but in the hearts of Europe. Greater than these memorials is the realization of the ideals which they represented.

"When we return to our own land, we will tell our people that it is untrue that Americans busy themselves only with material things. We will tell them that the American people pursue also the highest of ideals.

"We have found here the ideal love for a united fatherland, and broad American patriotism. Remain true to these ideals. Render unto God what is God's, and unto the country what belongs to the country, and in so doing you will honor God and the old homeland."

Loved by All Nations.

Cardinal Piffl, archbishop of Vienna, who was the first of the three distinguished visitors to speak, told how the name of Lincoln is "graved in letters of gold in the hearts of all nations."

Cardinal von Faulhaber of Munich, speaking in English, described Lincoln as the man who fought for the suppression of slavery in every form.

"We honor the grave enthusiasm of the American people for liberty, for the peace of the world and the liberty of all nations," he said.

SHOT TO DEATH

Abraham B. Lee, 3533 West 13th place, who was shot to death yesterday while he was working on auto in rear of home.

HUSBAND SLAIN; BLAME QUARREL AMONG FAMILIES

Hunt Kin of Neighbors as Killer.

Abraham B. Lee, 33 years old, was shot and fatally wounded late yesterday afternoon by a man believed to be Abe Panther of 1214 South Lawndale avenue. The shooting occurred in the back yard of the Lee home at 3533 West 13th place and the victim died on the rear porch, to which he staggered.

Panther is a brother-in-law of Abraham Gilman, a next door neighbor of the Lee family. Gilman and his wife, Lillian, who recently obtained a warrant for the arrest of the man who was slain, were taken into custody. After telling conflicting stories, the pair finally agreed that they knew Lee and Panther had been fighting.

Fought Several Days Ago.

The pair had staged a fist fight several weeks ago, the trouble developing when Lee slapped one of the Gilman children. This angered Panther, who was present, and after the exchange of fisticuffs it was reported that Panther threatened to kill the other man.

Last night Panther's home was under guard. Deputy Chief of Detectives John Stege believes that when he is apprehended the mystery of the murder will be cleared up.

Lee was a truck driver employed by the Chicago Fried Cake company, 61st street and Lafayette avenue. He was the father of four children.

Find Hammer Near Body.

Mrs. Gilman, with her children, fled from her home when the shooting occurred. Gilman was visiting a friend several blocks away at the time and the wife went to him to tell him that Panther had shot his enemy. She denied that she had seen the shot fired, however.

Under the body of Lee the police found a hammer. This he had used, apparently, in an attempt to ward off the attack of Panther.

A. F. OF L. OFFICIAL IS OPPOSED TO GENERAL STRIKE IN AMERICA

Cincinnati, O., June 26.—(AP)—Daniel J. Tobin, Indianapolis, president of the Interantional Teamsters' union, who recently returned from Europe, where he made a survey of labor conditions, said here today that he was opposed to any general strike in the United States.

"I am firmly opposed to any general strike in the United States," Tobin said. "I have been through strikes and I know what they mean. And I don't see where the general strike did the workmen any good in England. But I am not criticizing them or their methods."

Tobin, who also is treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, today made a report of his findings of general labor conditions in Europe to the executive council of the Federation of Labor, which is in session here.

Marion, Ill., June 26.—[Special.]—Marion coal miners have turned down a proposition to send $25,000 from the Illinois Miners' union to help the striking coal miners in England. All of the locals in the state are voting upon the proposition at this time. A few of the locals voted favorably.

PAPAL LEGATE LEAVING TODAY FOR ST. LOUIS

To Dedicate Cathedral Tomorrow.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Occupied nearly twenty years, but still incomplete, the St. Louis cathedral will be dedicated on Tuesday by Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate to the twenty-eighth international Eucharistic congress, in the presence of two, and perhaps four, of the foreign cardinals who were present at the congress here.

A special train leaving Chicago at 2 o'clock, daylight saving time, from the Dearborn street station tomorrow will carry Cardinals Bonzano and O'Donnell to St. Louis, where Cardinal Hayes, who leaves today, will have preceded them. Cardinals Piffl and Von Faulhaber, who attended the convention of the Central verein at Springfield yesterday, are to go to St. Louis for the services.

Diocese 100 Years Old.

At a solemn pontifical high mass in the cathedral on Wednesday, for which Cardinal Bonzano will remain, the centenary of the archdiocese will be celebrated.

Erection of the St. Louis cathedral is regarded as a monument to the efforts of Archbishop John J. Glennon. The superstructure has cost $1,000,000. The decoration of the interior, which will require several more years to complete, will cost an additional $1,000,000. That work is about half finished.

This morning Cardinal Bonzano will attend an open air mass at May's lake, near Hinsdale, on the estate of the late Francis Peabody, which is now used as a retreat place for laymen, under the auspices of the Franciscan fathers, of which order he is cardinal protector.

Archbishop Daeger of Santa Fe, the only Franciscan archprelate in this country, will sing the mass, at 11 o'clock. Father James Mertz of Loyola university will give the sermon. The Rev. Martin Strub, provincial of the order, will speak, in addition to Bishop Edward F. Hoban, Anthony Matre, K. C. S. G., and others.

Cardinal Visits Shrine.

Cardinal O'Donnell yesterday paid a visit to the shrine of St. Therese, the Little Flower, at 64th street and Dante avenue, the third cardinal to attend services at the shrine during Eucharistic congress week.

This morning the Irish primate will celebrate the 8 o'clock mass at St. Bernard's church, Stewart avenue and 66th street, as the guest of the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John F. Ryan, pastor. After the mass he will leave for South Bend, Ind., to visit Notre Dame university.

MYSTERY IN CHILD SLAYING.

Laporte, Ind., June 26.—[Special.]—Rosie Maglio, 13, was mysteriously murdered here this evening while walking on the street with her five year old sister, Helen. Police so far found no witness to the tragedy. She was shot at close range, her dress being scorched and a bullet piercing her heart.

COSMANO LOSES LAST TRICK TO STAY IN U. S.

Deportation at Once Faces Murphy Pal.

Vincenzo Cosmano, once rated by Big Tim Murphy as "the 21 jewel wop," yesterday lost what was said to be his last chance to evade deportation to Italy when Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe refused to interfere with the edict of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis ordering forthwith shipment of Cosmano to his native land.

Cosmano, who was Big Tim's chief lieutenant in the $396,000 Dearborn station mail robbery and other episodes, was released from Leavenworth penitentiary with Murphy last March after a deportation warrant had been lodged at the institution and he had furnished $5,000 bond.

Seized in Court.

W. J. Coyne, the new immigration director here, set yesterday as the day Cosmano was to start for Europe. Later his decision was supported by the ruling of Secretary Davis.

After he had refused to intervene, Judge Cliffe ordered United States Deputy Marshal John J. Oros to rearrest Cosmano, then in his courtroom. New bonds were set at $20,000. Cosmano was remanded to the Cook county jail while attorneys were to decide before tomorrow what remains for them to do to keep Cosmano in this country.

Once Fled to Italy.

While Cosmano was at liberty under $115,000 bonds in 1922 pending his appeal in the mail robbery case, he fled to Messini, Italy. After he had been there for some weeks he sent word to federal officials that he would rather be in prison in the United States than a free man in Italy. Carrying out the sentiment, he returned to Chicago and surrendered.

Cosmano, although a resident of this country for many years, had never become a citizen. He would not have been subject to deportation proceedings, however, had he not taken his post-conviction excursion to Italy, having been in this country continuously for more than five years before his conviction.

CAMP BEMIS TO OPEN TOMORROW WITH CEREMONY

Speeches, music and greetings are expected tomorrow at the opening of Camp Bemis, on Wolf road near Ogden avenue, it was announced yesterday by President Anton Cermak of the county board. The camp is named in honor of Mrs. E. W. Bemis, a county commissioner. Mr. Cermak, Mrs. Bemis and other officials will be at Western Springs Monday to welcome public school children who will attend the camp. The outing is to last ten days.

RICH MAN FOUND DAZED IN STREET; PUT IN HOSPITAL

David Walsh, 70 year old wealthy real estate owner, was taken to the Psychopathic hospital yesterday by Chicago avenue police when he was found wandering on streets of the near north side in a dazed condition. Until two weeks ago he had lived at 1832 Warren avenue.

At the station police found receipts in his pocket from the West Englewood State bank. There officials said he was the possessor of $80,000 worth of good real estate bonds, $10,000 of which he had purchased but three weeks ago.

Questioned, Walsh said he had made all his money in real estate, starting as a laborer in the city water department. A brother and sister live near Boston, he said.

COL. ROOSEVELT WILL ADDRESS NEGRO MEETING

Col. Theodore Roosevelt is to be the principal speaker tomorrow night at a meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to be held in Pilgrim Baptist church, 23d street and Indiana avenue.

Attorney Clarence Darrow will address a massmeeting in connection with the convention of the association at the Auditorium theater at 3 p. m. today.

The organization's object is to obtain complete equality for the colored race by means of the ballot. On Tuesday the convention will close with a massmeeting in the Pilgrim church.

G. O. P. Nominees Guests Today at Picnic, Outing

Republican nominees will be the guests today of the Eighth Ward National Republican club [Deneen group] at a picnic at Swallows Cliff, Palos park forest preserve. About $2,000 in prizes will be given away in thirty athletic contests. There will be a baseball game and refreshments. M. J. Connelly is in charge of the program.

AS FOR CLIMATE, THIS IS WORLD'S HEALTHIEST CITY

Chicago is the healthiest large city in the civilized world, according to official statistics from the governments of four continents, Europe, Asia, and the Americas.

For the second consecutive year, the city's clear supremacy as a safe place in which to live and rear a family was proved yesterday when comparative death rate figures for 1925 were revealed by the department of health.

The ranking of world cities showing the number of deaths per thousand population, is as follows:

Chicago	11.5	Buenos Aires	13.7
Berlin	11.7	Paris	14.7
New York City	12.2	Bombay	25.4
Vienna	12.9	Calcutta	32.7
Philadelphia	13.2

In order to verify the accuracy of the death rates, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, who compiled the report, wrote directly to the chief health officers of the various countries.

The British commissioner of health was unable to furnish statistics on the London death rate, but Dr. Bundesen pointed out that Chicago led the great English city in 1924.

Figures Show Chicago's Rise.

Although last year was the first time the tabulation was made in this manner, unofficial figures for previous years show the steady rise of Chicago to its present health leadership. A decade ago the city ranked far down the list.

The showing made in the last two years Dr. Bundesen attributes to the following principal factors:

1. General health education and cooperation by the mayor, civic bodies, and the general public.
2. Strict regulations on quarantines and other preventive measures to check disease.
3. Abatement of the smoke evil.
4. Reduction of infant mortality through pre-natal clinics and other baby welfare work.
5. Correction of defects in school children.
6. Safe water, food, and milk supplies, good climate, adequate sewage disposal, and improved housing conditions.

In a report supplementing the health comparisons the commissioner asserted that probably the greatest single factor that keeps up Chicago's record is its steady reduction in baby deaths.

"Chicago is proud of its 1925 infant mortality rate, 74.7 deaths per thousand births, the lowest the city has ever had," he said.

"Chicago rapidly is becoming the medical center of the western hemisphere," Dr. Bundesen added. "Its physicians stand preëminent in their field and are invaluable in conserving health. The Chicago Medical society, with its 4,000 members, deserves special commendation for its coöperation with the health department.

"Our weather at all seasons has a deserved reputation for healthfulness. We have just the right mean temperature and moisture to stimulate active outdoor life. This means building up resistance to sickness, preventing colds and especially, less pneumonia. The lake is a permanent source of fresh air at all seasons.

"To live in Chicago is a safeguard. It is a form of life insurance. But it has certain advantages over insurance since it costs nothing extra and every one benefits during his own life time."

Paul Jerkusky fell asleep with a lighted cigaret in his mouth and set fire to his employer's junk shop at 1034 West Lake street. Yesterday he was fined $3 for his carelessness.

$300,000 SUITS NOW CLIMAX TO DILWORTH CASE

Remarks attributed to Miss Mildred Dilworth of Vermont, Ill., that her brother, Edward K. Dilworth, wealthy bachelor, did not die a natural death and her request for an inquest brought four damage suits yesterday for a total of $300,000.

Irving Reis and his wife, Gertrude, of 954 Wilson avenue, with whom Dilworth was living at time of his last illness, are the plaintiffs. In addition to Miss Dilworth, the Illinios Merchants Trust company, as administrator for Dilworth's $700,000 estate, and W. C. Dannenberg, a private detective, are named as defendants.

Two of the suits for $100,000 each, filed in Circuit court, are directed against Miss Dilworth and her counsel, Ralph F. Potter, and charge slander. The other two, for $50,000, each are directed against Miss Dilworth, Dannenberg and the bank, and were filed in Superior court. They are to recover damages for a raid on the Reis home after Dilworth died.

GARAGE ATTENDANT ROBBED.

Sam Barchasesky, 1101 Central Park avenue, a garage attendant, was bound and gagged by four men yesterday. They took $26 from him.

ADVENTURE.

The war was all the adventure the most adventurous wanted and nearly all the adventurers knew that they would exchange it for the peace of office, field and fireside. It offered exploration of uncharted fields of danger. It is over. Life for most of humanity has gone back to its accustomed hazards, incidents of making a living or of just living. They are not inconsiderable, but they are not much considered, being accustomed.

For a certain type the thrill of deliberately encountered hazard or hardship is required for full living. Theodore Roosevelt was of this type and his sons have inherited it. The country has just welcomed back Lieutenant Commander Richard Byrd and his pilot, Floyd G. Bennett who succeeded in the flight to the north pole ahead of the Norge. Achievement in the face of difficulty and danger has been a bright light to adventurous men and they have opened up the world.

There are fewer places which, unknown, can be faced by an adventurer. They began getting fewer after Columbus, Da Gama, Cabot and the great captains had sailed into unknown seas. The poles have been visited by sleds and airships. Mount Everest has refused thus far to allow an explorer to its top, but explorers will get there.

Is there a point of exhaustion for adventure? Probably yes and no. The exploring scientist has centuries to uncover by going underground. For such a scientist as William Beebe life is a continual adventure. The finding of new places on the surface of the earth and the approach to them by new methods have their limitations but there is always adventure in a small boat in the sea or in a struggle through the jungle.

Adventure is a safety valve for hardihood. It is another moral equivalent of war.

ALL ABOUT ABYSSINIA.

Great Britain and Italy have decided, according to dispatches from John Steele, THE TRIBUNE'S London correspondent, to partition Abyssinia. The fact that Abyssinia is an independent member of the league of nations is to make no difference. Abyssinia is a slave holding kingdom; and this fact, it is reported, is to be relied on to excuse European interference.

The division of Abyssinia will, if the scheme goes through, give to Italy the southern and eastern portions of the kingdom. Great Britain will cede British Somaliland and an attempt will be made to persuade France to give up French Somaliland. Italy, then, will have a huge block of territory on Africa's east coast. Great Britain, for its part, will take the north and eastern portions of Abyssinia, thus aggrandizing British power in the Sudan and the upper reaches of the Nile.

Only one barrier to this carefully hatched plan remains. What will Abyssinia say to this calm program of usurpation? We took the trouble of looking up a little concerning Abyssinia. We have our doubts. From what we have been able to gather, the Abyssinian is a somewhat stiff necked individual.

In the first place, the Abyssinians are the only tinted people, with the exception of the Japanese, who have ever soundly whipped a first class European power. The Abyssinians did it in 1896 when they wiped out an invading Italian force of 22,000 men.

But to begin with fundamentals.

The Abyssinians themselves call their kingdom Ethiopia. For it is the ancient Ethiopia of Bible days. The population numbers about 8,000,000. A majority of the inhabitants are Christians, adherents of the Coptic sect. The true Abyssinian, though dark skinned, is not a Negro. He is not Hamitic, but Semitic.

Abyssinia retains a feudal system of government and it is difficult to ascertain its military strength. Estimates of its potential armed power vary between 100,000 and 500,000 men. From childhood every Abyssinian boy is taught the use of spear and rifle. No Abyssinian moves abroad without his full complement of weapons. A majority of the feudal soldiery are mounted. It is, moreover, the habit of the Abyssinian to feed on raw meat, such fare being considered the proper menu for a fighting man.

Abyssinian officials distinguish themselves by collars and headdresses made from lions' manes. For the lion and Abyssinia are closely linked by tradition and present custom. Lions, sometimes loose, sometimes caged, guard the portals and the thrones of Abyssinian royalty, as might dogs in other countries. When an Abyssinian prince wishes to make a present to some foreign notable he sends, not a wrist watch or a gold cigaret case, but a lion—and zebras to lesser notables.

Abyssinian justice is based on the old Mosaic code, "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." A robber is punished by having hand or foot chopped off, usually by the local butcher. A man convicted of murder, or even involuntary manslaughter, is hanged.

The royal house of Abyssinia claims to be descended directly from the union of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. The present ruler of Abyssinia, the Queen of Kings, the Elect of God, and the Conquering Lion of Judah, is the Empress Zauditu, daughter of the great King Menelik, who died in 1913. The real power, however, is the regent and heir to the throne, Ras Taffari Makonnen, Menelik's grandson. Menelik left his crown to another grandson, Lij Yasu, but this dissipated young ruler was overthrown in 1916 when his people, led by Ras Taffari, learned that he had taken up Mohammedanism and was about to place the kingdom under Mussulman rule.

For many centuries the Abyssinians have been independent. Between the seventh and the sixteenth centuries they were constantly fighting the Mohammedan invasion from the north. They called Portugal to their aid in this latter century, but the Jesuit priests aroused antagonism by attempting to overthrow the Coptic faith. The result was the ejection of the Portuguese between 1630 and 1640. King Theodore of Abyssinia in 1864 threw certain British envoys into prison. Sir Robert Napier headed 16,000 men in 1868 and succeeded in capturing Theodore's capital, but did not remain. Italy first established herself along the Red sea in 1885; she kept a constant pressure inland. King Menelik ascended the throne of Abyssinia in 1889, and made a treaty with the Italians, but he broke this shortly afterward, when Italy sought to make her influence more certain by sending in an army. At the battle of Adowa, Menelik, with 100,000 men, outgeneraled the Italian leaders, pounced on the invaders and cut them to pieces. The Italian domination was definitely ended.

After looking up this little summary of Abyssinian history, we repeat, we have our doubts. Lions, raw meat, descendants of Solomon, Christians for sixteen centuries, Semites, rifles, feudal retainers, a victory over Italy 30 years ago, a leader such as Ras Taffari, educated in Europe, a progressive, indomitably opposed to foreign interference. We have our doubts about the partition of Abyssinia.

MAN AND THE MACHINE IN PROHIBITION.

A business man in Goshen, Ind., sends in an article on prohibition and business, circulated by a business survey and investment guide. This attributes economic improvement and industrial soundness to the sobriety prevailing under prohibition, to the increased productivity of the steady workman whose blue Monday has been banished by law. The manufacturer asks a reply from THE TRIBUNE.

There are two principal grounds on which people demand or defend prohibition. One is that of public morals. The other that of economics. Of the two that of morality is the higher ground. THE TRIBUNE is convinced that in the larger view of citizenship and the future of an intelligent, self-disciplined nation the cause of morality is not advanced by a law substituting repressive statute for conscience and making the government the custodian of the citizen's habits.

We do not know what effect prohibition has had upon industry. Few people who examine it try to find out. They have a conclusion. They seek facts to support it. In the complex of factors underlying American prosperity many men competent to analyze causes might have various explanations and weight might be placed on one element or many of them. There is no proof that workmen who want forbidden beverages do not get them, but such incentive as the open saloon door offered, particularly on pay day, is gone, to the regret of no sensible person.

The economic justification of prohibition is low ground. It asserts that personal habits and individual wishes may be governed or denied by law in order that the factory product may be higher. It hitches the personal freedom of the individual to the efficiency of the machine. It says that in a free country the requirements of the machine shall indicate the liberty of the individual.

That was the justification of slavery and serfdom. It may have been economically wrong in both cases but it was the basis of both. We do not know that prohibition has had any effect on production or what effect it has had, but we deny that a country has the right to increase the output of its industries by the repression of its citizens' liberties. An individual employer may stipulate, if he can get by with it with organized labor, who shall work for him, but the government of a free country may not tell its citizens that they must refrain from alcoholic beverages in order that the machinery of the country may be speeded up to produce more goods.

A government following that line of repression for that purpose has no reason for stopping there. It could enforce the curfew and make the workers go to bed at 8 or 9 o'clock to insure a clear head and steady hands in the morning. It could regulate diet and amusements and the use of spare time and prescribe everything that a logical intelligence found produced the best work.

Then it would have no reason for keeping its hands off the employers who benefited from this scheme. It could attempt to tune them into better relations to their business and tune their property into the general requirements of the country. There is nothing logically to prevent the regulation of one man's property if it is conceded sound state policy to regulate another man's habits for the production of that property. If one man is to be reduced into automatic relationship to a machine by law the man who employs him may be put in the same relationship.

That was the idea the Russian bolos originally had. They thought if they cut off a great many heads with brains the surviving heads could be made to use their brains for the benefit of their exploiters.

Editorial of the Day

THE CONFLICT OF PEOPLES.

[Illinois State Register, Springfield.]

Two sizeable wars have been concluded within the last few weeks. The Riffs have been subdued in northern Africa and the Druses revolt in Palestine has been suppressed.

In neither conflict has anything been gained. The losses, although infinitesimal compared with the world war, have been considerable in contrast with previous conflicts. Thousands of lives have been sacrificed and much property destroyed one way or another.

Civilization will evade responsibility for both affairs. It will charge that the semi-barbaric tribes of the countries affected were responsible. In the case of the Riffs this may be true.

But in the case of the Druses it will ever be a question whether the action of the French in maintaining their mandate over the affected territory was not responsible. Tales of oppression and worse have come from the Druses camps.

When the representatives of civilized nations treat the so-called barbarians more cruelly than they treat each other it is not to be wondered that they revolt. Even in military domination the golden rule would go a long way toward maintenance of world peace.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH REALISTS AND THE SO-CALLED INTELLECTUALS?

BY THE REV. C. F. DONOVAN,

The average reader of fiction is inclined to marvel at the tendency of certain authors and publishers to flood the market with articles and books, the principal claim of which rests on what is called realism. Since the world war this tendency has been especially marked, although not unknown previously. The greater the thrill, the more popular the book and the greater the financial success, the more wondrous the merit, according to the opinion of the realistic school of writers and their followers. In the judgment of self-styled intellectuals a realist is a writer who can prove through all his work there is no sunshine in the world, no decency or honor in mankind, no purity and no loveliness in life. There is no plant that has not rottenness in it and no condition in life that satisfies. Until a writer has written a novel utterly without a ray of light, or a breath of fragrance, he does not become a realist in any genuine sense.

The output of this school is gloom, horror and viciousness unrelieved. In vain will a reader seek in the books of such authors anything to help mankind to the belief the world is not utterly bad. Like the old Spanish philosopher who donned blue glasses that distorted his vision, such a man has taught his eyes to see the pools in the alley rather than the fountains in the park; taught his ears to catch the curses of the brothel rather than the pure speech of the innocent; taught his soul to respond to the shameful rather than to the beautiful.

The matter with realism is that it is not real but distorted. And the trouble with the intellectuals is they lack heart and spiritual discernment. If life were only such as they picture it civilization would long ago have given up in despair.

If the sky were always overhung with black clouds and never revealed the glory of the stars and if there never were a rosy dawn nor the high tide of noon nor a golden sunset, neither day nor night could be described as it really is. Realists only picture the midnight. A true artist describes also the glorious day. The realist enlarges upon the mistakes of the few, while he ignores the big things done for humanity by the many.

It was my experience to begin my career before being educated for the priesthood in a newspaper office of a city daily. I began as a cub reporter and ended as a city editor. I learned by that experience that it was the unusual that found its way into the columns of the press and the criminal and sordid were displayed on the front page and received the streamer headline. Ten thousand men and women might pursue the daily walks of life happily with their families and maintain peace with their neighbors and no mention was made of their doings. Let a husband strike his wife with an ax or run away with another man's wife, pictures and glaring headlines would tell the story. So in national life wars, defalcations, intrigues and betrayals take precedence over the quiet constructive work of labor and of statesmanship. The newspaper, however, prints much that is good and wholesome while the authors of realism act as though these abnormalities are the only real life while the more abundant creation of the true, the useful and the beautiful are unworthy of notice. Intellectuals congratulate themselves when they see an automobile wreck and care nothing for the stream of ten thousand cars moving swiftly and safely over the boulevard pavement. If a person is sick, sinning, helpless or suffering, this is realism. But if one is pulsating with health, moral, strong and buoyant, such a life lacks interest. Realists and intellectuals are too much like the vulture. They feed on carrion and circle above their prey with their eyes fixed on the ground and not on the blue sky above nor the green foliage about them.

That many of the writers of the school referred to have skill in the use of language cannot be denied. They even rise to the heights of genius in descriptive powers but their failure lies in their attention to only one side of life and that the narrowest. The distress of having a few great though mistaken leaders lies in a horde of cheap imitators. One might be justified in preferring a change from the Victorian period of literature as wonderful and worthy as that period was, but this does not justify the throwing over of all the good that has come from our heritage of the past. Because styles change is no reason for the complete rejection of all the sweetness and romance of those earlier days. The trouble with realists and intellectuals is that they ignore God and his promises for a better future for mankind. They rob men of their hope and hence of their motive for heroism.

Let me quote from two Roman Catholic poets, both of whom saw the beautiful things of life. I refer to Joyce Kilmer, who gave his life in heroic service for his country in the world war, and to Frederick W. Faber, whose hymns are in every church hymnbook because they express the universal desires of Christians.

Kilmer's poem on "Trees" is well known.

"I think I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks to God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair,
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

The verse I would quote from Faber is:

"There's a wideness in God's mercy,
Like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in His justice
Which is more than liberty."

Kindness, mercy, praying find no place in the language of realists and intellectuals but in God's world and in our world they find a first place.

Realists constantly misrepresent religion and sometimes oppose and ridicule it as having become outgrown. One might as well try to ridicule hunger for food, or thirst for water, for neither of these physical needs are more real or insistent than the hunger for God or thirst for the water of life. Good and orderly government seems also to be under their ban. The only honor they seem to think is worth writing about is that mythical honor which exalts the honor among thieves. True realism ought to view life as a circle not as a broken segment.

THE CAUTIOUS FARMER.

Some time ago a man was charged with shooting a number of pigeons, the property of a farmer. In giving his evidence the farmer was exceedingly careful, even nervous, and the attorney for the defense endeavored to frighten him.

"Now," the lawyer remarked, "are you prepared to swear that this man shot your pigeons?"

"I didn't say he shoôt 'em," was the reply. "I said I suspected him o' doing it."

"Ah, now we're coming to it. What made you suspect that man?"

"Well, firstly, I caught him on my land wi' a gun. Secondly, I heerd a gun go off an' saw some pigeons fall. Thirdly, I foun' four o' my pigeons in his pocket—and I don't think them birds flew there and committed suicide."—Tulsa [Okla.] World.

ROOM FOR THE MELON.

"Why didn't you put this watermelon in the icebox as I told you, Mary?"

"I did, mum."

"But it isn't cold."

"No, mum. How could it be? I had to take out the ice to get it in."—Pathfinder.

SH-H-H.

"Daughter, does your mother know you're dressed in that scanty bathing suit?"

"No, and for heaven's sake don't tell her, dad; it belongs to her."—Detroit Free Press.

DRESSING WOUNDS.

THIS is the method used by the surgeons of the Pullman company in treating cuts and ordinary wounds, according to Dr. R. J. Demotte. The skin around the wound is cleaned with benzine or alcohol. If it is a rather large wound, tincture of iodine is painted on the skin. No iodine is put into the wound itself. The wound is then opened wide with forceps. The surfaces are sponged with small gauze sponges saturated with 50 per cent alcohol or boric solution or sterile water. Strong alcohol is not used. The sponging must be done gently. If there are pockets in the wound that cannot be readily reached in this way, they are cleaned by means of a little cotton on a toothpick or applicator. The cotton is saturated with sterile water or alcohol.

If the wound has shreds or ragged edges and walls, these are trimmed smooth with scissors. The wound is then loosely closed either by sutures or by adhesive strips. If it is deep and irregular, a small strip of cellosilk is kept in the wound as a drain for a day or two. The whole is then loosely covered with a sterile, warm, wet dressing. This is moistened with hot water every two or three hours. Sometimes hot towels are kept over bad wounds for two or three days.

In this treatment the wound itself is not sterilized by any chemical antiseptic. The weak alcohol or boric acid solutions are cleansing agents and not disinfectants. Using iodine as an antiseptic on the nearby skin does no good. Using it on the bruised tissues of the wound does harm. The wound itself is disinfected by the blood and serum which oozes into it and which washes it out. The warm, moist dressings keep plenty of blood in the nearby tissues and keep up the oozing which cleans and purifies the wound.

Demotte says the Carrel-Dakin method of wound treatment which was so much used during the war did good because the chemicals kept the wounds oozing. The ooze, and not the chemicals, disinfected the wound.

It will be remembered that during the war the salt treatment of wounds became popular. It was not claimed that the salt in the wound sterilized it. The contention was that it kept up an oozing and, in that way, sterilization was brought about.

In an article in Manufacturers' News on "First Aid or Worst," Capt. R. G. Fisher tells of his experience in inspecting first aid cabinets in manufacturing plants. Most of them contain iodine, but in 99 per cent of the cabinets the iodine is black and spoiled. He sometimes finds mercurochrome which has spoiled. More often than not the chemicals in these cabinets are not fit to use.

The Pullman method avoids that danger by avoiding chemicals. The claim is that the nature method of disinfection is better than the chemical method, even when chemicals are at their best.

SUNSHINE FOR PLEURISY.

E. C. K. writes: 1. I had an attack of pleurisy in November and the doctor ordered me to take cod liver oil. Is it necessary to keep on taking it during the summer months?

2. I also have been troubled with bronchitis for the last five years. Does cod liver oil help it any?

REPLY.

1. Plenty of sunlight is better than cod liver oil.
2. It ought to help some.

ANTS SHUN KEROSENE.

H. W. N. writes: Some years ago we were bothered with very tiny ants in our kitchen sink. After trying several drug store preparations without result, we wiped the sink with a cloth dipped in kerosene and the ants vanished at once.

THREE KINDS OF SEARCH.

Chicago, June 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am interested in patents and trade marks. I should like to know the meaning of a preliminary search, a validity search, and an infringement search. A. C. G.

"Preliminary search" is commonly used to describe an investigation for the purpose of determining whether it is worth while to file an application. A validity search is one to determine whether the patent is void for any of the various causes which may render it void, including anticipation. An infringement search is to determine whether manufacture would involve infringement on other valid patents.

OLD MODEL CAR.

Chicago, June 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought a car in 1924 and the salesman who sold it to me told me it was a 1924 model. When I tried to sell the car later I discovered it was a 1923 model. Could I sue the manufacturers for letting their representative misrepresent the sale like that? G.

Sec. 14 of the sales act provides that where goods are sold by description there is an implied warranty that they shall comply with the description.

Sec. 15 [3] provides that if the buyer has examined, there is no implied warranty as regards defects which such examination ought to have revealed.

It is difficult to see how the date is material except for possible bearing on how badly the car is worn, or how much it differs in design from present models, both of which are points on which, under Sec. 15 [3] the buyer should inform himself if the sale is by inspection as distinguished from by description.

If there is an express warranty, sale of a different model would be a breach. 128 S. E. 389. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ESTATE OF MARRIED COUSINS.

Chicago, June 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If two first cousins go from the state of Illinois and marry and live outside the state, and then return to Illinois, could the husband sell any of his real estate without the wife's signature?

2. Could he do so if they resided first for a year in the state in which they are married?

3. Would her marriage name be legal on her own transactions if they return to Illinois to live immediately after they are married? INTERESTED.

1. Yes, in the sense that if the facts could be proved they would invalidate the marriage but a purchaser of real estate would insist upon the facts appearing on record.
2. This would not alter the case.
3. Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 27, 1861.

WASHINGTON.—A man just returned from a secret service tour of the south says the strength of the rebel forces is overrated, and that their condition is wretched. He describes the larger portion as lousy, ragged, ill fed, indifferently armed, and without any apparent discipline. He laughs at the fears of alarmists here of an attack by Gen. Beauregard.

WASHINGTON.—Columbia college of New York has conferred the degree LL. D. on President Lincoln.

SPRINGFIELD.—Col. U. S. Grant has obtained permission to march his command, when he moves from Camp Yates, to Quincy. The health of the men at Camp Yates is not good, owing to the water, the well for the supply of which lies over or near a coal seam.

WASHINGTON.—Maj. Gen. Dix has been positively assigned to the command of the army of invasion. He will, however, only be nominally commander in chief, as Gen. McDowell will in reality direct the movements of the army. Although a forward movement was positively promised for this week, it now looks as if nothing would be done until after congress meets next week. The demoralizing effect of this delay on the troops is very great.

WILLIAMSPORT.—It is said that Gen. Jackson's rebel force has been increased to 5,000 and that Gen. Johnston, with a rear guard force of 10,000, is encamped within four miles of Martinsburg, having left Winchester four days ago. From recent movements of Gen. Patterson's federal troops it is evident that he expects to strike or receive a heavy blow within a short time.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 27, 1901.

CHICAGO.—Under a bombardment of eggs, vegetables, and stout sticks, four disciples of John Alexander Dowie were chased out of Evanston by a crowd of 700 angry citizens when the quartet attempted to spread the doctrines of Elijah II. at an open air meeting. Elder H. A. Nichols was plastered from head to foot with eggs and Elder E. F. Dahms was badly battered. They caught a passing electric car and escaped. It was the noisiest demonstration quiet Evanston has known for years.

ST. JOHNS, N. B.—The big ocean steamer Lusitania struck on the rocks at Seal Cove, twelve miles north of Cape Race, and probably is a total loss. Panic seized the 500 passengers, mostly emigrants, when the ship struck, and the crew had difficulty in getting them to shore. However, all were saved.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—James Lawrence Houghteling of Chicago, founder of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, was awarded the honorary degree of master of arts by Yale university for his devotion to high principles and the altruistic good he had done.

PERU, Ind.—The casualty list in the wreck of the Wabash fast train, which ran into a washout at Cass Station, west of here, totals thirteen dead and thirty injured.

CHICAGO.—Mayor Harrison is hoping the city council will adjourn next Monday for the summer so he can hurry to Huron Mountain, Mich., for his vacation. He is aggrieved by the reported larceny by former Mayor Hempstead Washburne of a luxuriant crop of mint from the mayor's garden at Huron Mountain. "What can a Kentucky gentleman do without mint?" is the mayor's wail.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 27, 1916.

MEXICO CITY.—It is reported that First Chief Carranza's reply to President Wilson's ultimatum will be a refusal to release the American prisoners taken in the fight at Carrizal. In a statement issued by the Mexican foreign office there is the phrase: "War seems inevitable."

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson stated to one of his advisers that Carranza must comply at once with the demand for the release of the American prisoners and repudiate Trevino's orders to oppose movements of the American troops before there can be any prospect of a peaceful settlement between the United States and Mexico. After one of the most stirring debates in a decade the senate passed the Hay resolution, authorizing the President to draft the national guard into the federal service for such use as he may care to put it to to meet the situation.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Battery F of the Illinois Field artillery is already mustered into the federal service and ready to start for the border. Members of Battery C, the "millionaire battery," are staying up all night to muster in. Eighteen members of the battery asked to be left behind and their request was granted, but their names were not given out. Among those who signed up for service were the following: Lieut. Noble B. Judah, Francis Peabody Butler Carl D Matz, Albert D. Farwell of Lake Forest, N. S. Davis III., John S. Miller Jr., J. M. Dickinson Jr., Garrard Winston, Robert Foote Hall, Joseph Medill Patterson, L. Houghteling Jr. of Winnetka, Wheaton W. Augur, Donald Defrees, and Richard S. Tuthill Jr. One irreverent top sergeant made this remark about Battery C.: "If a shrapnel shell ever lands in that battery, the Probate court will have a hell of a time for the next five years."

THE MORALITY OF WOMEN.

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 20.—THE TRIBUNE'S Inquiring Reporter found that the women questioned didn't like the decision planting three rapists in the pen for the respectable sum of thirteen years each. My inquiry among personal female acquaintances elicited the same views. All of which only goes to prove that Alexander Pope knew his stuff when he said that every woman is at heart a rake. And the bozo who first detected and affirmed the essential identity of the Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady merits equal praise.

This ought to help explode the unmitigated fallacy that women are "conservers of morality." Women are born enemies of morality. Every woman secretly longs for some gorilla brained male to come along and swat her on the bean and drag her into his den. Naturally they feel sympathy and forgiveness for the sadistic brutes who personify or approximate their "ideal." This will be a hell of a world when the preservation and perpetuation of individual and social morality is left to the female sex. Put women on the juries and not one rapist or sex degenerate in ten thousand would ever get his deserts. Women are "moral" through fear and convention, and for no other reason. Whatever the veneer of culture or morality, instinctively they worship the hair brained brute with apelike strength and the morals of a satyr.

SAM ELLISON.

HAD HE BEEN JUDGE.

Chicago, June 21.—I am sorry to see that in your editorial today on the De Kalb matter you have taken a great plunge downward from your usual clear headed manner. There is no such thing as rape unless the victim is first made helpless from either brutality, drugs, or liquor. The smallest woman can successfully defeat the strongest man. This fact has been demonstrated many times. Were I the trial judge on that case, I would have given the boys about two years each and promptly ordered the arrest of the girl and given her the same. I am 64 years old—44 in Chicago—and have raised and educated a family of girls, all of whom are happily married.

COMMON SENSE.

DISGUSTED.

Chicago, June 19.—I, too, was disgusted to read what some of Chicago's women said in answer to the reporter's question about the three young men in the Westervelt case. One cannot help but draw their own conclusions as to the morals of women who are so quick to defend men of that type. I am sure the majority of our women believe a life sentence would not be a day too long to be given such beasts as those boys proved to be.

MRS. EVELYN DOWNS.

AFTER CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

Chicago, June 18.—Let's investigate the income not only of the dry associations lobbying in the senate and house but the method and source of income of all house and senate members. Especially in the case of lawyer members let us see the names of the firms that hand the law firms of our representatives fat fees before and after holding office. Perhaps we would then find why politicians are willing to spend two million dollars for forty thousand of salary; also how small politicians can live far beyond the salary limits of their offices.

G. M. GRIDLEY.

HIGHWAY BANDITRY.

Chicago, June 20.—Your Sunday editorial of today, "Legalized Banditry on the Highways," will win you at least a hundred thousand silent friends who patiently have looked in vain for just such leadership as you display. While driving through Niles, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, I was legally defrauded and robbed of $15. The charge against me was that I dared to turn out to the left of the road and continue to drive south rather than stay in line with hundreds behind me and wait until a fellow motorist repaired his stalled motor, who was two cars ahead of me. FRANK WILLENS.

PROMOTING CIVIC SPIRIT.

Chicago, June 19.—Your editorial, "We Need More Straighteners," is interesting, timely, and points to an excellent method of solution of some of our civic problems. However, I think you have overlooked a most important point. This is the reawakening of a dormant civic consciousness. Does it not seem likely that Mayor Dever has hit upon a method which may at once reawaken the Chicago civic spirit of the eighties and nineties and also induce better feeling among all classes? In the river straightening project the distinguished gentlemen of the mayor's committee performed a distinct public service. There was a definite civic appeal to their employment, and without regard to personal interest they responded intelligently and cheerfully.

This is no reflection upon aldermen. Every business board of directors employs specialists and technical men for the solution of technical and special problems.

Therefore, we have at once the added realization of civic responsibility upon all men of affairs and a vivid illustration to the masses generally that under proper conditions business leaders of a community can be altruistic and unselfish.

The citizens' committee method of solving such problems as these, therefore, seems not only the most effective one available, in so far as the problems themselves are concerned, but also desirable in stimulating civic spirit and promoting better feeling among all classes. FRANK EMERY.

SPECIAL DELIVERY.

Chicago, June 24.—An article appears in THE TRIBUNE of June 11 in the "Voice of the People" column purported to be written by Charles A. Beard, in which criticism was offered in connection with the special delivery service, particular reference being made to a letter received by Mr. Beard on June 7 which was postmarked May 27. The records of this office as to the particular letter in question indicate that delivery was made at 1:45 p. m. on May 27, and the claim, therefore, of the addressee as indicated in the newspaper article is erroneous.

ARTHUR C. LUDDEN,
Postmaster.

A COURTEOUS CONCLUSION.

Chicago, June 22. — Gerald Gaylord overlooked entirely the point I wish to make, and that was, discrimination. The Jewish teachers are paid for certain of their own religious holidays and I see no valid reason for refusing the same privilege to the Roman Catholic teachers, especially under these unusual circumstances. I sympathize sincerely, however, with Mr. Gaylord for the very great inconvenience he has to suffer by the coming to our city of these world famous visitors. MARY A. KENOS.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS.

Evanston, Ill., June 17.—I would like to say a word in appreciation of the delightful page in your Sunday edition headed "Maiden Meditations." In my opinion it is one of the cleverest and most enjoyable features in the whole paper. Miss Moore has a very keen insight into the foibles and the problems of the modern woman and a most felicitous way of expressing them. I for one enjoy the sparkling wit and the clever turns of phrase in her little rhymes. I hope she will keep it up indefinitely.

J. S. GEORGE.

A DIRTY ALLEY.

Chicago, June 24.—I am writing to inquire if something cannot be done to get our alley in a sanitary condition. This alley is located on the south side of Armitage avenue, between Kilpatrick and 46th street (Chicago and Northwestern tracks). Nothing has been done to keep this alley in any kind of condition at all for exactly one year. Myself and neighbors have automobiles on which we pay license fees, and naturally we expect our alleys to be in some condition so that we may enter our different garages.

MANON LESCAUT OPENS RAVINIA OPERA SEASON

Speeches Also Are Part of the Program.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

If Ravinia were Europe, its summer season would be a festival so famous that even Abd-el Krim would know about it. This was Otto H. Kahn's first remark when he came into Chicago yesterday morning. He enlarged on the idea in a speech last night.

For the first Saturday night at the opera house in the woods was not only the opening of the season, but an occasion of speech making, introductory by Mr. Eckstein, continuation by Mr. Kahn, at all times of congratulatory tribute that such an institution should be.

Praise for Everybody.

The artists, the orchestra, the stage force, all came in for words of cheer and encouragement, and even the audience was informed, possibly to its collective surprise, that it possessed far more idealism than it had ever given itself credit for having.

There was an opera as well as speech making and picture taking in its initial event. The opera was Puccini's "Manon Lescaut." With an acquaintance extending over fifteen years, "Manon Lescaut" always has been a particular favorite of mine. During that time various sorts and varieties of performances of it have come up for attention and notice, but I can think of none that had half the brightness, half the sparkle or vivacity of this one. Whenever an opening night becomes necessary, I am now quite of the opinion that it should be "Manon Lescaut" given in the way that Mr. Eckstein's company gave it at Ravinia last night.

Many Reasons for Success.

For this generally cheery effect there were many reasons.

One was the cast of principals that without doubt could not be equaled the world over, with Lucrezia Bori and Giovanni Martinelli heading them. Another was a group of smaller parts, each matching the other and fitting into the whole like the pieces of a puzzle. A third was a chorus that was an admirable model of what operatic choruses should be; a fourth was the Chicago Symphony orchestra, a wonderful organization during its symphonic duties in the winter, and just as good when it turns operatic in the summer.

Spirit Perfectly Portrayed.

Most of all was the way the youthful spirit of the piece got into the performance. It extended from Conductor Gennaro Papi on the director's stand to the girls who were visible but inaudible in the third act on their way to become American settlers. It was in the singing, in the acting, in the color of the stage pictures. In fact, one is more tempted toward incoherent excitement over the performance than matter of fact description.

It is hard to forget Miss Bori's Manon. She was a lovely object. True, she is wise in every device of the stage, but so wise that you catch yourself forgetting that she knows anything about them at all. When every note of her voice rings in your ears for hours afterward, when every gesture advances the telling of the story and is a marvel and a delight of gracefulness besides, when the psychology of the part, if operatic parts ever have psychology, and I believe this one has, is apparent even in the costumes, you are witnessing an uncommonly fine bit of art.

Another Finely Performed Rôle.

Joined with Miss Bori's Manon was Martinelli's Chevalier Des Grieux, and that was something to remember as well. The only thing in his disfavor was his makeup, which if it had been younger, say to the extent of about fifteen years, would have been that much better.

For his singing, that resonant, inspiring voice of his, and his manner of conducting himself on the stage, were as youthful as Puccini's music, and that is bubbling over with perennial youth. Then there was Desire Defrere as Lescaut, who always surprises me at Ravinia because his performances there are so much better than they are anywhere else; Louis D'Angelo, a first rate figure, as a classical elderly sport; Jose Mojica, who did three small parts with much aplomb, and Paolo Ananin, who did two with an equal amount; several others, not forgetting Ina Bourskaya, who combined knickerbockers and a good song with equal effect. If you would be advised, go to "Manon Lescaut" the next time it is announced.

SOCIETY AT OPERA

Many of the smart folk were conspicuous at the opening of the Ravinia opera season. These included Charles H. LAUDS JAZZ MUSIC

PUCCINI'S LAST OPERA SUNG BY CHICAGO STARS

BUENOS AIRES, June 26.—(AP)—Giacomo Puccini's last opera, "Turandot," which he nearly completed before his death, had its trans-Atlantic première last night here before a fashionable audience.

The leading parts fell to two members of the Chicago Opera company, Claudia Muzio, who sang the part of Princess Turandot, and Giacomo Lauro Volpi, who impersonated Calaf, the unknown prince. Rosette Pampanini sang Liu, the slave girl.

The opera, based on a Chinese legend, was conducted by Gino Marinuzzi. It will be given its première in New York at the Metropolitan next November.

Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, has arrived to conduct the German opera during the Colon season.

KAHN SAYS JAZZ AIDS IN MAKING OPERA POPULAR

New York Banker Here for Ravinia Opening.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Opera, accept it on the authority of Otto H. Kahn, New York banker and patron of the arts, is on the upcurve in America, and an important item in its growing popularity is jazz.

Mr. Kahn is perfectly definite in his statement. He says that the Wagnerian operas were popular in New York last winter, and one reason was that "The Ride of the Valkyries" was played everywhere by jazz orchestras. "All the classics have been jazzed by now," he explained, "and it has resulted in getting the people interested in hearing them in their original manner."

Here for Raviana Opening.

Incidentally, Mr. Kahn came close to making a world's record for an operatic performance. He came from New York yesterday to attend the opening performance at Ravinia, and will be on his way back today. In this reasonably extended bit of commuting, 2,000 miles in three days, he has as his guests Edward Ziegler, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Opera company, Miss Susanne Ziegler, and Earl Lewis, all of New York.

Mr. Kahn's visit here was nearly as hectic and as carefully mapped out as that of the recent princely callers. The schedule included a line of interviews, a trip to the Art institute, a matinée performance of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"—Anita Loos, the author, is one of his personal friends and the play has not yet been seen in New York—dinner at the home of Louis Eckstein in Glencoe, the opera in the evening, and a game of golf before train time today. In one of the intervals he found time to say something about opera and make the friendly gesture toward jazz narrated above.

Public Is Always Right.

"The public is always right in its support or lack of support of opera," he said. "It is absolutely right when it refuses to allow opera companies to become experimental laboratories of music. People go to opera for the kick they get out of it and for nothing else. Whether the kick comes in 'Aïda' or 'Sky Scrapers,' or where it may be, that is the thing to regard. The place for musical experiments is in the concert hall."

Marion Talley, the young Kansas City coloratura soprano, he regards highly. "There are two reasons for her success," he said. "One is that coloratura is a stunt, and people like stunts. The other is that her career, coming out of her former life into opera, is a romance, and it touches the romance in the hearts of the people.

"Marion Talley takes an attitude of almost religious fervor toward her music," Mr. Kahn said. "She really seems to regard herself as the instrument of a higher power. As a result, she is never nervous, never self-conscious, and she does not know how to sing off pitch. How she will develop later only time can tell, but just now she is one of the great talents."

ORDER OF MOOSE TO BE GUEST OF CITY THIS WEEK

Pageant of Chicago Birth Convention Feature.

It's now the turn of the Loyal Order of Moose to take possession of Chicago, entertain Chicagoans and in turn be entertained. The Moose convention starts on Thursday and is expected to bring 250,000 visitors to the city.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, director general of the order, under whose leadership it has grown to a membership of 750,000, will arrive tomorrow morning. He will be quartered in the presidential bungalow on the roof of the Hotel Sherman.

The convention will be opened formally at 9:30 a. m. Thursday with a public session at the Auditorium theater. Dr. William E. Buehler, general chairman, will preside. Mayor Dever and Gov. Small are to deliver addresses of welcome for the city and state. Secretary Davis and Congressman Henry T. Rathbone also are to speak. Supreme Dictator Albert J. Cassedy of Baltimore will then take the gavel and preside over the official session.

Pageant to Be Feature.

One of the main features of the convention will be the presentation of "The Birth of Chicago" pageant in Soldiers' field, July 1 to 7. Five hundred Chippewa, Iroquois, and Sioux Indians will take part in the spectacle, aided by 200 soldiers from Fort Sheridan and a ballet of 100 dancing girls.

A mountain will be constructed in the arena down the sides of which painted savages will ride to attack the covered wagon caravans of the early settlers. The life of the redskin before the coming of the white will be portrayed.

The Fort Dearborn massacre and the final subjugation of the powerful Indian nations will be shown. The soldiers will be used in depicting the historical struggle between the French and English troops in the great lakes region.

Ballet to Give Indian Dances.

The ballet will present interpretative dances such as the "dance of welcome," "bow and arrow dance," 'fame dance,' and other dances of the Indians of Fort Dearborn days.

The entertainment committee of the convention describes the production as follows:

"'The Birth of Chicago' is a drama. It tells the story of humanity's dreams, hopes, pathos, and endless endeavors. As Chicago has grown from a small Indian village, so have all our mighty cities. This story is that of Chicago presented to us by the Indians of the great lakes basin whose ancestors fought the ingress of the voyageurs, the early French and English fur traders, settlers, and soldiers.

"It will picture the glory and travail of conquest, the hardihood of the frontier days, the advance of civilization. It will portray in artistic detail the home life of our American fathers as they lived years ago and the tragic tale of the subjugation of the proud Ojibway Indian nation."

Another high point of the convention is to be the civic celebration and parade Monday, July 5. The fête will be held at Soldiers' field, with Secretary Davis, Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom and Rodney H. Brandon as principal speakers. The parade, in which it is expected that 25,000 members of the order will participate, will form at Chicago avenue and Michigan avenue and march south in the boulevard to the field.

Initiate 5,000 Thursday.

The supreme lodge session will occupy Thursday afternoon at the Auditorium, and that evening a class of 5,000 is to be initiated in the Coliseum, which is being specially decorated.

There are to be competitive drills by ritual teams, and band and quartet contests for cash prizes aggregating $12,000. The crack drill teams and bands of the order from many cities are entered.

Sunday will be the occasion of a pilgrimage to Rooseheart, the order's home for orphans. Graduation exercises of the Rooseheart school will take place then. The meeting will be open to the public.

LATIN-AMERICAN WOMEN TIRE OF "LIFE IN CAGES"

Vote to Open Fight for Equal Suffrage.

BY ROY BLANK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BALBOA, Canal Zone, June 26.—The inter-American congress of women, at their final session at Panama City today approved the proposal that Latin-American women be given full and equal political rights with the men. Mrs. Glen Swiggett of the National League of Woman Voters, who is president of the United States delegation, addressing the congress said:

"As a woman who has a right to vote in her own country, where women have worked for fifty years for suffrage, I will cast my vote for extending suffrage, if it is decided that the United States and Canal Zone delegates will be permitted to vote on this matter. However, I believe it is a national problem which must be decided by each nation individually."

"Latin-American Women Awakened."

After an argument on the subject, the United States delegates were allowed to vote. The measure was passed by a substantial majority.

The sessions did not close until today, owing to unfinished business.

Doña Ester Neira Calvo of Panama, president of the congress, made a statement to THE TRIBUNE correspondent in which she said: "This is the awakening of Latin-America and it will place our women on an equal footing with the women of the United States. The time has come for the womanhood of Latin-America to cast off the century old traditions which keep us behind bars, caged like birds.

Imbued with Spirit of Progress.

"Tremendous work is ahead of us, but the Latin women now are imbued with the spirit of freedom and progress. The congress has accomplished great things so far and all the delegates will be supported fully by the women's organizations of the United States and other countries in carrying out the work laid down."

LAPORTE GIRL IS SHOT DEAD BY MYSTERY BULLET

La Porte, Ind., June 26.—[Special.]—Rose Maglio, 13 years old, was almost instantly killed today when she was struck by a bullet from a mysterious source as she was walking along the street near her home. With her at the time was her 5 year old sister, Helen.

The shooting occurred in daylight and in the heart of a populous residence district. Although housewives in the vicinity heard the report of the discharged cartridge and rushed out, none was found who saw the girl's assailant fleeing. One theory is that she may have been shot from a nearby house.

Sylvatore Maglio, the child's father, is a shoemaker. He was questioned by the police, but could advance no explanation. He asserted he had no enemies. The 5 year old girl said that she had not seen any one shoot.

SON WED BY M. E. BISHOP AFTER LAW IN EAST IS CHANGED

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church has the rare distinction of having a state law changed for his accommodation. Because of the change he was able to perform yesterday the marriage of his son, Ebbert, to Miss Edna L. Laurin of Lowell, Mass.

While the law was changed primarily for the sake of Bishop Hughes, all ministers will benefit by it. Hitherto a minister performing a marriage in Massachusetts was required to be a resident of the state. The law was changed a short time ago, removing this disability. Before coming to Chicago Bishop Hughes was in charge of the Boston area and lived in Malden, Mass. If the law had not been changed some other minister, a resident of the state, would have performed the ceremony and Bishop Hughes would have assisted.

Bishop Hughes' son, Ebbert, was given the family name of Mrs. Hughes. Mrs. Hughes is sister of Maj. Frank B. Ebbert, former state superintendent of the Illinois Anti-Saloon league, of which Bishop Hughes is now president. Bishop Hughes will return to Chicago to preside at the opening of the Methodist convention, which meets Tuesday and Wednesday in the Chicago temple.

DEALERS' OPPORTUNITY Great results are being recorded by this organization with the Hupmobile 6, the greatest 6 cylinder value, and the Hupmobile 8, the world's leading fine car.

What is behind this new demand?

—The Growing Public Impatience With Old Motor Car Standards

Almost from its appearance eighteen months ago, the beautiful Hupmobile Eight took the lead as the largest-selling straight eight in the world.

This was accomplished through sheer merit—for no loud and ringing fan-fare of advertising trumpets accompanied its advent.

Almost immediately, too, the success of the Hupmobile Eight began to influence the trend of public thinking.

Furthermore, it started within the industry a readjustment to meet the demands of a new buying desire and intelligence.

It began to be more and more obvious that never again would the American public be satisfied, in the fine car field, with old standards of performance and value.

Owners of highest priced eight-cylinder cars were amazed to find that the Hupmobile Eight gave them impressively finer performance, with almost startling economy of investment, operation and upkeep.

At the same time, owners of the higher-priced cars of types other than the eight-cylinder, began to discover the inherent shortcomings in those cars.

So a large section of the public, believing that these other types were destined to pass into the lower price levels, began to act accordingly.

What this means, of course, is the invasion and the eventual taking over of the higher priced field by the equally fine but less extravagantly priced eights, as exemplified by Hupmobile.

Every day, all over America, new hundreds are added to the thousands who know through experience the utterly different kind of performance which the Hupmobile Eight affords.

Every day sees the growth of the new tendency on the part of the public—and the new efforts of the industry to satisfy the greater expectation which the beautiful Hupmobile Eight has created.

DEMAND SUBWAY AND YOU'LL GET IT, INSULL SAYS

Calls on Average Citizens to Awaken and Act.

terminals and to extension of surface lines, and said:

"This is no offhand or Cook county problem when it comes to raising the money to build the facilities which the compulsion of density is demanding. It is a national problem and it will continue to be such until the investing public comes to the conclusion that the pendulum of government hostility to railroads, and of more restricted hostility to urban transportation systems, has swung the other way.

"Do you think the Comonwealth Edison company could have spent thirty to thirty-five millions on recent improvements, and the Public Service Company of Illinois could be spending fifteen to twenty millions on improvements—do you think they could obtain that money if their credit constantly were being assailed?

"The problem is above all a financial one when you set out to provide the facilities which density demands, and it is the destruction of credit by constant assaults that is responsible for certain railroads not spending money on improvements for the last twenty years.

Roads Willing but Hampered.

"It is not reluctance on their part to improve. It is the problem of getting the money. Their credit has been made dubious.

"You ask me the cause of this general hostile attitude. Excuse me. Let certain politicians who have helped create it answer.

"The result of this hostility is in some quarters nothing more tangible than a state of mind—a kind of vague apprehension—but it is doing actual mischief. Capital is scared, great works halt or are postponed.

"It is in order to reassure capital—by dispelling this hostility—that some of the roads are trying to sweeten the public mind in every way. That is what the new placards and new conveniences that help to make a journey easier and brighter mean.

"Looking after the public in these new ways creates good will, and good will creates credit, and credit is our vitals.

Lack of Credit Hurts All.

"The surface roads' lack of credit is not injurious to them alone. It affects the elevated. We have to pay too much money for credit.

"The great trouble today in this country is lack of credit and the inability to get credit cheaply.

"Do you know the difference between getting money at 4½ per cent and having to pay 5½ for it?

"Well, it's substantial, and it's the difference between blurred credit and solid credit.

"A public man said 'Insull is building a line to feed cows.' That made a good sentence for an interview, but it was bad for credit and it was not true.

Lines Not "Junk," He Says.

"THE TRIBUNE said in an editorial the Chicago surface lines were 'junk.' Believe me, lines that carried 5,150,000 people on one day of the Eucharistic congress and 15 million on the three principal days are neither 'junk' nor 'worthless,' and I think THE TRIBUNE ought to be thoroughly ashamed of itself.

"And 'Insull's line to feed cows' carried 250,000 people to Mundelein day before yesterday.

"Do you wonder I don't want to get into the mud and slush of subway building? The dollars would not be a compensation. I have not as many dollars as people say I have, but I am not thinking about more dollars, although some people say that's all I do think about.

"What I—as an anxious outsider—am thinking of is an expression by my fellow citizens that will be so clear and forcible that our public officials can flourish on the strength of work started instead of on promises to start work."

None of Problems Baffling.

None of the engineering problems of terminal electrification, of subway building, and of surface line extension in Chicago are, said Mr. Insull, baffling.

He checked off as A, B, C, D, E, and F the steps that have been taken and that ought immediately to be taken to give this city an adequate and up-to-date system of passenger terminals and an extended and coördinated system of urban and interurban lines.

He said:

"A—The biggest thing already done was the 1907 ordinance which gave us a new surface transportation system which to my mind is the best that exists in any large city in the world—and I had nothing to do with making it such.

"B—Another big step toward adequacy has been the unification of the electric roads and the vastly increased carrying capacity of the individual trains on the L roads.

Suburban Transit on Advance.

"C—The development of first class suburban transportation and the bringing of that transportation down to the loop has marked a long advance.

"D—So far as what is going on at the moment in electrifying passenger terminals is concerned, the electrifying of its suburban traffic by the Illinois Central will, to my mind, be of the highest importance on account of the enormous effect which the spectacular character of it will have on local transportation.

"E—What would help the situation above all else would be a downtown subway, which, the moment it is put into operation, will produce as striking an effect on rapid transit as the opening of the boulevard link produced on vehicular traffic.

"F—The next crying need is through north and south routes on the west side.

"But the downtown subway is the supremely important first step to be taken."

A Striking Statement.

Mr. Insull drew to a close with this arresting statement, which he checked up with his specialists as to every figure in it and which I read back to him:

"Electrification of passenger terminals is in certain respects the easiest—as it would be in all respects the cleanliest—thing Chicago could do.

"There has been or is being installed in and around Chicago now over ten times as much generating capacity as the Illinois Central will take from us until 1935.

"If all Chicago steam terminals within the Chicago switching area went over to electricity by next Monday morning—yes, if they could be electrified over night—it would not increase the demand on our Commonwealth Edison system for energy over twenty-five per cent, and would not be equal to the amount of energy it takes to run the entire surface and elevated systems in the city of Chicago.

"Our share of the facilities required to bring the great day of general electrification of Chicago's terminals is ready. And our ordinary increase in equipments and capacity from year to year will more than keep pace with the demands electrification will lay on the equipments.

"Greater speed, quicker acceleration, greater economy, perfect cleanliness, greater passenger capacity, and greater use of terminal tracks—owing to the two levels which electricity alone makes possible—will be the rewards and benefits of the dawn of general terminal electrification in Chicago.

It's Citizen Who Will Benefit.

"And the average citizen will be the citizen most benefited.

"At the present moment only one other railroad system besides the Illinois Central can electrify economically in Chicago, because only one has sufficient suburban businesse to justify it.

"But speedy general electrification of terminals is not hopeless, because the increasing value of terminal property, the improvement in the credit of steam railroads, and the growth of suburban and through business are elements that will force electrification."

POWER PROJECTS IN ILLINOIS GET APPROVAL OF U. S.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Issuance of preliminary permits for the development of four power projects in the Rock and Fox rivers in Illinois was announced today by the federal power commission. The power in all four cases is intended for public utility use. Preliminary permits were issued to George D. McClary of Chicago, for two years each for two power projects in the Rock river in Ogle and Lee counties in the vicinity of Grand Detour, and in Winnebago county in the vicinity of Latham Park.

A preliminary permit for two years was issued to the Illinois Northern Utilities company of Dixon for a proposed power development in the Rock river in the vicinity of Byron, Ogle county.

A preliminary permit for two years was issued to Ray K. Holland of Ann Arbor, Mich., for a power project on the Fox river in La Salle county, Illinois.

Both of the McClary projects in the Rock river contemplate construction of reinforced concrete dams protected by earthen dikes. The power capacity of one project is estimated as 2,000 horse power and the head at nine feet, while the estimated power capacity of the other project is 2,160 horse power and the head 13.4 feet.

The Illinois Northern Utilities company in its development in the Rock river proposes to construct a reinforced concrete dam about 39 feet high and 223 feet long, flanked by earthen embankments, making the total length of the dam approximately 675 feet.

GAYETY FEATURE OF LAKE FOREST CHURCH WEDDING

Dorothy Lamont Bride of Chauncey J. Belknap.

BY MILDRED JAKLON.

The air of subdued jollity that pervaded the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest yesterday afternoon just before the wedding of Miss Dorothy Lamont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Lamont, to Chauncey J. Belknap, was an unusual accompaniment for a fashionable wedding. It followed the ripple of laughter which fluttered through the crowded pews of the church when young Bob Lamont carried a belated bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids down the center aisle to his mother, who had already found her place in the front pew, quite the most unusual proceeding that has taken place at a society nuptial service for a long time.

Costumes Are Elaborate.

The church was girded in great bunches of white peonies for the event, and there were many flickering candlelights Miss Lamont wore white satin trimmed with heirloom rosepoint, a court train and a capped veil of rosepoint and filmy tulle. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The attendants' gowns and floral pieces were most elaborate in color and texture. The maid of honor, Miss Gertrude Lamont, wore cream colored lace with a sash of peach color, and a transparent straw picture hat with a crown of lace and a bow of peach satin. Her bouquet was of pink roses and larkspur.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Robert P. Lamont Jr., Miss Frederick Belknap, Miss Alice Lee, Miss Marie Smith, Miss Alice Little, Miss Grace and Miss Betty Page-Robinson and Mrs. Ronald Boardman, wore frocks similar to that of the maid of honor, trimmed with a pale green satin, and the ribbon on their hats was in delicate rainbow tints. Their great bouquets were overwhelming creations of yellow roses and lavender sweet peas.

Reception Follows Ceremony.

Following the ceremony, there was a large reception at the Lamont residence. The guests included Mrs. Ezra J. Warner and her daughter, Miss Jane Warner; Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Thorne, Mrs. Donald P. Welles, Miss Leslie Thorne, Mrs. William V. Kelley, Mrs. Victor C. Sanborn, her sister, Miss Caroline Kirkland, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Atkinson.

The wedding of Miss Helen Willis to Newell S. Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus S. Knight of Evanston, took place last night at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Richard C. Lake, in Evanston, the Rev. Arthur Rogers officiating.

Housekeeper Asks $100,000 Balm from J. E. Himes

J. E. Himes, 5300 Hyde Park boulevard, said to be a man of some wealth, was made defendant in a $100,000 breach of promise suit filed in Superior court yesterday by Miss Rose Buetschli, 55 years old, a resident of the Y. W. C. A. hotel. According to the action, filed by Attorney Arnold E. Ehrlich, Himes proposed to Miss Buetschli, and was accepted, while the latter was his housekeeper at Himes' summer home at Manitowich, Wis., in 1924. Later, the suit alleges, Himes' affection grew cold and he refused to marry Miss Buetschli.

EASTMAN TO PAY $2,786,165 TO ITS EMPLOYES

Rochester, N. Y., June 26.—(AP)—The 15th and largest wage dividend ever paid by the Eastman Kodak company, totaling $2,786,165.27, will be distributed July 1 to the 13,628 employés, the world around, who worked portions or all of at least 26 weeks during 1925, it was announced today.

Quarterly dividends to holders of common and preferred stock, totaling $4,133,145.50, also will be paid. Some 8,000 stockholders are employés.

The wage dividend this year amounts to 3½ per cent of the total wages paid during the last period of continuous employment within the last five calendar years, and every employé who has been with the company five years or more will receive as his wage dividend the equivalent of slightly more than nine weeks extra pay. Those employed for a shorter period receive a proportionately smaller amount.

Italians Charge French Try to Make Abyssinia Hostile

ROME, June 26.—(AP)—Several Italian newspapers today made the accusation that the French press has been fomenting unfriendliness in Abyssinia towards Italy. The papers comment bitterly on the recent criticism in Paris of the British and Italian negotiations concerning a definiton of their spheres of economic interests in Abyssinia.

"Where and how is cordial Franco-Italian coöperation possible?" asks Impero, while the Giornale D'Italia expresses the hope that the French government will not encourage the "unwise, irritating attempts of newspapers anxious to create suspicion and confusion where really everything is clear and pacific."

The negotiations, says Giornale D'Italia, are within the limits of the agreement of 1906 and are not intended to violate the political and economic rights or the sovereignty and independence of Abyssinia. The basis of the conversations is described as a definition of Great Britain's hydraulic rights on Lake Tzana and Italy's right to construct a railway through Abyssinia linking up Erythrea and Italian Somaliland.

"Italy Defends Abyssinia."

Asserting Italy has 'induced Great Britain to reduce its claims in Abyssinia, the newspaper declares this shows that the "Italian government intends to defend the interests of the Abyssinian population even against England."

"It is impossible to explain the noisy attitude of the Parisian newspapers except as an unfriendly desire to create in Abyssinia, by artifices and deformation of the palpable truth, a state of political mistrust against Italy, perhaps to create difficulties for the Italian railway project in order to maintain intact France's commercial railway monopoly in Abyssinia," the paper concludes.

"France Against Our Rights."

"The action which Quai d'Orsay is tenaciously carrying out warns us that France is against our rights not only in the Mediterranean, but everywhere," says the Corriere d'Italia. "France holds the diplomatic organization of Abyssinia firmly in its net of interests and intrigue. It is easy to make it believe the vilest insinuations concerning the 'unconfessed' intentions of the Fascist government in order to excite hostility among the Abyssinians against any change in the actual conditions which are pleasant and beneficial to French interests. If France carries the question before the league of nations it is not improbable that she will be preceded there by the governments of London and Rome."

LOWDEN FINDS DANES PROSPER BY CO-OPERATION

Live Better than Yanks; Farms Are Small.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 26.—Ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois will conclude his visit in Denmark Monday. He will make a motor tour of Sweden to continue his studies of Scandinavian farming methods and particularly of coöperation.

He will visit the famous plant of the breeding and experiment station at Svaloff, where the best seed wheat in the world is grown and which is largely responsible for maintaining the high quality of the European grain.

Impressed by Danes' Success.

Mr. Lowden will stay over night at Holmstad and the next day will go as far as Norrkopping, arriving in Stockholm Wednesday. Later he intends to visit the famous Upsala university and the great electric works at Trolhaaten.

Mr. Lowden told THE TRIBUNE tonight that he is greatly impressed by the progress made by Danish farmers, who 100 years ago were serfs and who are now as prosperous as American farmers in the best times. Farmers with eleven acres, Mr. Lowden said, live as well as many American farmers with many times as much land.

All Due to Coöperation.

Every house has a telephone, radio, and other conveniences. This has been brought about entirely by coöperation, which enables the farmer not only to get the best prices for his products but egables him to buy supplies in the cheapest market and keeps him abreast of all modern developments in scientific agriculture.

Mr. Lowden is deeply interested in the progress of farm legislation in the United States and intends when he returns toward the end of July to laupch a vigorous campaign for laws which will really aid the farmer.

NEWSBOY WINS COUNTY SCHOOLS' ACHIEVING PRIZE

For earning $825 by selling newspapers in addition to accomplishing other tasks, Frank Marelloi, 17 year old pupil of the Leyden township school, district 82, was named achievement champion of the Cook county schools in the office of Superintendent Edward J. Tobin yesterday. He received a bank book with a $25 deposit to his credit as the prize.

Mitchie Surdel and Clarence Gross were named second and third from a field of seven candidates. The contest, which calls for work both in school and in the home, includes fourteen projects, among them sewing, canning, poultry raising, gardening, and cow testing, and others.

CORN BELT TO CARRY RELIEF FIGHT TO POLLS

Opposes Substitute for Haugen Measure.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Corn belt farm leaders are apparently unwilling to accept a substitute for the Haugen agricultural relief bill recently defeated in both the house and senate at Washington, D. C.

Gov. John Hammill of Iowa, head of the corn belt conference which sponsored the defeated equalization measure, announced yesterday that the members of his committee would be called into conference as quickly as possible to lay plans for carrying the fight "to the electorate of every state in the congressional and senatorial elections."

The American Farm Bureau federation is understood to oppose any substitute bill. This was indicated when Samuel H. Thompson, the federation's president, indorsed a message sent yesterday to Senator James Watson [Rep., Ind.] by Luke W. Duffy of Indianapolis, a Hoosier farm bureau leader and former state senator.

Message Sent to Watson.

The telegram said:

"After a conference with President Thompson of the American Farm Bureau federation would advise that you stand firm against the substitution for farm relief bill of the empty Fess cure proposing a deeper debt implication for the American farmer.

"Take the highest ground of opposition to this ruinous suggestion and plead for profits not credits as a means of farm preservation and equality.

"The country is out of joint. You must make protection apply on farm commodities by hoisting the tariff jack screw under the agriculture corner of the American household or lower them under the other three corners of labor, manufacturing and transportation.

Urges "Buy Land" Campaign.

"A general summary shows that as adjournment of congress is near, about all that can now be done would be to introduce a resolution calling on all the tariff fatted elements in our American life to 'buy an acre of land,' thereby showing a good faith effort to aid their tariff trampled and profit ridden neighbor, the American farmer.

"We await such time as a ballot box arrangement can be made for a more fair farm participation in the affairs of America."

SENATE TO PUSH COOLIDGE IDEA FOR FARM RELIEF

Leaders Plan Vote on Fess Bill Tomorrow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—In deference to President Coolidge's plea for passage of the Fess farm relief bill, the senate today agreed to give further consideration to this and other proposals for solution of the agricultural problem.

As soon as the senate convened, Senator Watson [Rep., Ind.] withdrew his motion to shelve the farm relief bills and proceed to consideration of the veterans' bill.

Mr. Watson had asserted in the senate, at the moment the President was issuing his statement, that under no circumstances would he withdraw his motion to lay aside the farm bills, believing that none of them could be passed and that it would be only a waste of time to consider them. But when he learned that the President desired the passage of the Fess bill, he decided that it was only fair that the senate consider and vote on the measure.

Bloc to Fight Substitute.

On account, however, of the absence of many senators, the administration leaders were unwilling to risk a vote today, and obtained a postponement of action until Monday.

Whether even the President's powerful influence will enable passage of the Fess bill appears problematical in view of the unyielding opposition of the farm bloc. Senator McNary [Rep., Ore.], called a meeting this morning of the corn belt and other senators supporting the McNary bill and submitted the President's appeal for acceptance of the Fess bill. The farm bloc senators unanimously rejected the President's plea and determined to fight not only the Fess and Lenroot, but all other substitutes offered for the corn belt bill.

Call Plea Play for Votes.

The farm bloc is against the Fess bill on the ground that it would be ineffective to increase the returns on farm products and proposes merely to lend more money to the farmers and get them more deeply in debt. On that ground it is pronounced a mere gesture by the administration in the direction of farm relief and a sop to the agricultural vote.

The Fess bill proposes the establishment of a farmers' marketing commission composed of the secretary of agriculture and six members appointed by the President and confirmed by the senate. The members are to be experts on basic agricultural products and are to receive a salary of $12,000.

The commission is to determine when a surplus exists or is imminent in the production of any commodity handled by a cooperative marketing association. If such a surplus is determined, the commission is to initiate the organization of an agency to market the commodity and to aid in the disposition of surpluses.

The commission is authorized to make loans to cooperative associations for marketing products and the bill appropriates $100,000,000 from the federal treasury for this purpose.

There is no provision for price fixing or for collection of equalization fees, such as led to the defeat of the corn belt bills.

SALE OF RAILROAD SECURITIES URGED BY COMMERCE BODY

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Sale of railroad equipment trust certificates at public competitive bidding was recommended today by the Interstate Commerce commission.

Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman, chairman of the commission, has repeatedly urged that the railroads should offer such securities for sale at competitive bidding, but until today a majority of the commission did not join in his views.

In approving the sale of $2,278,000 of five per cent equipment trust certificates by the Western Maryland, the commission commended the railroad for having received bids for the securities.

"Recent experience in connection with the sale of equipment trust certificates leads us to believe that conditions in the investment market are, and for at least some time to come are likely to be," the commission said, "such that railroad companies raising capital in this way may now profitably adopt a policy of offering such securities to public competitive bidding after the manner in which state, county and municipal securities are commonly sold."

FAITH

"Faith makes possible the seemingly impossible."

In work, service and sacrifice, amid obstacles and trouble, it has accomplished wonderful results.

It has been the moulder of human character. It surpasses the moulder of iron and the art of the sculptor.

It is the dispenser of the highest and best in human life. Those who have faith usually have all the brighter sides of life and service with which to work.

The past week has given us all a splendid example of the many things Faith can accomplish.

Between parties to various activities, faith may be made to have its place in business and the professions for mutual benefit.

FRENCH THREAT OF BOLT SHAKES DISARM PARLEY

Clash with British on Cuts in Navies.

GENEVA, July 26.—(AP)—The threat by France to bolt the subcommittee on naval affairs gave a new twist to the league of nations disarmament discussions today.

Admiral de Jeanne and his French colleagues even went so far as to gather up their documents preparatory to leaving the room where the sessions were held, but in the end everything was ironed out smoothly, because the French got what they wanted.

The incident arose during a discussion on the age of warships; it was really a clash between the French and British experts. By a unanimous vote the naval experts had accepted the French proposal that there seemed no doubt that the effective value of the tonnage of naval armaments, generally speaking, decreased with age.

British Move Wins.

The British then moved that as age was one of the factors which would inevitably be taken into consideration in any standard of comparison between navies, all discussion of the question of age should be closed, or at least deferred until the full military committee was ready to take up the problem of the limitation of armaments and methods of limitation. The British motion was adopted.

At this juncture the French introduced another proposal as to whether from a technical standpoint it was possible to set up a standard for a comparison of naval armaments without supplementing it with a standard of comparison of tonnage by the method of measuring the age of such armaments.

Rupture Is Threatened.

The British and some other experts argued that the proposal was out of order, since the age discussion was closed. The French, however, insisted, asserting that they would withdraw from the committee unless a vote was taken and make a separate report to the main military committee.

To prevent a possible rupture the chairman put the French proposal to a vote, and it was decisively defeated, as the French wished it to be. Twelve nations voted in the negative and only one, the United States, voted affirmatively. Six countries abstained.

NEW CANADIAN ELECTION MAY BE HELD IN AUGUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ottawa, June 26.—A new Canadian election looms as a practical certainty out of the chaos created by last night's hectic session of parliament, when the government was defeated three times, but managed temporarily to postpone the fateful vote of censure involved in the conservative customs committee's main amendment.

Supporters of the government predict that Prime Minister MacKenzie King will not await the apparently inevitable defeat in the house of commons next week, but will appeal to the governor general for another dissolution. In that event the Canadian electorate would vote in August. The cabinet, which went into session at 1:30 p. m. today, was still meeting at 5 o'clock.

Both major parties, Liberals and Conservatives, in the intense struggle for power are going to unprecedented lengths to collect votes for the final struggle next week. Miss Agnes MacPhail, Canada's only woman member of parliament, this morning was coaxed back to Ottawa by the Liberals after she had boarded an ocean liner for France. Representative Speakman has been wired by the government to leave his sick bed in Alberta. Representative Carmichael is leaving a death room at his western home to return and vote with the Conservatives.

Street Car Lines Order Planes for Air Service

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, June 26.—The Philadelphia Rapid Transit company today ordered several Fokker planes, type F-7, the same as were used by Lieut. Commander Richard Byrd in his north pole flight, to be employed in new air lines between Philadelphia and Washington, Florida, New York, Buffalo and Chicago.

CAMP ROOSEVELT RECEIVES FIRST BOYS TOMORDOW

Military Drill Starts for Students.

The first contingent of youths who will attend Camp Roosevelt, the R. O. T. C. camp of the board of education at Fort Sheridan, will leave tomorrow morning over the North Shore line for the summer military reservation. More than 800 boys from fourteen states will attend the summer camp this year.

All day today Maj. F. L. Beals, director of military training in the Chicago high schools, and director of the camp, will be busy with the erection of tents, sorting out equipment, and placing everything in readiness for the boys who will attend the junior, military and summer school camp.

All on Military Basis.

While many of the boys are engaged during part of the day with studies the entire camp is on a military basis and the army routine will be strictly observed. In addition to the school and military units there will be a band organization.

In the summer school division two subjects must be taken by students. The school closes at noon and in the afternoon, following recreation, military drill is the order.

The R. O. T. C. division is given over entirely to a program of military instruction and athletics. It includes, drill, ceremonies, target practice, field maneuvers, athletics and swimming.

Recreation for Boys.

In the junior division for boys from 12 to 14 years of age, campcraft, scoutcraft, woodcraft, drills, hikes, swimming, recreation and athletics make up the daily program.

Situated at the north end of the reservation, the R. O. T. C. camp is an ideal setting for a military camp. Besides lying snugly in the wooded acres of the fort with the lake to the east, the camp site is in a military atmosphere. The camp is authorized by the war department and will remain open until Aug. 14.

VICTIM OF LONE BANDIT.

James Lynn, 8403 South Hermitage avenue, was robbed by a lone bandit last night at 84th and South Paulina streets. He lost $43.

Now, Chicago Stutz owners come to bat!

The symbol of Safety

BECAUSE The NEW STUTZ was a truly new car in January, its first buyers had to take the car's performance qualities on faith.

And thousands proved that they did share the faith of its engineers and builders by choosing this car above all others.

But now, with those thousands of cars on the road, and an avalanche of enthusiastic letters from delighted owners already in, the future thousands of NEW STUTZ buyers can buy on proven superiority.

So, our advertising man now yields the batter's box to Chicago STUTZ owners, and we start off with the three letters following, indicative of NEW STUTZ owner feeling.

FRED'K H. BARTLETT COMPANY
(NOT INC)
60 W. WASHINGTON STREET
CHICAGO

Stutz Chicago Factory Branch,
2500 S. Michigan Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.

June 17th, 1926.

Gentlemen:

It is a great pleasure for me to say that I consider the New Stutz 8 the nearest to perfection of any automobile I have ever owned.

In the past twenty-five years I have owned and driven most all of the high class automobiles made in this country, but I have never been entirely satisfied with a car until I tried the New Stutz 8. I drove it 6500 miles in California this winter and got more real pleasure and comfort out of it than I have ever enjoyed in any other car. There is a sense of security in riding in this car --at any speed--that I have never felt before, due, I think, to the lower center of gravity. My car has never skidded an inch--and I have tried to make it. The Hydrostatic Four Wheel Brake System is the most perfect brake I have ever used.

The car travels along at fifty or sixty miles an hour with such ease and comfort to the passengers that they feel they are riding at thirty-five.

I have driven it over four hundred miles in a day without the passengers or the driver feeling the slightest fatigue.

In short, it rides like a cradle; is easy to drive; has a wonderful engine--great power and speed; will not heat up; is economical in fuel consumption. It is the car of the day and, I think, of the future. They are new and an innovation, but I am not surprised that you sell them faster than you can make them. Every Stutz driver will be a booster, in my opinion.

FHB'MLC

Very truly yours,

Frederick H. Bartlett

The New STUTZ Vertical Eight purchased from you recently is easily living up to the great expectations aroused by its elegance and beauty.

I do not buy an automobile primarily for speed, yet fully appreciate the great power plant which caused another driver of my car to say: "When you step on her she starts to go somewhere right away."

After driving my New STUTZ Eight Safety Chassis over 1,000 miles I feel that it is a sufficient test to justify my enthusiasm.

FIRST: Let me assure you that the car is all you claimed it to be and more.

SECOND: The roadability of the car is much better than I expected, and all the most critical person could desire.

THIRD: The ease of handling and the gas consumption is very surprising as I drove it on a 250-mile trip at an average of 14 miles per gallon; when it is properly broken in it should be still better.

FOURTH: You are perfectly safe in recommending the New STUTZ to the most discriminating buyer, as it is a class by itself for appearance and performance.

The New Bismarck Hotel

and Metropolitan Office Building—New Palace Theatre (Orpheum Circuit)

Equipped throughout with the Watrous Flush Valve and Duojet Closet

MEMORIES of the historic old Bismarck Hotel return vividly to the mind of the arriving guest as he enters the splendid new Bismarck in the Eitel Central Block. But it is a far larger hotel than before, and the resources of science have established a far higher standard of luxury and convenience than was possible in the Bismarck that stood here for over thirty years.

It is Emil and Karl Eitel's superb contribution to the new group of buildings which are so rapidly transforming Chicago's skyline, and raising this great metropolis to the premier position among American cities.

Every part of the vast structure, and of the entire Eitel Central Block, is typical of progress and advancement. Modernity of design is especially marked in the interior appointments and details of mechanical equipment—and to an impressive degree in the plumbing appliances, which illustrate the utmost resource of modern sanitary engineering.

Watrous

Flush Valves and Duojet Closets

Watrous Flush Valve and Duojet Closet (Floor Type) —installed in the Eitel Central Block

THE Watrous Duojet Closet and Flush Valve, with which the entire Eitel Central Block is equipped, represents a new standard in sanitation and economy. This combination prevents obstruction of the closet bowl, and assures a thorough flush without permitting waste of water.

The design eliminates the narrow passage which is required beyond the trap in most types of closets to establish syphonic action, but which is a frequent cause of obstruction and overflows.

In the Watrous Duojet Closet, two powerful converging jets instantly empty the bowl. This and the subsequent refill consume far less water than is required by the usual single-jet closet.

The Watrous Flush Valve delivers the exact quantity of water required for a thorough flush and refill by the bowl with which it is installed. It therefore assures maximum economy when installed with the water-saving Duojet Closet.

The mechanism of the valve which regulates the flow of water is very easily adjusted, and the adjustment remains permanent. No regulation is needed for variations in water pressure.

The Watrous wall-hung bowl operates on the same Duojet principle as the floor type shown here. It has the obvious advantage of simplifying the cleansing of the toilet room floor. It also contributes to speed and economy in erecting new buildings by dispensing with "furred" ceilings and closet connections in floors.

The economies assured by the non-clogging feature, the water-saving feature, and the simplified installation made possible by the wall type, represent a total saving that no building owner can afford to overlook.

HERRICK HURLS LIE TO ALL WHO CALL U. S. MISER

Says We Entered War for Human Liberty.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. NAZAIRE, France, June 26.—In an impassioned plea for fairness, Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, denounced those who doubt the intentions of the United State in entering the world war at the ceremonials today in connection with the unveiling of a monument here dedicated to the landing, nine years ago, of the first American troops in France.

Mr. Herrick, after presenting the monument to France, said:

"We were a few years ago hailed throughout Europe as leaders in the realm of idealism; we have lately been proclaimed as materialists, whose influence in the family of nations rests upon the assumption that we are the greatest present repository of the world's material power. The thoughtless accept both assertions; the discriminating reserve their judgment. But I often ask myself, and I ask you now, can it be true that if we have acquired the one, we have thereby forfeited all claims to the other? I think not. The essential characteristics of a vigorous nation untouched by any catastrophe do not so quickly change. I find these exaggerations repulsive intellectually and harmful practically.

United States Not Selfish.

"There are people who have taken advantage of these peculiarities of our psychology to sow doubt in our own as well as in others' minds regarding our intentions when we entered the war. Reversing all history and starting with the new assumption that we are forever solely animated by a careful regard for our pocketbooks, they would make it appear that not only now but ten years ago material considerations were the determining factor in the decisions we took at that time.

"Every American should take pains to scotch this lie. The American's capacity for willing self sacrifice in any cause he holds dear was not suddenly born in 1917.

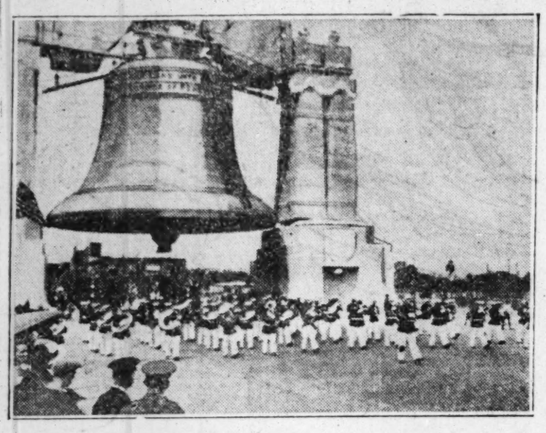
U. S. Fought for Human Liberty.

"Very soon after the great European struggle started, our people began to comprehend what was happening on this side of the water. Through the blaze of passion and the clouds of deception, the every day American soon perceived what was at stake upon the battlefields of France; he saw that human liberty and elementary justice were hanging in the balance, and from the very start he had but one fixed idea, and that was to take off his coat in his own good homely fashion and enjoy the satisfaction of striking a blow in defense of common decency.

"Slur Upon Our Dead."

"It is high time, then, that a fiction which arose through the gratitude of our allies and became fixed by repetition, be cleared from the European mind—I mean the fiction that our unwilling people had to be adroitly inflamed to self forgetfulness and lashed into action by much repeated insult. It is not true; and it is unfair to that American idealism of which my countrymen are sanely proud, unfair to our sturdy sense of right and wrong, a slur upon all the dead who fell in the revolution and the civil war as well as those of yesterday, to allow this dangerous theory to go unanswered, undenied."

LIBERTY BELLS RING TOMORROW



The United States Marine band is shown passing under a replica of the Liberty bell in Philadelphia on Flag day. Many bells in Chicago will be sounded tomorrow on the sesquicentennial anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

U. S. BELLS TO RING TOGETHER ON BIRTHDAY

Eleven minutes after 11 o'clock tomorrow morning the old Liberty bell in Philadelphia will ring once more to signify the sesquicentennial anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

At the same moment thousands of other bells in all parts of the country will peal. Mayor Dever, in a proclamation issued yesterday, asked that all bells and chimes in Chicago be sounded as a part of the demonstration.

"It is the wish of the commission appointed by the President of the United States for the purpose of inculcating the spirit of liberty and patriotism in the minds and hearts of the American people, that we recall and revere the heroic deeds of revolutionary days," said the proclamation.

LUTHERANS WILL GATHER TODAY FOR CELEBRATION

Approximately 50,000 Lutherans of Chicago will gather at Soldiers' field in Grant park this afternoon for a demonstrational celebration of the sesquicentennial of American liberty.

The program, which is to begin at 3 o'clock, includes a mixed chorus of 1,200 voices, under the direction of Prof. J. G. Schmid, a male chorus of 600, led by L. Luecker, a children's chorus of 2,500, directed by Prof. M. Singer, a flag drill by 1,500 from the day schools of the church and a pantomime of "The Star Spangled Banner," by 800 girls.

Prof. Martin Graebler of Milwaukee will speak on "The Declaration of Independence and Its Time." "Lutheran Patriotic Activities" will be related by Paul T. Buszin. Patriotic airs will be played by a united band under the leadership of H. C. Landeck.

C. P. R. Buys Five New Ships for Ocean Service

LONDON, June 26.—(AP)—E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway company, anounced today he had placed contracts for three new freight steamers of 10,000 tons each, for the Canadian Pacific ocean service. The ships will ply between London and Montreal. Mr. Beatty announced a few days ago that he had placed contracts for construction of two new passenger and cargo carrying vessels.

Australian to Be Guest at Reception Tomorrow

Archbishop Daniel Mannix of Australia, who came to Chicago to attend the Eucharistic congress, will be the guest of honor at a reception to be held tomorrow evening in the Ashland Boulevard auditorium. The Rev. William F. Cahill will preside and addresses will be made by Frank P. Walsh of New York and S. T. O'Kelly of Ireland.

CAILLAUX OUSTS PROTECTOR OF FRANCE'S GOLD

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 26.—The whip which Joseph Caillaux demanded the right to use when he undertook to handle French finances cracked today and M. Robineau, governor of the Bank of France, lost his job.

In his place, the minister of finance, who is little short of being the premier, dictated the appointment of M. Moreau, governor of the Bank of Algeria, one of the most respected figures of French finance, but what is more as far as M. Caillaux is concerned, M. Moreau is his friend.

With the partial coöperation of Premier Briand, who has not liked M. Robineau much since he suspected him of intriguing against his government a month ago, M. Caillaux has succeeded within four days of his accession to power in deposing the financial power who defied the last government.

M. Robineau virtually brought about the downfall of Finance Minister Peret and the ninth Briand cabinet by refusing to permit the use of France's gold reserves to aid in the battle to save the franc.

M. Caillaux may face a grave fight in the chamber of deputies Tuesday, for M. Robineau is able to muster hordes of friends among the moderate elements of parliament, where the new minister needs support. The regents of the bank, who are appointed for life by shareholders, are also expected to raise serious objections to the summary dismissal of the governor.

Information that M. Caillaux intended to get M. Robineau's job produced a dangerous fluctuation in the shares of the Bank of France. Shares valued at 11,000 francs ($316) have lost more than 800 francs ($23) in value on the bourse in the last three days. It was predicted tonight that M. Robineau's departure will be followed by a complete change in the management of the big bank, with Prof. Charles Rist, financial expert of the Paris law school, taking the vice governorship.

TAYLOR RETIRES AND JADWIN BECOMES NEW CHIEF ARMY ENGINEER

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Maj. Gen. Harry Taylor retired today as chief of engineers of the army and was succeeded by Brig. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, his former assistant. Gen. Jadwin took the title of major general when sworn into office.

Writing to Gen. Taylor, Secretary of War Davis praised him for his efficiency and asserted his retirement was a real loss.

"I've learned to know you well," Mr. Davis wrote, "and I have always been completely justified in the trust and confidence I have reposed in you."

Gen. Taylor is 64, the statutory age for retirement.

WATCH BATTLE BETWEEN FORD AND CHEVROLET

See Strategy Move in Recent Price Slash.

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—[Special.]—In the recent price slash made by the Ford Motor company on all models along with improvements in equipment the layman has witnessed another stage in the quiet industrial battle between a unit of General Motors and the Ford Motor company.

Whenever changes in the prices of automobiles has been decided upon, it has been customary to withhold advance notice. The recent Ford cut was no exception to this rule and the public had the news along with its breakfast the day the cut was made.

See Reason for Slash.

The announcement failed to create a thrill from a price reduction point of view. What really "carried a kick" was the apparent fact that the Ford company was being too closely pressed for comfort and that, in order to hold and increase trade, something must be done. So down went prices.

With the slash, the eyes of the public turned to the Chevrolet company, the unit chosen by G. M. C. to give battle to the hitherto unopposed Ford company. Production and sales of Chevrolet cars has been the industry's real sensation since the beginning of this year. Twenty-five thousand Chevrolets constituted the output for January and since then the increase has been rapid, each month showing a healthy increase over the preceding one until June, when the total reached well above 70,000.

There are no Ford production figures availabue, but from reliable sources come reports that they are not what the head officials think they should be, and far from the capacity of the great Highland Park and River Rouge plants. Should Chevrolet elect to continue to follow Ford's price cut with the same war weapons it can, backed by the powerful G. M. C., do so with no fear of financial difficulties.

Ford's Announced Policy.

What the Ford company will do to increase production and sales is to stick to the policy of cutting prices and improving the product, a recent Ford statement said.

Chevrolet officials are rushing their expansion program and adding production facilities in every city where an assembly plant is now located. These improvements mean an expenditure of $10,000,000 and they will be complete by January 1 of next year. This will give the company facilities for the production of 1,000,000 cars annually.

Just what the Ford Motor company has in view and is not making public is a question that is being asked in auto circles. One rumor that is gaining considerable circulation is that indications point to something next week but there the rumor stalls.

If it is true, as rumored, that the Ford company is laying off hundreds of men in its United States plants and that production of cars has diminished, there is a consequent theory that this apparent decrease in production is being staged for a purpose—the clearing of decks for something new and something aimed to put them far in the lead of any ambitious competitors.

JUDGES OPPOSE ANY REGULATION OF NEWS BY LAW

Moline, Ill., June 26.—(AP)—No man who appreciates the value of unhampered expression wants the time to come when there will be any regulation by law of the publication of news, declared the report of a committee of judges, headed by Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the Illinois supreme court, presented today at a meeting of the judiciary section of the Illinois State Bar association.

The committee, in presenting a report on a recent conference between the bench, the bar and the press, said that "the public be damned" spirit has brought regulation of our business and social conduct which is interferring with the development of that independent individualism essential to the greatness of our people.

The report praises the average newspaper and declares that "with the ethical men of the press and the ethical men of the bar working together, the public will certainly benefit by a more enlightened administration of justice."

George H. Wilson of Quincy today was elected president of the Illinois State Bar association to succeed John R. Montgomery of Chicago. Other officers were named as follows: First vice president, Rush C. Butler, Chicago; second vice president, Franklin L. Velde, Pekin; third vice president, John D. Black, Chicago; treasurer, Frank L. Trutter, Springfield, and secretary, R. Allen Stephens, Springfield.

Discussion of numerous questions on civil procedure and civil and criminal law occupied this morning's session.

HARVEST WHEAT, EAT BREAD FROM IT SAME DAY

Lyons, Kas., June 26.—(AP)—Harvesters who worked yesterday morning on the farm of Jean Gray, near here, last night ate bread made from the wheat they had harvested.

The wheat was cut by a combination harvester and thrasher and then rushed to a Lyons mill, where it was ground into flour and returned to the Gray farm in time for the housewives to make bread for the evening meal.

Wheat in this region is unusually hard and free from moisture this year.

'WISCONSIN IDEA' HAILED AS FARM RELIEF SOLUTION

G. O. P. Plank Attacks the Mortgage Burden.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., June 26.—[Special.]—Conservative Republicans believe the "Wisconsin idea" on farm relief, as enunciated in the agricultural plank adopted by the G. O. P. state convention which closed yesterday, is one of the most practical contributions in the long controversy over farm aid.

The Wisconsin program first attacks the mortgage burden. It sets forth a plan for refunding agriculture's fixed debt by long time loans at lower rates, for increasing the loan value of farm property and fixing lower interest. It calls for a method of finding production costs, declaring that farm prices should give a fair profit above all costs. It opposes any curb on production.

Amend Farm Loan Law.

Its salient features follow:

1. That the national government revise and amend the farm loan law so as to define more clearly a farm as a going business and as an operating plant in fixing loans on farms.

2. The passage of a law establishing a temporary farm finance council to cooperate with the states in preventing farm foreclosures and providing the necessary money for refunding the fixed, or mortgage, debts into long time, low interest bearing debts and to aid in eliminating the present tendency to farm tenancy.

3. Increase the loan value of the farm lands and buildings to at least 50 per cent of the appraised value as a producing plant.

4. Fix, regulate and maintain more uniform and lower rates of interest on farm loans.

Provide Credit System.

5. Provide for the farmers of the state an adequate intermediate credit system affording short time loans of from three to eighteen months based upon a certificate form of security, thus abolishing the necessity of resorting to the chattel form of security on any class of farm property. Use any surplus state funds in meeting this contingency.

6. Recognition of the fact that there can be no real reform in farm finance until the farmer can know the cost of producing farm products. Arbitrarily controlled production is the very core of a harmful monopoly.

Farmers are entitled to receive for their products the cost of production, plus a fair return upon the value of the property used in production. They must, therefore, be able to ascertain the method of bringing about the greatest production at the least cost.

7. Provide, so far as the state may, for an adequate system for storing, distributing, and marketing of farm products.

8. We stand firmly against any measure that involves the government of the United States directly in any private business.

"A Satisfactory Car to Own"

Rickenbacker

It Is Not High Priced
A Cheaper Car
Will Cost You More

You Save in Cost

—by not trading every year—you don't need to trade. A Rickenbacker has stability—has the most advanced engineering principles—has all the bearings possible to be put in a 6 or 8 cylinder motor—has the finest lubrication system yet designed, giving ten shots of oil with each crank shaft revolution—has more carefully and closely fit bearings—adding great life; and is built of the best material available for each purpose.

The chassis is equal to the motor and four or more years of good service is not too much to expect. Thus you save in cost.

You Gain in Enjoyment

—from the tremendous performance—from the ease of control (its steering, clutch and brakes are most dependable and pleasant to use). The rapid "get-away" from crossings gives a real thrill. The ability for safe emergency stops brings confidence. A speed from 2 to 75 miles per hour.

It is a continuous pleasure to feel your car is in good taste both in style, general design and appearance and in quality of materials and fittings with which it is equipped.

There is a peculiar charm in driving these cars.

FIND THOUSANDS EVADING A FAIR TAX ON PROPERTY

City Asks That They Be Made to Pay Average.

Between 10,000 and 12,000 owners of improved real estate who have evaded payment of fair taxes are now being investigated by the board of education and the city government. These property owners will be asked later to explain why they should not contribute like other taxpayers to the police, fire, health, school, and other municipal services.

The facts regarding each property, as collected by the city and board, will be presented to the board of review, which will be asked to increase the tax valuation on each parcel. The city and the board will ask only that the valuation be boosted to the average, as determined by a preliminary investigation, which means a full value of less than half of the actual value of the property.

Check Assessed Values.

This preliminary inquiry involved 600 pieces of real estate, with samples of all improved real estate up to a value of $700,000 for one particular property. The total sale value of these properties as indicated by the federal revenue stamps on deeds in the recorder's office was $18,780,223. In the face of those figures the board of assessors and the board of review declared that the full value of these same properties is only $6,298,324, and consequently their assessed value is $3,149,162.

The full value on the 600 parcels of real estate as fixed by the tax assessing bodies is 33.5 per cent of the actual sale value, and the assessed value is only 16.75 per cent.

The 10,000 to 12,000 property owners of which the city and school board complain have valuations below the average. The plan is to bring them up to that mark.

Only Big Property on List.

To obtain the list of evaders, approximately 17,000 pieces of property have been investigated outside of the loop and the stockyards. In the canvass, property only has been listed of a value of $50,000 or more, which means that apartment buildings of six flats or more and business and industrial property only are on the complaint list.

For the loop, the Manufacturers' Appraisal company of Philadelphia has been employed. It will place a value on all property within the area south of the river to Roosevelt road and from the lake to the south branch. The preliminary investigation indicates that owners of loop property have been paying a larger tax relatively than others in Chicago. For assessment purposes a large percentage has a valuation of more than 50 per cent of the real value, according to the city's test. Much of it is listed at 70 and 80 per cent of its full value.

Political Pull Blamed.

One instance was found where the full value for assessing purposes was about 15 per cent of the actual value of the property, according to the city's investigators. Political pull is given as the reason for this apparent evasion of an equitable tax.

The property in the stockyards also is to be given special investigation.

The remainder of property in Chicago is being checked up by the city and board of education with employes engaged and directed by them. In the preliminary investigation it was ascertained that improved property valued below $2,500 pays larger taxes proportionately than any other property in the city, except, perhaps, the loop. On the cheap property "the full value" of the assessing bodies was found in the preliminary inquiry to be 51.7 per cent of the actual value.

A Comparison of Values.

The percentage was found to be 42.5 per cent on property of sale value between $2,500 and $5,000. On property between $5,000 and $200,000 sale value, the percentage varied from 30.7 to 34.3. Above $200,000 the percentage jumped back to 42.2.

In the preliminary canvass three pieces of property of an estimated sale value of less than $5,000 were found where "the full value" of the assessors was more than the actual value. It is alleged that the owners of these parcels were without political pull.

Then average sale values have been reckoned on real estate transfers made during 1924 and involve only improved property.

It is hoped by the process outlined to increase tax valuations so that the city and board of education will have a much larger income in 1927.

China's Imports of Liquor Doubled Within Ten Years

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, June 26.—China is rapidly filling the void in the European liquor markets caused when America went dry. This was proved today by the publication of statistics showing the rapid increase of the importation of intoxicants. China's importation of whisky, brandy, and wines have more than doubled since 1914. Investigation also shows China is learning to produce native rice wines synthetically, as the importation of raw alcohol, chiefly from the Philippines, is increasing.

U. S. JEWS GIVE $20,000,000 TO COLONIZE RUSSIA

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, June 26.—A large majority of American Jews are in favor of the American government recognizing soviet Russia, according to Dr. Joseph Rosen, director of the American Joint Distribution committee, which has collected $20,000,000 in the United States to colonize Jews on farm lands in the Ukraine.

In an interview published in the Leningrad Krasnya Gazette Dr. Rosen says only a few Jewish social and democratic papers, such as the New York Vorwærts and a few of the Jewish labor unions oppose recognition.

The American Jewry, continues Dr. Rosen, has decided it is better to assist the Russian plan for colonizing Jews in the Kherson district, averting future pogroms, instead of helping Palestine at present. Of the 3,000,000 Jews in Russia he estimates that more than 1,000,000 are unable to earn a living, so the colonization plan was voted preference over the Palestine project by a meeting of the American Jews in New York.

Dr. Rosen is enthusiastic over the way the soviet government is dealing with the problem of national minorities. He says that during the next three years a total of $25,000,000 will be collected in the United States to help the Russian Jews.

The energetic way in which the American Joint Distribution committee is taking hold of the Jewish problem shows that the American Jewry believes that a modification of the Johnson immigration law is unlikely and that there is little possibility of assisting the Jews to emigrate to the United States.

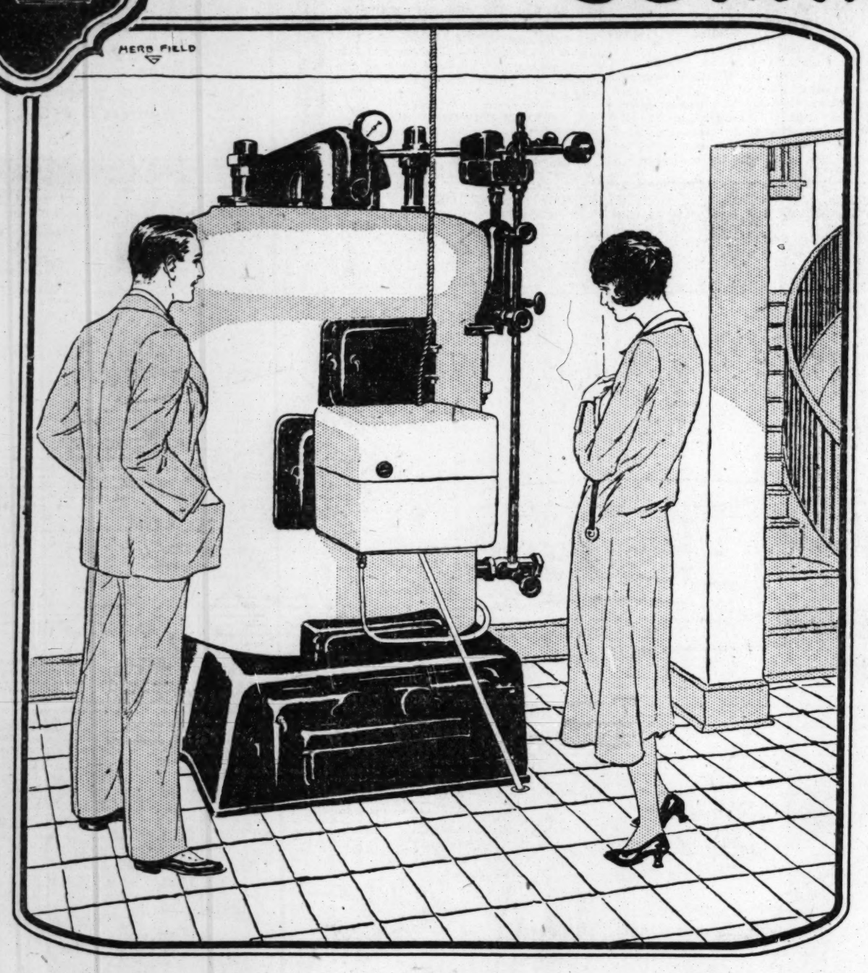
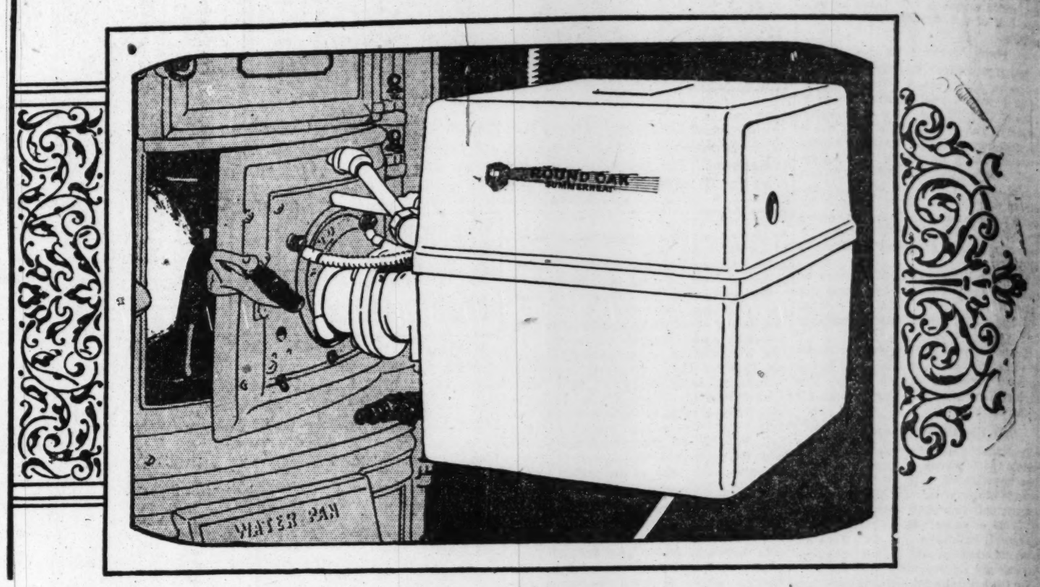
ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT



Automatic Fuel Oil Burner

For Any Type of Heating Plant



Something You have Believed Impossible in Home Heating

If you are familiar with Automatic Fuel Oil Burners, you will probably be amazed at the things we say here about the ROUND OAK "SUMMERHEAT." They seem too good to be true until you know the facts.

But just remember that ROUND OAK "SUMMERHEAT" is built by the Round Oak Folks, who have pioneered in home heating development for more than half a century—without once failing to fulfill a promise to the public. And remember further that the ROUND OAK reputation is behind every statement made on this page.

A Distinct Step Forward

"SUMMERHEAT" is as simple in construction as it is effective in service. We built it that way because no one wants a complicated heating plant. It can be installed in two hours' time—and can be adjusted instantly to any home heating plant, large or small, simply by turning a small motor control knob.

It is not necessary to remove your furnace grates or dismantle the heating plant in any way. Coal, wood, coke, garbage or any fuel may be burned at any time without a moment's notice. Thus you are guarded from any possibility of having a cold home through unexpected oil shortage or unforeseen mechanical failure.

Look What's Back of It!

The Round Oak Folks—54 Years' Experience—$4,000,000 Capital

Here Are Some of the Things You Have Wanted—

You have wanted an oil burner that would permit you to burn coal, coke or wood at any time without disturbing the burner.

You can do it with "SUMMERHEAT"!

You have wanted an oil burner that really has two speeds, working entirely automatic—so as to eliminate the explosive beginning and allow any combination: (low and high fire) (high and low fire) (clear on and clear off).

"SUMMERHEAT" has it!

You have wanted an oil burner with a small, variable-speed motor that is never required to run at full speed, and yet have a heating capacity ranging from a cottage furnace to a large steam boiler.

"SUMMERHEAT" has it!

SOX AND BROWNS DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER

ROBINSON WINS CITY AMATEUR GOLF CROWN

Beats Dunlap in the Final, One Up.

BY MORROW KRUM.

GIBSON DUNLAP.

The final match was a battle of youth. Robinson passed his twenty-first birthday last winter and Dunlap is only 17.

The result was in doubt up to the home green, although Robinson at most of the way and never was down. At the ninth Eldridge was 1 up. Gibson squared it at the thirteenth.

Robinson won the fourteenth and they halved the last 4 holes, Dunlap making a 35 foot putt on the seventeenth to get the half. On the eighteenth Dunlap held a 10 foot putt to halve, forcing Robinson to sink a four footer to win the title.

Robinson a Little Better.

That's the way Dunlap played all up—courageous, seemingly unmindful of his opponent and making shots that would have done credit to a Jones. But Robinson was always as good or a little better. Robinson, who had come through the semi-finals by the default of Rial Rolfe, whose mother is ill, won the first hole of the match by being on in 2 and down in 2. Dunlap was short on his approach. The second and third were halved and Robinson sliced his drive on the fourth, putting him the hole. The match was squared.

Robinson sank a 40 foot putt on the fifth for a birdie 4 and won the hole. On the sixth, a water hole, Eldridge's mashie shot found the drink and the match was squared again. The seventh was halved.

Sinks 40 Foot Putt.

Robinson made a remarkable run-up approach on the eighth. His tee shot left him in the trees and he had a stymie to carry, but could get no altitude on account of the leaves. He took a mashie niblick and bounced the ball over the stymie on the green. It was a great tennis or squash racquet shot, but it put the ball on to the carpet. To top it off, Robinson sank a 40 foot downhill putt for a birdie 3 and won the hole, putting him 1 up. The ninth was halved and another long putt gave Eldridge the tenth.

Dunlap sank a 25 foot putt on the twelfth, after halving the eleventh, and won the hole. That left him one down, and he squared things on the thirteenth with a par 4 after Robinson went over the green on an approach.

On the fourteenth Dunlap was short in an approach and lost to Eldridge's par 4. The fifteenth and sixteenth were halved. Dunlap was 1 down.

Eighteenth Halved.

Dunlap's tee shot on the seventeenth went to the left rough and a lucky recovery from the weeds dropped the ball 3 yards short of the green. Robinson was on in 2, up in 1, and seemed sure to win the match, 2 and 1. Dunlap had a 25 foot putt to halve. He studied it with extraordinary care and sank it. The eighteenth was halved and Robinson was the victor and the champion of the district.

The morning round between Dunlap and Arthur Sweet of Edgewood Valley was filled with excitement. The first nine was a thrilling struggle and they made the turn with Sweet 1 up.

Dunlap squared things at the thirteenth and sank a 28 foot putt for a birdie 3 on the fourteenth. That putt preserved Sweet somewhat and he could do nothing better than halve the next two. Dunlap won the seventeenth in par and Sweet needed 4 strokes after being trapped twice. The match ended there with the youngster victor, 2 and 1.

How They Scored.

MISS WILSON OF ONWENTSIA WINS BUFFALO TITLE

Buffalo, N. Y., June 26.—(AP)—Miss Virginia Wilson, Onwentsia Country club, Chicago, won the championship of the BuffaloCountry club's women's international invitation golf tournament this afternoon. She defeated Mrs. Edith Hutchings, Buffalo champion, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Norman K. oerge of New York won the consolation fight of the championship division by default from Mrs. C. E. Harwood of Chicago. Mrs. C. B. Fisher, New York, defeated Miss Bertha Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., one up, in the beaten sixteen division.

Finish Plans for Homewood Races, Betting

BY FRENCH LANE.
(Pictures on back page.)

Promoters of the new race track at Homewood announced last night that plans are virtually complete for the opening of a 31 day racing season next Saturday afternoon. It is the first race track to be built in Cook county in more than a quarter of a century and the first ever to attempt to operate the pari-mutuel system of wagering in conjunction with the running horses.

ROBT. M. SWEITZER
[Moffett Photo.]

Homewood does not plan to call its betting the pari-mutuels. The betting checks politely will be referred to as certificates, the sellers will be known as brokers and the winnings will be known as earnings.

Test Betting Laws.

In the face of a law which has been effective for 22 years, and has kept all tracks closed except at spasmodic intervals when attempts were made to revive racing with one form or another of bookmaking prevailing, the track at Homewood will be the first to test the statutes which make race gambling illegal in this state.

The Illinois Jockey club controls the new track, which is to be called the Washington Park course. Its president is Robert M. Sweltzer, county clerk, and its backers include state, county, and city officials.

Without making public their plans for hurdling the legal barrier which transformed old Washington park into a residential district, changed Harlem from a race track into a golf course, and closed all the other tracks where the thoroughbreds had been running and which still exists on the statute books, the promoters at Homewood have completed their plans for the opening in the face of repeated assertions by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe that he will not permit betting of any kind.

They plan, according to reports, to test the law in the courts, have retained lawyers to fight their battle, and if State's Attorney Crowe interferes with their sport, it is understood the Jockey club heads will go into the courts and ask for an injunction restraining him from making arrests at the track.

Dodge the Issue.

This may bring on a legal battle and will test a form of speculation at race tracks which has been held legal by the high courts in some states and illegal in others.

The pari-mutuel betting pavilion is all but complete at Washington park, photographs taken there revealed yesterday.

When asked how they were going to operate the certificate mutuel form of betting with State's Attorney Crowe claiming he will stop it and all other forms of speculation, the officials of the jockey club, some of them the politicians who have backed the building of the new track, smiled and talked of the prominent turfmen who are bringing their horses to Washington park.

Joe Catterinish of Montreal, Canada, stockholder in a half dozen race tracks in Canada and this country, who in published reports was credited with having required the certificate mutuel privileges at Homewood was at the track yesterday.

"I am simply working for the jockey club," he said.

"But how are you going to put this mutuel plant into operation in the face of Prosecutor Crowe's orders?" he was asked.

"I am not in a position to answer that question and can't even say if it will be operated, that part of the program is up to the officials of the club," was his reply.

Suzanne Ill, but Plays at Wimble Nets

BY DON SKENE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WIMBLEDON, England, June 26.—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen evaded doctor's orders and left her sick bed to play at Wimbledon today before a capacity crowd which packed the historic tennis grounds despite the counter attraction of the test cricket match. Against medical advice, Suzanne left her hotel at 6 o'clock this evening looking like the ghost of the great Lenglen who slaughtered Mary K. Browne at Paris a fortnight ago.

Arriving at Wimbledon, Suzanne was paired with the dashing Jean Borotra match with the English team, Nitken and Miss Brown, 6—3, 6—0. The French lost the first game by a love score through Borotra's wildness, then settled down and easily crushed their opponents in the usual Lenglen fashion.

Owing to a slight indisposition, Elizabeth Ryan was not able to appear to play the headline match, scheduled for the center court, against her ancient rival, Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree, the match being postponed until Monday.

Howard Kinsey advanced in the men's single by a hard fought victory over Col. H. G. Mayes, 6—2, 1—6, 6—1, 2—6, 6—3. Kinsey and Vincent Richards then defeated L. J. Carr and E. L. Jones, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2.

Featured by the smashing of three records for the games and the tying of another, athletes representing the I. A. C. romped away with the Central A. A. U. outdoor track and field championships held yesterday on Soldiers' field by scoring 142 points. The C. A. A. was second with 56 points and Lyon put the University of Illinois in third place with six points. The games were held under auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

The well balanced Tri-Color club team coached by Johnny Behr scored in each of the twenty championship events. In two events, the half mile run and 220 yard low hurdles, I. A. C. athletes scored slams, Schwarze Breaks Record.

The first record to be smashed was in the shotput. Herbert Schwarze, University of Wisconsin athlete and holder of the world's indoor record in the event, won the event with an effort of 48 feet 3¼ inches. This performance bettered the old record of 46 feet 8½ inches, made by Arlie Mucks of the C. A. A.

Morgan Taylor, the former Grinnell college athlete, who is a member of the I. A. C team, won the 440 yard three foot hurdles in :55.1, one-tenth of a second faster than the record made by Ray Haas of the I. A.

Phelps Wins Five Mile Run.

H. Phelps, the former University of Iowa athlete, who is now running under the colors of the C. A. A., won the five mile run in the record breaking time of 26:22.6. The former mark was 26:24.6 and was made by Joie Ray of the I. A. C. several years ago.

Loren Murchison of the I. A. C. won the final of the 100 yard dash in :09.8, which ties the Central A. A. U. record held jointly by T. J. Huff, Joe Loomis, and A. Ward of the C. A. A. and Albert Washington, an unattached sprinter.

Charley Thompson won the track and field championship for Dowling council of the Knights of Columbus. This athlete won the 100 and 220 yard dashes and placed his team in second position in the one mile relay.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

WHENCE COMES HELP! HELP!

FOR our own information and amusement, originally, The Wake kept a record of the last 10,000 communications forwarded to this column. The result was surprising. It certainly is a testimonial to the wide circulation of THE TRIBUNE. Possibly Helpers will be interested in the figures.

These letters came from forty-five of the United States, eight foreign countries, and the District of Columbia. In this country only Maine, Delaware, and Idaho were missing. Illinois naturally led, with Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan following in order, thus conforming in a general way to TRIBUNE circulation.

States from which ten or more letters were received are:

Chicago	5,739	Nebraska	29
Illinois (other)	1,996	California	20
Iowa	517	New Mexico	19
Wisconsin	490	Kansas	18

Foreign countries were: Cuba, 9; Canada, 7; Germany, 2; Africa, 1; Spain, 1; Austria, 1; Norway, 1; Mexico, 1.

Don't Cry.

"There, don't cry, little man;
Mommy will kiss it away.
A hard little bump—yes, it is,
And it hurts just awful, you say.
See, your little white dog,
Your little red train,
And your big picture book.
. . . Shall we play once again?
There, dry those big tears,
Mommy's big little man. . . ."
A sly little smile comes through
Those wet tears. . . .
Just . . . happy . . . I am.

Vacation Impends.

That period in the calendar has arrived when one thinks of vacation. Because on Tuesday morning The Wake and family start in the family bus for Quebec via Niagara Falls, Toronto, Kingston, then a boat through the Thousand Islands to Montreal, and thence to destination. If we pass a golf course we'll turn our head away. If we see a race track we'll think of Pompey. Upon our return, in two weeks, Helpers, we bespeak again your kindly Help! Help! Thank you.

Nearly three weeks ago we gave up golf in disgust. Scarcely a day has passed since that some good fellow has not suggested a round on the links. We were weakening. We could not have held out much longer. Now comes vacation. On our return? Well, we'll wait and see.

Militant Cardinals Batter Down Cubs in Seventh, 8-7

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., June 26.—In the seventh inning today this big Cardinal team of St. Louis went through the Cubs like a fast freight train and took a ball game away from the McCarthy boys after it seemed to be salted down and laid on the shelf. The score was 8 to 7 and the St. Louis forces rapped in six of the runs in that rampant seventh, the knockout being a home run by Hornsby with two men on.

ROGERS HORNSBY.
[Tribune Photo.]

For six innings our Percy Jones, who has been one of the club's best bench warmers for the last month, seemed to have the Cardinals completely subdued. But in the seventh Percy blew, filling the bases with none out and Carley Root rushed from the bullpen to save the game. At the time the Cubs were leading by four runs. Mr. Root, with all his speed and cleverness, failed. He made one batter pop up, but the next two slapped out singles and Root was yanked, Guy Bush taking up the job.

Away Goes Game.

When Bush appeared the Cubs still were in front by one run, but the Cards had a man on third and one on first and none other than Hornsby, the rajah of the Mound City, was the man coming up to bat. Bush wound up and let one fly. Mr. Hornsby took one step forward and met the ball with his hefty bat and away it went into the distant bleacher seats in right center and the ball game went with it.

It was Billy Sherdel on the rubber against Jones at the start and the Cubs liked his southpaw benders. In the first round singles by Adams and Scott and a pass to Wilson filled the bases and in this crisis, with two out, Charley Grimm crashed a triple to right center, sending in three mates.

The Cards got one off Percy in their half because he walked Blades and Douthit, and Bottomley singled after Percy had fanned Hornsby. But in the fourth the Cubs got that one back on a double by Stephenson and a single by Cooney, and they knocked out Sherdel in the sixth, when they scored two more on singles by Stephenson, Grimm, and Cooney and a sacrifice fly by Hartnett.

That Noisy Seventh.

The Cards pushed one over in their half of the sixth when Hornsby clouted a two bagger against the right wall after Holm had singled and Douthit had walked. Then came the seventh. Bell opened with a double to left. O'Farrell followed with one to right. Scott misjudged it or he might have caught it. Bell went only to third on that blow. Our Percy was sore. He lost control and walked Thevenow, filling the bases. That was all for Percy. Came Mr. Root, who made Holm pop up to Scott in short right. Nobody scored. But Blades socked a single to right that counted Bell and left the bases filled. Douthit smashed one to center that tallied O'Farrell and Thevenow and sent Blades to third. Exit Mr. Root. Enter Mr. Bush. He pitched once to the Rajah and, bam, went the ball and the game.

Lyons Is Beaten; Thomas Wins.

100 Hits for Falk

BY making five hits yesterday, four of them in the second game of the double bill with the Browns, Bib Falk, White Sox outfielder, tied with George Burns of Cleveland in being the first major league player to make 100 hits this season. Burns got two in two games while Falk was making five. Their records:

Falk	69	264	38	100	.379
Burns	68	273	43	100	.366

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
(Pictures on page 3.)

The White Sox would have declared a one hundred per cent profit on the afternoon's toil yesterday if a few unexpected things hadn't befallen young Ted Lyons. Disturbed by an error, he fell apart in the ninth round of the first portion of a double header and the lowly Browns smacked him for a 5 to 4 trimming, whereupon the pals hose came back and attained an even break by copping the second half of the show by a 6 to 3 margin before 17,000 more or less congealed customers.

ALPHONSE THOMAS.

The nightcap worked out satisfactorily for the Collins troupe because Tommy Thomas, the Baltimore blond, refused to do as Lyons had done. Tommy had one bad inning due to some bum luck, but aside from that was a well nigh perfect hurler and finished with only five hits against his record.

Sisler Steals Home.

In the opening battle Lyons had quite an even argument with Jezebel Tecumseh Zachary, the former Washington southpaw. With a few things such as a homer into the left field seats by Hunnefield in the sixth and a single by Barrett and double by Kamm in the seventh the Sox were able to get into possession of a 3 to 2 lead, and with Lyons going well even that slim margin looked sufficiently potent to cop. It wasn't, however, but there is a possibility that Lyons might have weathered the last round successfully if Boss Collins, in his anxiety to make a double play, hadn't chucked the ball away.

The ninth round of Lyons' defeat started with Williams batting for Zachary. He singled. Durst did the same and Williams legged it for third. Melillo lined into Collins' hands and the manager tried to shoot the ball to Sheely to catch Durst off first, but his aim was bad, so Williams ran home and Durst raced to second. Sisler promptly singled Durst across and went to second on the throw in. A fly ball moved him to third and then without serving notice of his intentions he stole home.

Sox Win Final Game.

When the second round of the nightcap was completed it looked as if the Sox might be in for another disappointment. Three Browns registered in that chapter, which was Thomas' only shaky inning. Two clean singles with a pass scored two of the runs and another went over because Barrett, getting the sun in his eyes, let Wingard's fly ball for a double. After that jolting Thomas acted to suit himself and nobody even reached second base on him.

The Sox started to whittle down the hostiles' lead by getting one in their half of the second on hits by Falk and Barrett. In the third they did a bit better by scoring twice and tying matters. A pass to Thomas followed by hits off the clubs

Victories Raise Detroit to First Division.

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—[Special.]—Detroit went into the first division today, defeating Cleveland in a double header, 5 to 0 and 7 to 2. The Tigers now have won six consecutive games.

Edwin Wells, Tiger southpaw, held the Indians to five hits in the opener and was accorded sensational support. Detroit won the game with a four run rally. In the afterpiece Gibson went the route while Buckeye was taken out in the 7th for a pinch hitter. The Tigers clinched the game in the eighth when Shaute was found for five hits, which with an error netted five runs. Scores:

Anglers War on Pike as Enemy of Bass, Muskie

BY BOB BECKER.

The big Great Lakes pike, commonly called northern pike or in some localities the pickerel, is the orphan child, the friendless member of the finny tribes along the Minnesota boundary, in Ontario and in other parts of the middle west fishing country. This voracious, long jawed cousin of the muskellunge (mascolonge or 'lunge in Canada) has been condemned and nary a friend or reprieve can be found for him among the officials who watch over forests and streams in the north country.

The big pike, a fair game fish when it has consumed a couple of tons of smaller fish and thereby attained a good weight, has few friends because it indulges a prodigious appetite which means the death of many game fish in a season.

A few days ago we were consulting with Roy Jones of Chicago, regarding canoe routes and fishing in the Superior National forest of northern Minnesota. Jones reported that the Canadian officials who watch over the beautiful country of forests and lakes just north of the forests also are down on the big pike in their waters and wish their numbers depleted.

There are some unbelievably fine bass waters in the Superior National forest and adjacent Canadian country, but there are also lakes over which the big pike has control.

PIRATES SLIP IN FLAG RACE; LOSE TO REDS, 9 TO 1

Errors Help Cincinnati Gain Victory.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 26.—[Special.]—The Reds tightened their grip on first place today by trimming the Pirates, 9 to 1. The world's champs were helpless before the pitching of Mays and were weak on defense. Eddie Moore, subbing at short for Wright, had a terrible day, his misplays giving the visitors four of their runs. Score:

BOOT TO BOOT WINS AT LATONIA IN RECORD TIME

Latonia, Ky., June 26.—(AP)—Boot to Boot, three-year-old Idle Hour farm color bearer, showed he is a remarkable thoroughbred when he established a new track record for the Latonia course today by running a mile and 70 yards in 1:41 3-5, one-fifth of a second faster than the former mark.

The time was a second behind the American record made by Winnipeg at Maple Heights.

Rhinock finished second to Boot to Boot and Kentucky Cardinal third.

Cubs' Boss Gives Players on Bench No Time to Nap

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., June 26.—Everywhere the Cubs have stopped on this rather distressing tour of the National league circuit people have asked this question:

"What kind of a fellow is Joe McCarthy?"

To one and all we have given the same answer: "We don't know."

Here we are in St. Louis, the seventh city visited since the Cubs left Chicago, and still one couldn't possibly know Joe McCarthy well, though he has been a member of the touring party. Indications are that in the year 1932 one will be able to tell people what kind of a man Mr. McCarthy is, providing he has traveled with him most of the time between now and then. It takes a long time to figure him out.

JOE McCARTHY.

His Moods Changeable.

McCarthy is the kind of a fellow who will meet you in the hotel lobby one evening and take you by the arm, tell you a couple of funny stories, buy you an ice cream soda and a cigar, sit down and discuss all the intricacies of baseball, discuss the merits and demerits of his players, present glowing theories of what the game needs to make it still better financially and sportively, and then meet you in the same lobby the following night and have nothing for you but a scowl.

But all of the inquirers follow up with the statement:

"He must be a wonder as a manager because just see what he has done with the Cubs—had them up with the leaders most all of this time and yet there isn't a real ball player on the club."

That's the opinion folks over the country have of our Cubs.

But, leaving the Cubs and getting back to their manager, we wish to say that, though he still may be a busher to all his rival managers, there are indications that he has some corking baseball ideas, or at least something new, and along with it plays the game of percentages from start to finish.

One of his new ideas, for instance, is having a coach for the fellows who are sitting on the bench. Mike Doolan, the old time infield star, has that job, along with a lot of other duties, such as giving personal instruction to young infielders, conducting morning practice when at home, and bossing the batting practice on the field before the game.

Coaching on the bench is something new. Even John McGraw never thought of that. Of course, it seems silly to coach fellows who are not in the game, but it has happened in the past that bench warmers actually have gone to sleep during the game and perhaps it was necessary in an intense moment to wake up some burly batter to go up and hit in a pinch.

No Chance for Nap.

Just try to sleep on the Cub bench with Mike Doolan there. He is so full of fire and brimstone during a game that he has all the bench warmers wearing out the seats of their pants, sliding back and forth with the tide of battle and when a pinch hitter or a base runner is needed, there is a man there full of pepper to step up to do his stuff. That's a McCarthy idea. There must be a dozen more of equal merit but an outsider can't determine them.

One reason McCarthy isn't better known to the public is because he doesn't know the value of publicity, which of couse has nothing to do whatever with winning a game of ball out on the field. A reporter met him in a hotel in Philadelphia.

"Any news?" the reporter asked.

"Nothing except that I have suspended Alexander indefinitely," was McCarthy's reply. And Mr. McCarthy seemed surprised at the haste the reporter made to get to the telegraph office.

BRADLEY STABLE BOY STARS IN ROLE OF JOCKEY

L. Craver Makes Good from Start.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Edward R. Bradley has spent a fortune for jockey contracts in the last half dozen years, but a lad whose services cost him scarcely anything may become the saddle star of the famous Idle Hour farm turf establishment.

L. Craver is the youngster's name, and the way he has been booting the winners home in Lexington, Churchill Downs, and Latonia this spring indicates he may become the stable s first string rider when another season rolls around.

L. Lyke, E. Blind, and Dickie Johnson are some of the jockeys whose contracts have cost Bradley enormous sums, and while Blind and Johnson have drawn the more important Bradley mounts this season, neither has rolled up a record much better than the one young Craver is making.

Makes Good from Start.

Craver still was regarded as a Bradley farm stable boy when the spring season opened this year, although he had ridden in numerous races. At Lexington, when Johnson was put out of commission by illness, Craver got his chance, and he showed such skill he graduated from the stable boy ranks within a few days, and as he continued to improve, became one of the busiest jockeys in Kentucky.

He has made good in nearly every instance, while Blind and Johnson have not shown great improvement over last year's form, and many shrewd turfmen have charged the defeat of Bagenbaggage in the Fairmount Derby to Blind, who moved so late in the stretch run with the speedy son of Under Fire he was beaten a nose by Haste, in one of the most sensational races of the summer.

Easterner Rides Bubbling Over.

When Owner Bradley had to go into the east and recruit Arthur Johnson to pilot Bubbling Over in the Kentucky Derby it was the first indication he did not have complete confidence in the riding ability of Blind or Johnson. They are youngsters and lightweights. Observers of the Bradley stable say the owner is becoming more impressed with the wizardry of Craver each day, and it will not be surprising when Bubbling Over goes east for his campaign at Saratoga if Craver is picked to pilot him in the more important stake engagements.

Except for Craver, there have been few young jockeys to show unusual skill this season. Two or three winter track stars have been tried and found wanting in Kentucky, and G. Philpot has been showing ability at Fairmount. He is the contract rider for W. T. Anderson, owner of Carlaris. In the Chicago district Tommy McElroy is the most promising prospect.

LOCKHART MAY BE BANNED FROM THE DIRT TRACKS

Washington, D. C., June 26.—(AP)—Frank Lockhart, winner of the Indianapolis speedway automobile race, has been notified by the American Automobile association's contest board that he must fulfill a contract to race at Abilene, Tex., July 5, under threat of suspension from all A. A. A. meets.

The board asserted that after the victory at Indianapolis Lockhart wanted to cancel the Abilene agreement, made prior to that race. It also asserted that "his first taste of fame made him forget the dirt track contests."

Lockhart is racing in Detroit tomorrow, and the notification of the board's ruling was sent to him there.

HARVARD, YALE CREWS DISBAND AFTER REGATTA

New London, Conn., June 26.—[U. P.]—The Yale and Harvard crews disbanded today with the Eli varsity having completed its fourth consecutive season without defeat. In downing Harvard yesterday on the Thames river, Yale won for the thirty-second time from her rival. The Crimson has taken 27 races.

One of the most serious threats to Yale's record came this year from Harvard.

SKOKIE AWAITS ILLINOIS STATE TENNIS TOURNEY

Tilden Will Not Defend Title.

Chicago's greatest tennis meet, the Illinois state tennis championships, will open tomorrow at the Skokie Country club, Glencoe, with a field of national and international stars shoving off on the long road to the title voluntarily laid aside by Big Bill Tilden, who, for the first time in many years, will not compete.

In the absence of the two Bills, Big and Little, Manuel Alonzo and Vincent Richards, who have been the chief attractions in previous meets, the interest of local fans will center mainly in the playing of the Japanese Davis cup quartet—Shimizu, Harada, Toba, and Tawara. Shimizu and Harada are familiar figures to Chicagoans, but Toba and Tawara are making their bow to fans in this section of the country.

America's hopes of retaining the state title rest largely with five of the younger players of national ranking—Brian Norton, number 9; Wray Brown, number 10; Alfred H. Chapin Jr., number 13, who has two victories over Tilden to his credit this year, and the Chicago pair, George Lott and Luke Williams, ranking 11 and 12, respectively.

Big Bill Tilden, national champion, who has been dividing his time between the tennis court and the stage, has decided not to forsake the footlights for the time being, and will not compete. He is parading his histronic virtues under the spotlight of a Philadelphia theater and cannot cut short the run of his play to defend one of his many tennis titles.

Billy Johnston, second ranking player in the United States, who lost to Tilden in the final of the state meet last year, is another Chicago favorite who will be missing. Little Bill plans to remain on the Pacific coast until late in the summer when he will come east for the Davis Cup play and the national championships. Manuel Alonzo, the Spanish star, also was expected to enter, but he was called back to Spain.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Killian Seibel, 3033 West Grand avenue, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Are you going to attend the Kansas-Mandell lightweight championship boxing match?

Where Asked.

At Cubs' ball park.

The Answers.

William F. Follmer, 2129 N. Springfield avenue, police officer.—I'd be there if I could get a day off, but I'm afraid that won't be possible. It looks like one of the best bouts of the season. When a puncher like Kansas meets a boxer like Mandell there's always lots of action.

A. Wolk, Claridge hotel, checker.—No, I don't think I shall. I'm not interested in boxing. I'd much rather spend my time at a ball park. I don't follow the fight game enough to have an opinion as to the probable winner.

H. G. Johnson, 5922 North Campbell avenue, sales manager.—I'll be there if business doesn't prevent. I think Sammy is the most scientific boxer in the game, and in a short bout like this he ought to win. It ought to make a fine opening attraction for legalized boxing in Illinois.

Carl O. Johnson, 5922 North Campbell avenue, telephone company employé.—I don't plan to attend. I'd rather see a horse race or a ball game. There isn't enough excitement in boxing to interest me. For those who like the sport the Mandell-Kansas encounter ought to be a corker.

R. H. Gasch, Elmhurst, Ill., auditor.—Boxing holds little interest for me, so I am not planning on taking in the opening bout in Chicago. If it were the Chicago-Illinois football game nothing could keep me away. That's a real sport.

Lowe Runs 600 Yards in World Record Time

LONDON, June 26.—(AP)—D. G. A. Lowe today set what was claimed as a world's record at Stamford bridge by running 600 yards in 1:10 2-5.

AUTO RACES TO OPEN THORNTON TRACK TODAY

Les Allen and D. D. Morris, driving twin Frontenacs of 300 inch piston displacement, the biggest cars in the middle west, will hook up in a five mile match. Allen was one of the three leading drivers last season, and Morris is substituting for Cliff Woodbury at the wheel of the car Woodbury used in local dirt track events.

Dutch Baumann and Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis and Walter Martins of Chicago, winners in the American Legion events at Crown Point last week, will meet again on the half-mile speedway. Martins is the only Chicago driver to prove himself capable of beating the Indianapolis entries this season. Emil Buck, Carl Adams, Sonny Talamont, and several others of the more than forty drivers who have nominated cars, however, have good chances of placing.

Greyhounds recently imported from Ireland and England for the thirty-ons evening meetings under the auspices of the Illinois Kennel club will run in the thre events scheduled for them. The first event, a five mile heat of the auto races, will start at 2:30. The Thornton track is at 175th and Halsted streets, directly across from the new Washington park race course.

DUNDEE'S PILOT RETURNS WALKER WEIGHT FORFEIT

Baltimore, Md., June 26.—(AP)—Max Waxman, manager of Joe Dundee, has returned the $500 forfeit he accepted from Mickey Walker when Walker was above the agreed poundage in Thursday night's battle in New York. Dundee won a technical knockout in the eighth round. Waxman said he was prompted in his action by Walker's "splendid spirit" in defeat.

Gertrude Plans to Eat Salad in Channel Swim

BY GERTRUDE EDERLE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE GRIS-NEZ, France, June 26.—My training has crippled Pop, who is still game but who limps like a veteran of many wars. Walking being my principal exercise, we went to Wishant, a pretty village eight miles up the coast from Gris-Nez. It was low tide and we walked all the way along the wide, white sand beach. After a chocolate at Wishant, we started to return home, but Pop and Helmy, the Egyptian swimmer, were not content to walk. Pop challenged Helmy to a 100 yard dash. Helmy gave Pop a 25 yard advantage. Pop won by ten yards. He was very upstage until he awoke this morning feeling as if he had been riding horseback for a week.

Margaret returned today from Paris, where she searched without success for a new kind of silk of which she heard, which sounded ideal for a bathing suit for channel swimming. The silk described weighs no more than a feather yet is not transparent. Finally she bought a dark blue jersey silk of which we will make bruzers, which, with short trunks, I'll wear during my channel attempt, instead of the ordinary bathing suit.

Instead of being fed beef tea every hour, as was done during my channel swim last year, I plan to eat several times during the swim this year and have more solid food. I asked Burgess, the trainer, if I could have a piece of chicken after I have been out about five hours and later some lettuce salad. He agrees it may be a good plan but wants we first to take a long trial swim during which he will feed me chicken and salad.

I am swimming in earnest now. I expect to swim a little longer each day so with luck I may be able to make my attempt across the channel in the latter part of July. I hope to be in shape in another week or ten days to swim from Boulogne to Gris-Nez, a distance of twelve miles.

SAMMY MANDELL GOT FIVE CENTS FOR FIRST BOUT

Brother Joe Was His Opponent.

BY ARCHIE WARD.

Teddy Bodkins, an old follower of the cauliflower industry, knew that Sammy Mandell, who meets Rocky Kansas Saturday for the lightweight championship of the world, had the makings of a champion long before he donned the upholstered mitts.

EDDIE KANE.

Ten years ago Sammy and his brother, Joe, who later established something of a reputation as a bantamweight boxer, spent their spare time around the Northwestern railroad yards in Rockford, Ill. Both were known as the fightingest youngsters of their size in the neighborhood. Bodkins, who at that time was a meat salesman with headquarters in Rockford, used to offer the boys a nickel for fighting on the station platform.

These brotherly scuffles were the start of a career which promises to climax in the greatest honor any boxer can hope to attain—a world's champion ship.

Awaits First Title Bout.

Sammy now is 22 years old and is recognized the country over as one of the cleverest, brainiest, and most gentlemanly battlers in the lightweight division. He has fought his way up through the bantamweight, featherweight, junior lightweight and lightweight ranks, but next Saturday will be his first bid for championship honors.

he door of fistic opportunity has been opening and closing in his face for more than a year, notably in the New York commission's elimination tournament a year ago when he lost his bout with Jimmy Goodrich on a foul after having drubbed the New Yorker decisively in the five rounds their engagement lasted.

There may be easier assignments than predicting the next lightweight champion of the world, but you can't convince the 85,000 who inhabit Rockford, Sammy's home town. They are so sure Sammy will lift Kansas' titular toga that if he disappoints, thousands will hurl themselves into the murky waters of the Rock river Saturday night.

Sammy Strong for Rockford.

Rockford loves Sammy Mandell and Sammy loves Rockford. He walks the streets of Rockford because he claims Rockford has the best streets in America. He buys his clothes in Rockford because there are no finer clothes in the universe. When he's away for a bout he catches the first train back to his home friends, because he can't find people anywhere who compare with the folks in Rockford.

Before Sammy fought Johnny Dundee, then junior lightweight champion, at East Chicago two years ago the Knights of Columbus gave a banquet in Sammy's honor. Among the guests were the lieutenant governor of Illinois, the mayor of Rockford, priests, lawyers, bankers. After he conquered Sid Terris a year later a motor caravan met him at the outskirts of the city and he was paraded up and down the streets of the business section. He was officially welcomed by Mayor Herman Hallstrom at a monster reception.

Born in Italy.

Born in southern Italy, Sammy came to America with his father, brother, and sisters when he was three years old. His mother died in the old country. After a short residence in Chicago the family moved to Rockford and became part of that colony known as Little Italy.

As Sammy's speed and ring generalship increased, so grew the family's resources, and three years ago he bought a $15,000 home for his father on Harlem boulevard, the leading residential street of the city. After his bout with Sid Terris, for which he received nearly $15,000, he retired his father from the foundry where he had toiled for many years.

Teddy Bodkins, whose five cent purses helped to interest Sammy in boxing, was Mandell's manager until he no longer was able to give the time to the work that it required. He turned over the Rockford flash to the Kane and Long stable of Chicago. When that firm dissolved Sammy went with Kane, who is his present boss.

Manager Sure He'll Win.

What does Kane think of Sammy's chance to whip Kansas and win the lightweight championship?

This was his opinion yesterday:

"Sammy has that title in a bag. He's got to be careful, of course, for Kansas can punch, but jot it down in your notebook that Sammy Mandell will be the lightweight champion of the world before sundown Saturday."

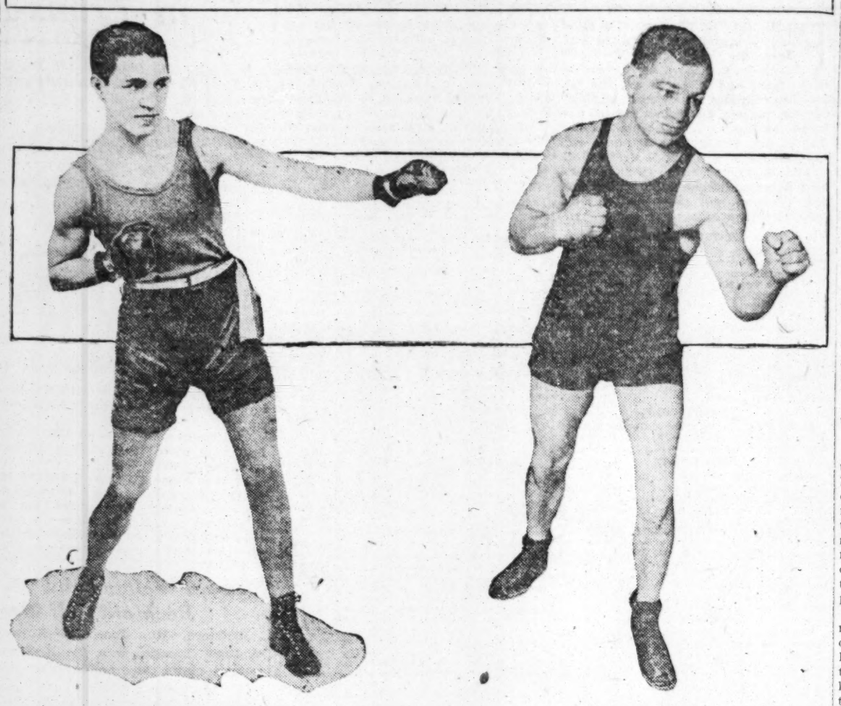
Sammy took out his citizenship papers a few months ago.

The show, which will be held at White Sox park, will start at 3 o'clock. The main bout is scheduled to go on about 5:30 daylight savings time.

BOYS' WEEK AT MONTREAL.

A feature of Boys' week in Montreal will be an indoor lacrosse match between a team composed of Indian youngsters from the Caughnawaga reservation and a group of Montreal youngsters.

RIVALS IN CHICAGO OPENER



SAMMY MANDELL. ROCKY KANSAS.

The lightweight championship of the world will be at stake when Rocky Kansas, title holder, meets Sammy Mandell, foremost challenger, at White Sox park July 3 in the first legalized boxing bout in Chicago for more than 20 years.

Williams and Lott Lose in Doubles Play

Indianapolis, Ind., June 26.—(AP)—Alfred Chapin, Springfield, Mass., and John Hennessey, Indianapolis, today won the western clay court tennis doubles championship and the right to represent the district in the national doubles to be played later in the summer. They defeated George M. Lott and Lucien Williams, Chicago, 2—6, 6—3, 7—5, 1—6, 6—3.

The women's double championship was won by Miss Olga Weil and Miss Clara Zinke, Cincinnati. They defeated the Misses Marion Hearson and Helen Canfield, Detroit, 7—5, 6—3.

Chapin advanced to the final round of the men's singles after a grueling five set battle with Hennessy. The score was 4—6, 4—6, 6—1, 8—6, 6—4. Chapin will play B. I. C. Norton, San Antonio, Tex., for the title tomorrow. Norton had little difficulty eliminating Lott in the other semi-final by a score of 6—4, 7—5, 6—3.

Mrs. Alfred Chapin and Miss Marion Leighton, Chicago star, will compete for the women's singles championship. Mrs. Chapin defeated Miss Clara Zinke, Cincinnati, 7—5, 6—2, while Miss Leighton eliminated Miss Olga Weil, Cincinnati, 8—6, 7—5.

YALE WINS POLO TITLE; DEFEATS HARVARD, 11 TO 4

Rye, N. Y., June 26.—(AP)—Yale won the Bullard trophy, symbolic of the intercollegiate polo championship, today when the Eli horsemen galloped to a decisive 11 to 4 triumph over Harvard in the final round of the tournament at the Westchester Biltmore Country club.

Winifred F. C. Guest, son of Capt. Fred Guest, British internationalist, played the leading rôle for the Elis, shattering the Harvard defense with a total of seven goals.

CREWS FINISH TRAINING GRIND AT POUGHKEEPSIE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 26.—(AP)—Nineteen crews, the greatest assemblage of college oarsmen any regatta has ever seen, have come close to the end of their long siege of preparation for the races that will determine intercollegiate championships Monday evening along the Hudson. Eight varsity, six junior varsity, and five freshman boatloads are assembled, fit and hopeful, for the three features of this spectacular eight oared battle.

Overnight the center of rowing interest has shifted from the picturesque setting of Yale's varsity triumph over Harvard yesterday at New London to the rugged scene of this regatta of nation-wide interest and representation.

Last Drills Today.

The climax of the training grind, tapering off today and tomorrow with light workouts designed to keep the oarsmen on edge, finds this historic rowing center seething with speculation, but also unanimous that the blue ribbon event of the regatta, the four mile varsity pull for the record array of 8 shells, will find Washington and the Navy battling once more for supremacy.

These rivals of east and west, sturdy midshipmen and lean limbed products of the Pacific northwest, have monopolized honors for the last five years, the Navy scoring three and the Huskies two victories. On three occasions they have fought it out, with the Navy victorious twice. Monday, unless all signs and portents go overboard, they will outclass the rest of the field and battle it out again between themselves with each holding an even chance of triumph.

Badgers "Dark Horses."

Of the six other varsity crews, opinion this evening found Wisconsin regarded as the real "dark horse," with a crew which has had no previous competition to test its caliber, but which has turned in several remarkable time trials. Pennsylvania likewise has its supporters, while Cornell may spring a surprise.

PITCHER DROPS DEAD IN SANDLOT BASEBALL GAME

Richmond, Va., June 26.—(AP)—Floyd B. Chewning, 19, of Richmond, fell dead from heart failure today while pitching in an amateur baseball game. The bases were full when he sagged and plunged to the ground, and it is believed his heart failed because of excitement superinduced by the pitching crisis he faced.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

BY DON MAXWELL.
[Sports Editor.]

Folks who saw that intercity championship baseball game between Lane Tech and Evander Childs High school of New York carried home the remembrance of a number of scenes worth remembering. And, of all the things they saw that afternoon at Cubs' park, nothing will remain with them longer than the sight of that little pitcher from New York.

Nekola was his name. He came to Chicago with a remarkable record of strikeouts and games won. His pitching before that 18,000 was as great as his record. He had a fast ball and a curve and control. Yet it's not the record that they'll remember, nor the scarcity of hits made by Lane.

The thing that they can't forget is Nekola's smile.

He's just a little fellow, slender and light of weight. He looks like a midget when he stands with the rest of his team. But he has the confidence of a giant.

In one of those early innings one of Nekola's teammates dropped an easy fly. And the Lane boy got to first. Some pitchers, working in a championship game, would have shown their displeasure. Little Nekola just twisted his cap and smiled. Another time the umpire called a Lane runner safe when it looked as if he were out. Some pitchers, major league pitchers, attempting to win an important game, would have stormed. Nekola smiled.

Once, when the midget Nekola was at bat, Thorp, pitcher for Lane, threw a fast ball that threatened to take Nekola's head off his shoulders. He saved his head by jumping away. As he did so he turned a handspring to the back of the batter's box. When he got up and dusted his pants he was grinning.

When the seventh inning rolled around the New York team was leading, but its margin wasn't large. Ten thousand young folks started a bedlam. They were trying to rattle New York and encourage Lane. You may have heard the roar of the stands in a world's series game, you may have been deafened by the cheers of a college football crowd, but you never heard voices more shrill nor, worse, more rattling than little Nekola heard when he faced that first Lane batter.

For a few minutes it seemed as if that shouting had shaken his nerve. The first Lane batter walked. There was the time for the high school boy to go to pieces. Many a big league star has lost his nerve under less a strain.

But Nekola just twisted his cap and smiled. And that's what you remember.

Charley Pyle, whose cash and carry methods carried Red Grange to widespread publicity and a great deal of gold on the gridiron last fall, returns to Chicago from California. Grange remains in the west to complete the movie from which Pyle hopes to garner another pile of cash. Pyle explains that the picture will be released in September. In the meantime Mr. Pyle is getting ready for a trip to England, where, he says, he will meet Suzanne Lenglen and complete the arrangements for her tour of these United States under his management.

Pyle believes that Suzanne can play in exhibition matches in this country and retain her amateur standing. And he thinks that he will be able to curb the French tennis star's much heralded temperament. And it would seem that Mr. Pyle is quite confident of performing hitherto unheard of things.

There are several months before the football teams trot out on the gridiron, but it's interesting to hear that Joe Sternaman is talked of as the boss of a new professional football team in Chicago. Rumor says that the dashing little quarter back who played with the Bears last fall will head a team playing under a franchise in Pyle's league. Rumor also says that the Pyle league team will hold its games in White Sox park, with the Cardinals, under Chris O'Brien, playing at Normal park.

Authentic reports state that British golfers, including a number of Scotch pros, are planning to come to this country next summer to take lessons in the finer points of golf.

British Golfers Need Fight and Pep, Says Hagen

LONDON, June 26.—(AP)—British golfers need pep and fight, while the younger ones are "too lazy," in the opinion of Walter Hagen, American professional, as quoted by the London Evening News.

In an interview just before leaving London for the United States, Hagen related what he thinks is the trouble with British golf, especially in view of the sweep which American golfers have made in recent British championships.

Hagen, as quoted by the newspaper, thinks it would be wise for American golfers to stay at home awhile, let British golfers win their own championships for a few years, and then go back to international play.

JONES MAKES U. S. CAPITAL OF GOLF WORLD

LONDON, June 26.—[U. P.]—The victory of Bobby Jones in the British open tournament, following so soon after the triumph of Jess Sweetser in the British amateur, definitely has moved the capital of golfdom 3,500 miles westward.

Americans now reign as securely over the golfing world as they did over tennis before the rise of Rene Lacoste, Jean Borotro, and Henri Cochet. While the United States rnds its tennis supremacy questioned, there can be no doubt that it controls the golfing honors.

That this domination should continue for several years at least is indicated by the youth of the American high ranking amateurs and professionals. There are few British stars under 30.

Next to Jones' victory, which came with a low medal score of 291 that surpassed everything since 1903, when James Braid took the same number of strokes, the most significant outcome of the British open was the work of George Von Elm, who tied with Walter Hagen for third position behind Jones and Al Watrous.

Von Elm is typical of the new generation of American golfers. In his early twenties he had had his own way with Pacific coast tournaments and is still on the way upward.

Jones has one more major golfing crown to annex before he will be satisfied with his record. After making a fine start in the British amateur this year he was beaten in the semi-finals.

BREEZE MAKES MIRACLE SHOT AT GLEN OAK

Drives Eighth Green for First Time.

BY MORROW KRUM.

The usual Saturday afternoon crowd augmented by a large gallery was wandering over the fairways of the Glen Oak Country club. Most of the gallery was intent upon the final of the District Amateur championship, but there was a foursome that was concerned only with their own game. This foursome was composed of J. A. Barkey, president of Glen Oak; Leroy Hackett, Frank Callahan, and Slipper Breeze, the great British amateur.

Barkey, Callahan, and Hackett were entertaining the visitor merrily, the first pair named having won six of the seven holes played from the Britisher and Hackett. The match wasn't for high stakes, but it was interesting enough for Slippr.

Hackett Tries Psychology.

They came to the eighth tee and discussed the matter.

"Well, partner, you're way off your game," said Hackett to Slipper. "They're taking us. Let's see you get on to your game."

Mr. Hackett was not discourteous, but some one had told him that the way to make Slipper play par golf was to scold him.

"All right—just watch me," said Slipper.

He looked at the tee box. "Well, this is just a nice hole for me. Two hundred and seventy yards. Boy, give me my driver."

"But it's 272 yards to carry," protested Hackett. "You haven't an idea in your head that you can get a three here, have you?"

"Why not?"

"It's too far; take a four, be satisfied with a four. It's an easy four."

Slipper studied the hole. The fairway was narrow. The green was banked high 272 yards from the tee. Three traps spread across the fairway in front of the green, making a roll-up impossible. It was an easy four, but an almost impossible three.

"I may not make it," said Slipper, with an unexpected burst of modesty, "but I'll try. Who can do more?"

He Performs Miracle.

Barkey, Hackett, and Callahan were silent. Slipper took his stance and with a swing that seemed to roar as the club sped through the air, struck the ball. It sailed away.

On the tee, four hearts were rising to four throats as the ball dropped. Then four great cheers burst on the air. Slipper had driven the eighth green at Glen Oak, previously considered an impossible task.

"This is a wonderful hole," said Slipper to Mr. Barkey, president. "Whoever put it there knew his business. It gives a man a chance to really lay into a drive. A beautiful hole."

Just then a crowd of men and women who had heard the cheers rushed from the clubhouse. They asked, "What's all the shouting about." They were told that Breze had driven the eighth green. There were exclamations of wonder. There were also shaking of heads.

"Now I'm sure that fellow Slipper Breeze is a fable," one man was heard to say.

The crowd laughed.

Of course, Slipper is a fable. He's a fictitious golfer who plays the most difficult holes in the Chicago district.

Held Conquers Dawson, 7-5, in Trans-Mississippi Golf

St. Louis, Mo., June 26.—[U. P.]Eddie Held, Washington University golfer, playing unbeatable golf, today won the Trans-Mississippi golf title from John Dawson of Chicago, 7 and 5.

EDDIE HELD.

The ace of the Algonquin club shot the morning round in 66 strokes, five under par, to finish 4 up. He increased the lead to 5 up at the 21st hole, and ended the match on the 31st green.

Held's short game, in particular his putting, was largely responsible for his brilliant performance.

The match was won on the thirty-first hole when Held sank a 15 foot putt for a birdie 2.

Dawson made a valiant effort at recovery after being 8 down on 26 holes. He won the next three holes, but he missed a 2 foot putt to halve the next hole and drove out of bounds on the final hole, while Held was going down in two strokes.

Held Shoots a 66.

Held stroked the morning 18 in 6 five under par, for the lowest score of the entire week's play, and four strokes above his course record of 62. That par golf would never win the event was made apparent early in the week when Held in the two day qualifying rounds scored 67—63—135.

As the match play progressed, the Algonquin star eliminated, in order, Frank Siedlick, 15 year old Omaha youth, 4 and 2; George Wheat of Kansas City, 5 and 3; James Manion of St. Louis, Missouri champion, 4 and 3; Jack Pollard, 17, of Omaha, 4 and 2, and then Dawson.

Dawson Wins First Hole.

Dawson in the final match was up on Held only once. That was on the first hole, when the Chicagoan reeled off a birdie 3. Held squared the match on two with a birdie of his own; they halved three, and then Eddie's onward march began, three holes in succession going to his credit.

Dawson was one under par on the first eighteen, but was one over when the thirty-first was played.

MOTORDOM

Experienced Fans Set New Mark for Used Car Demand

Knock-About Machine Saves Money for Motordom.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

ELEVEN thousand good used automobiles are waiting in the Chicago market for the increasing number of experienced motor fans who have discovered the big spring, summer and fall economic value of the second hand car.

Seven hundred dealers in Chicago and Cook county who are members of the Chicago Automobile Trade association reported yesterday that the used stock available on their floors will average ten cars to the dealer. Some of the big distributors such as Charles Gambill, Bird-Sykes, Triangle Motors, the Hollingshead organization, and dealers of General Motor cars offer as high as 50 to 100 reconditioned automobiles with regular service guarantee attached to them. Other dealers reported but one or two used jobs on the floor.

The 200 Chicago specialists in used cars reported an average of 20 automobiles ranging in price from $100 to $4,000 on their floors, and the biggest general demand in years moving them out in double quick time. Practically all of them commented on the unusual rush this year for used automobiles to supplement the new closed cars in the hands of most well to do Chicago motorists and the growing clamor for the knockabout machine needed in summer camps on the lakes, about summer homes and for the vacation trip.

"The wealthy class of car owners were first to discover the cheap transportation costs offered by good used automobiles," said William Beard, secretary of the trade association, in commenting on the dealers' reports. "For two or three years now the people who own big estates and from two to four new cars for the individual use of members of the family have been quietly picking up good second hand cars for the thousands of motor tasks to be found about any country home. They have been buying these cars, the majority of them the open type, for from 30 to 50 per cent less than the new car cost. Many of these cars have been in use for a year or so now as station wagons, to carry supplies back and forth from the country estate to the city and nearby markets, for the use of kids home on their summer vacations, for inspection trips over the estates and for the use of estate employés.

"This year we find more and more new car owners picking up the used car bargains for their young people and for vacation trips that soon save the actual cost of the used car in eliminating wear and tear and depreciation. Scores of camps in northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minneseta employ at least one used car in the regular camp equipment. It is this car that goes out through the woods trails to the best bass and trout holes, takes the scratching of underbrush and the battering of tree routes, the jamming through sand trails and the brunt of camp chores. It is this car that carries firewood, groceries, tents, beds, camp furniture, lumber and the rest of the supplies into and out of the clearing and makes the fast runs to meet trains and do urgent errands where the strain of high speed would damage the good family car.

"Many business firms are buying good used cars now instead of cheap new cars for their rougher transportation tasks. They know that a new car, used by four or five different drivers with no one in particular taking a personal interest in it, will be a wreck within a month of its purchase. Few cars of any price will stand up with more than one driver operating them, and the replacement cost of the used automobile is far less than that of the new automobile.

"The demand for good used automobiles is running about 10 per cent higher this year for the simple reason that motorists like to save money," declared Charles H. Higbee of the Schaedel organization. "Several years ago people took their good cars—the jobs that are real personal possessions—on vacation camping and hunting trips. The trips immediately knocked from $1,000 to $1,200 off the actual value of the new car, which had to be used in every day life for several years in order to justify its cost.

"This year we find the wise ones looking for cars that will run at prices ranging from $100 to $1,000. They take these cars out on their hard trips, pay for the gas and oil they use on the way, and then resell or junk them, taking a depreciation loss of seldom more than $100. They virtually rent the car in order to save their personal job from hard knocks."

As a result of this increasing demand in Chicago the used car business has been developed and systematized to unusually high standards. Few "gyp" dealers remain, according to dealer authorities. All reputable sellers of second hand automobiles are responsible for their condition. Many of the cars are thoroughly overhauled and every moving part replaced before they are offered for resale. In these cases their price is set at a uniform standard plus the cost of reconditioning

REVENUE DOUBLED.

The revenue from the gasoline tax in the United States almost doubled in 1925, the total being $746,028,940, as compared with $379,734,789 the previous year.

Tribune Tours

XI.—SUMMER CIRCLE TO HOOSIER PLAYGROUNDS.

HERE is another tour suggestion that should fit in well with almost any trail fan's week-end plans. It covers the increasingly popular circle of approximately 370 miles to and from Turkey Run park and the Shades, feature scenic spots of Indiana.

The best route down to the famous Hoosier spots for the Chicago driver is Western avenue and the paved Dixie highway to Danville, the paved and graveled Indiana state road 33 to Veedersburg and Indiana highway 10 to Turkey Run park. Another picturesque gravel road runs through the rolling country to the Shades and on to Crawfordsville. Returning the motorist has the option of good stone and gravel state roads via. Lafayette and Crown Point into Chicago or a new route north through Attica and Fowler, tapping the Dixie again at Watseka, across the Illinois line.

Easy Does It.

Shifting gears by means of the fingers rather than with clasped hand is considered the best practice, according to automotive engineers. The properly made gears and gearshift lever are sensitive to the touch and with a little practice the driver can feel the position of the gears.

PROTECT ROADS.

Any person found guilty of throwing glass or other sharp substances upon highways in New Jersey is subject to a fine of $100 to $500.

State Officials Enter Fight on Motor Speed Traps

Attorney General and Crowe Probe Road Injustice.

FRIEND OF THE MOTORIST.

Slowly but surely the "rough spots" in vehicle law enforcement within a radius of 500 miles of Chicago are coming to light through the flood of letters, complaints and affidavits reaching the Friend of the Motorist from drivers who have been made victims of speed traps and roadside courts.

If you find injustice, highway graft and motor law brutality anywhere in your travels, report it to the Friend of the Motorist, Tribune Tower, Chicago, for reference to the proper authorities.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OSCAR E. CARLSON jumped into the campaign against speed traps and highway graft last week, with the promise of an immediate investigation of the speed trap and patrol activities on the Western avenue branch of the Dixie highway in Specialville and Markham, south of Chicago.

"I do not know how directly we can strike at the injustice and graft charged against justices and officers at these points," he told County Commissioner C. S. Peterson, who asked for state action on the speed trap charges, "but I will do everything possible and will see that the campaign is followed through in every way within the powers of the attorney general."

This state recognition of the new courtesy and justice campaign came as the result of a score of motorist complaints concerning the recently established trap along the Dixie in Markham, one of the new subdivisions to the south, and of a like number of complaints and one appealed court case in the old Specialville trap.

Specialville came into the limelight when J. H. Walden of the Chicago Railway Printing company was arrested and fined $25 when he pulled around a slowly moving truck loaded with automobile bodies on the state highway south of Posen. Upon swinging back into line, evidence in the first trial showed, a motorcycle officer charged him with speeding, compelled him to turn around with the three friends he was driving to Olympia Fields Country club, and to deposit a cash bond of $25 in the Justice court in Blue Island.

Attorney Massena and representatives of the Chicago Motor club appeared in court with Mr. Walden when the case was called June 11, but the arresting officer asked for a continuance until June 18. On that date the case was tried, with what defense attorneys charge was a practical disregard of evidence, and a fine of $25 was levied. Defense attorneys immediately offered bond and appealed the case as another test for speed trap operations.

Further official recognition of the drive for highway justice is promised tomorrow when State's Attorney Crowe has been asked to have his office represented in a speed trial before Justice Mickey in the Wilmette village hall. Chicago Motor club attorneys have been asked to take charge of the defense of the motorist charged with violation of the speed law in Sheridan road, where a 30 miles an hour limit has been set by police orders, according to Bertram B. Udell of Wilmette.

The big budget of complaints received last week center in alleged brutality, false arrest and heavy fines levied on the Broadview speed trap along Roosevelt road, with Officer "Mexican Joe" as the chief operator, and in numerous arrests and heavy fines in Mount Greenwood, Ill.

WORK BENCH WISDOM

Compression Leaks

BY F. E. EDWARDS.
[Chief Engineer Automobile Testing Laboratory.]

EXCEPT for juice in the battery and gasoline in the tank, the most essential factor in the smooth, efficient operation of a gas engine is a good even compression. In a motor loss of compression means a poor vacuum in the intake manifold, which further means poor carburetion and a poor mixture. This would be the case where the loss of compression is nearly equal in each cylinder. It is worse when the loss is confined to just one or two cylinders, because then the power will be more unbalanced.

There are several factors concerned in this loss of compression, and it has been our fortune to measure the results of the motor both before and after the compression was corrected. In some of these cases, the results were phenomenal; as much as 50 per cent in power was gained as well as cutting down the fuel consumption to a noticeable extent.

It will probably interest you, however, to know of the various causes that we have discovered for this loss. In checking over one hundred tests, we have discovered that 35 motors lost their compression due to leaky valves. Some of these are leaky because no attention has been paid to them, and others because too much attention has been paid, such as attempts to eliminate tappet noises. Invariably where the tappets are set too close the result is burnt valves, caused by the elongation of the valve stem, due to heat, with the result that the valve stays open a little and the hot gasses going by burn the metal. This necessitates refacing the valve faces and the seats, besides the usual grinding.

In one case we discovered the loss of compression due to a leak in the gasket between the combustion chamber and the water jacket. This was discovered by seeing the exhaust coming out through the radiator cap.

In 31 cases we discovered the loss of compression through the piston rings, and some of these were in comparatively new motors where the pistons had probably been put into the cylinders with too little clearance, causing the ring grove to pean over the ring at the highest spot and nullifying the functioning of the rings.

Carbon is another cause for varying compressions, as we found in 14 cases. We have had cases where the carbon had accumulated to such an extent that the compression was raised above normal. Power has been increased considerably by cleaning out the carbon.

In 30 cases loose pistons were discovered, and it is a fact that in few of these loose pistons was there much loss in the ring seal. As a rule the car with loose pistons has a good power curve. This is particularly so where the ring seal is good.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

PRESIDENT G. V. ORR of the Overland Motor company and his Chicago sales organization were given credit yesterday by the dealers' fraternity for handling the biggest new car delivery on local record. Official reports made to John N. Willys and other factory executives show that the record delivery of new Willys-Knight, Overland and "Whipet" cars made from the Municipal pier totaled 1,011 automobiles with a retail value of $1,163,154. In all, 1,057 dealers attended the sales convention and received the cars to drive away at the rate of 6 automobiles a minute. Practically all of the dealers reported to President Orr last week that performance of the new European type "Whippet" car exceeded all expectations in heavy traffic and on country roads.

H. J. Rosenberg, president of the Chicago Flint company, announced yesterday that there will be no interruptions in the production of Flint cars while the proposed $5,000,000 sale of the big manufacturing plant is under way. Preparations are being made for Flint car production in one of the other Durant motor plants.

Moon and Diana car owners of the west side were given additional sales and service facilities last week with the opening of new Moon branch headquarters at 718 Madison street, Oak Park. W. J. Slattery, a veteran of the Chicago row, is manager of the new branch.

Sunday Traffic Jams Bring Wide Roads for Gotham

Like Chicago, New York Attacks Its Highway Problem.

NEW YORK, May 15.—[Special.]—More and wider highways, elimination of grade crossings, and more general use of side roads parallel to or near the main roadways were some of the measures proposed yesterday by traffic experts to relieve highway congestion in the metropolitan area on Sunday.

Traffic jams in Westchester, Long Island, and New Jersey, according to Jay Downer, engineer for the Bronx river parkway commission, show the need for more highways, and for the elimination of grade crossings.

"If you eliminate grade crossings," said Downer, "you immediately double the capacity of your highways.

"Another way in which the capacity of highways can be doubled is by separating trucks and passenger vehicles. We should be building separate highways for trucks and passenger cars. Take the trucks off the passenger routes and you double their capacity. At the same time you facilitate the movement of trucks."

Downer said the comprehensive parkway plans under development in Westchester at a cost of many millions of dollars would bring much relief. For instance, he said the Bronx river parkway commission is saving a three mile stretch of the new Saw Mill river parkway from north of the city line at Van Cortlandt park to a point north of Tuckahoe road in Yonkers.

The Boston postroad following the shore line of Long Island sound will be greatly relieved, according to Mr. Downer, by the construction of the Hutchinson river parkway running fourteen miles from the city boundary at Pelham bay parkway, through Mount Vernon, the outer section of New Rochelle, Mamaroneck, and Rye to the Connecticut line.

Traffic congestion in the metropolitan area has become so acute, particularly on Sunday, that it has been made the subject of special studies by the committee on regional plan of New York and its environs. Thomas Adams, general director of plans and surveys of that organization, told of a booklet to be issued this week detailing new traffic routes based on counts showing the origin and destination of motor cars.

R. A. O'Hara, assistant engineer of the committee on regional plans, said traffic congestion on the main arteries of Long Island and other districts could be relieved somewhat if motorists traveled off the main highways.

Who Is Best Able To Give Good Value In Automobiles

In general, there has been too much "horse-trading" and too little quality merchandising in connection with used automobiles.

In the hundreds of thousands of cars that are turned in each year on the purchase of new cars there remains a vast amount of unused mileage.

Thousands of people want just such cars—provided they can buy them on a sound, honest basis.

But they do want to be safeguarded in their purchase of used cars and the only final safeguard is the dealer. No automobile dealer can escape the penalty or the reward of his methods.

If he is a good dealer, permanently established, giving sound values at fair prices his business will prosper.

The great reputation of Cadillac—its position as the Standard of the World—is reflected in a dealer body of high standing and of fair, sound methods.

The integrity and standing of Cadillac dealers is woven into the warp and woof of Cadillac's prestige.

The Cadillac dealer looks upon every sale of a used car as the first step in the purchase of a Cadillac by that customer.

As a result he bends every effort to gain and hold the good-will of his used car customers.

In this way he safeguards his future business, and thus safeguards every purchase of a used car.

Furthermore, because of the tremendous sales success of the new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac, the Cadillac dealer has the very choicest used cars on the market.

For the first two hundred years of ...e history of the American colonies ...d republic there was little need to ...ak of preserving any part of this great domain as parks. Three million square miles were all park and wild enough, as the pioneers found it.

The character of the earliest forms of outdoor activity is shown by one of the first laws passed by any governmental body in American territory relating to conservation and recreation, an ordinance by the fathers of the Massuchsetts bay colony, in 1641, giving the public rights for "fishing and fowling" on "great ponds," bodies of water over ten acres in extent. The change in national habits of outdoor enjoyment is likewise shown in recent interpretations of this old statute, as reënacted in a modern measure by an attorney general of Massachusetts, who ruled that the intent of the Puritan legislators was not to limit outdoor relaxations to the specific sports of fishing and fowling, and that they might be extended, for present day needs, to include bathing and boating in summer and skating in winter.

The first state parks were historical preserves, associated with scenes of our early wars, which were taken over by public agencies early in the nineteenth century. There was still plenty of room in the country for the forms of recreation then in vogue, from croquet to chasing Indians. But after the civil war, when the population was spreading westward to the Rockies and the Pacific coast, some far sighted citizens began to look ahead and to imagine that in time we might be more crowded and that we had better save some of our finest scenic sites and our wilderness areas.

One of the curiosities of the state park movement is that the very first of such preserves to be segregated was not in the east, then beginning to be crowded, as might have been expected, but in California. In 1865 the state obtained a grant from congress of the famous Yosemite valley as a state park. It remained such for thirty years, until taken over by the federal government and much enlarged as a national park.

Soon thereafter began a movement for the taking out of private exploitation of the American side of Niagara falls, which resulted, after twenty years of effort, in the establishment of a state reservation there in 1885. In the same year the selling off of the state forest land in the Adirondack mountains in northern New York, was stopped and a beginning made in the great wilderness park which is now nearly two million acres in extent, the largest state preserve in the country. Michigan also entered the state park field in the same year by taking over Fort Mackinac from the federal government.

The Question.

What were the most outstanding lessons learned by Chicago in handling the Eucharistic congress crowd?

Where Asked.

Wacker drive at Wabash avenue.

The Answers.

William R. Jeffries, 1012 Circle avenue, Forest Park, Ill., construction superintendent—They should have learned that there should be a complete discontinuance of parking in the downtown streets. I drive down every day, but leave my car at Des Plaines and Madison streets, taking the street car to the loop. It's cheaper than paying fines and accident bills. Chicago is the wildest town on earth. Everybody takes a chance here.

Edmund Cieslik, 154 East Erie street, consulting structural engineer — For one thing, there should be a complete elimination of all parking in the downtown streets. Parking on both sides of the street amounts to the tying up of two traffic lanes. Incidentally, our authorities shouldn't fly off the handle so quickly when something big breaks. It all shows that there is a great need for an outer drive.

Eugene Kresge, 3501 Fulton avenue, salesman—They should have found out that we ought to have overhead walks for pedestrians. That's the only way to eliminate the jam. There is too much time spent in getting pedestrians through. They started building overhead walks in New York City some time ago, and from my observation in that city a few weeks ago I know that it is a real success.

H. P. Wright, 4203 North Winchester avenue, salesman—They should make the pedestrians obey the stop and go signals. The rules governing autoists when turning to the right are very strict, and here the negligence of pedestrians becomes particularly annoying. Parking in the loop should be forbidden. Politicians with their autos have the city hall tied up like a double row fortress.

Harry Bonin, 5021 North Robey street, chauffeur—They should have learned that the no-parking system in the downtown streets is a great success. Now that they have started it, they should continue with it. The stopping of a single auto along the curb ties up the entire street to the width of the auto. The streets actually seemed wider during these last few days than formerly.

Safety Council Announces Drive for Motor Funds

ANNOUNCEMENT that John D. Rockefeller Jr. had made a conditional contribution of $177,500 toward a million dollar fund to be raised by the National Safety council for an intensive, enlarged five year campaign against public accidents was made yesterday by President Charles H. Scott. The balance of the money needed to cover an annual expenditure of $200,000 will be sought from other philanthropists and public spirited corporations interested in reducing accidents that occur in public places, on the streets and highways, and in the home.

"The automobile accident problem has developed to such an alarming extent that the National Safety council finds its present financial resources are inadequate to properly carry out its proposed country-wide public safety program, which includes efforts in behalf of the recommendations suggested by the Hoover conference on street and highway safety," said President Scott. "While the council now has an income of several hundred thousand dollars annually, most of its financial support comes from industries, employers, and individuals chiefly interested in the prevention of industrial casualties in manufacturing plants, workshops, and factories, and the dues thus derived are not adequate to cover the expanding program of public safety work. We therefore are going to conduct a special drive to raise $200,000 a year for our public safety campaign during the next five years."

The National Safety council is a cooperative, nonprofit making, nonsectarian institution devoted to preventing accidents in industry, at home, and in public places. It has affiliated community safety councils in 67 American cities and members in more than 100 foreign countries.

STANDARD WEIGHTS.

Washington, D. C., like Connecticut, recently adopted a ruling on weights of motor trucks, which provides for a maximum gross weight of 28,000 pounds, a maximum load weight on one axle of 22,400 pounds, and an allowable weight per inch of tire width. No cargo or net load must be greater than the manufacturer's rated capacity.

Battle of Prices Features Week in Motor Industry

DETROIT, Mich., June 26.— [Special.]—The battle that has been raging in the automobile industry for the last several months, particularly in the low price class, reached another stage a few days ago when Ford announced another price cut in entire line of cars.

For some time the public has had its eye focused on the company as a result of the last price cut of Chevrolet. Now, after Ford's move, attention is again turned to the Chevrolet, and the question is being asked how far the latter company is willing to follow the revision of prices.

A challenge is seen in Mr. Ford's statement made the day following his recent cut. "What the Ford company will do to increase production and sales, is to stick to the policy of cutting prices and improving the product," he said. There is no way to cut prices except by increasing accuracy and simplicity of construction.

Both Ford and Chevrolet, a General Motors unit, are backed with unlimited finances, and the outcome of price-cutting and improvement of quality is being closely watched.

According to leading producers, the recent reductions in price by a few manufacturers in the "middle class," is without significance as indicating any pronounced change in the motor price situation. Most of the builders, who adhere to the yearly model policy, are preparing for the introduction of their 1927 models, with every indication that these cars will make their appearance earlier than usual this year. A feature of 1927 offerings will be the introduction by two or three concerns of small models, such as are extensively used in Europe. At least two of the five manufacturers experimenting with this type of vehicle are now working with the expectation of having to have their product on the market by the spring of 1927, while one company already has such a car, the Whippet, so far advanced that a few are already in the hands of dealers.

It is a noticeable fact that farmers are placing orders for both passenger cars and trucks in greater numbers at this season of the year than ever before.

More than Trebling- last year's Sales

Oakland-Pontiac Sales in Chicago during the first five months of 1926 show 325% increase over the first five months of 1925.

Two years ago, a newly-appointed Oakland dealer organization—today, one of Chicago's foremost motor car dealers, sponsoring two outstanding successes, the Oakland Six and its companion car, the Pontiac Six——winning and holding the good will of motorists with such speed and consistency that sales for the first five months of 1926 are more than three times as great as the corresponding period in 1925.

—This is the record of Community Motors, Inc.—a record of success and growth unsurpassed, we believe, by any other automobile dealer in Chicago.

There must be reasons—very definite and powerful reasons—for such amazing gains; and the explanation is the inevitable one of good, sound, worthy products fairly priced and capably and conscientiously served.

The Oakland Six, with Body by Fisher, air cleaner, oil filter, full-pressure oiling, interchangeable bronze-backed bearings, Four-Wheel Brakes and the remarkable Harmonic Balancer, stands out as the preferred motor car investment in its price group.

The Pontiac Six, with body by Fisher—priced $825 for Coach or Coupe—introduces standards of beauty, power, stamina and value so new and revolutionary that in five short months it has been conceded quality leadership in the field of low-cost sixes.

Community Motors stands squarely back of both of these products. That's why buyers of Oakland-Pontiac Sixes in ever-growing numbers stand squarely back of Community Motors.

Buyers reverted to price pounding tactics in the beef market again yesterday, using the burdensome accumulation of mixed and packing grades as a club.

Market sagged mostly 10@15c, unevenness ranging from steady to 25c lower comparing extremes of the two days, with general average price off 15c at $13.80, a new low for the month, against $14.25 the previous Saturday. Better grades of light and light butchers experienced the maximum loss in the absence of shipping support, closing 5c@25c under a week earlier, with packing grades off 50@55c for the week. Good 140@190 lb. hogs topped at $14.75, fancy light being absent with prime 278 lb. averages up to $14.20 and most packing sows at $12.25@12.50.

While hog receipts last week at 119,700 were smaller than any corresponding weekly total in over five years, weight were heaviest in a number of years, the week's average promising to be around 256 lbs or 257 lbs, about the heaviest in half a century for this time of year, and as heavy as any week since September, 1910. This gain in weight is attributed to the unexpected increase in heavy mixed and "packers," which are being marketed fully a month earlier than usual. As a rule, weights in August and September are heaviest of the year. The average compares with 236 lbs a year and two years ago. Extreme top last week at 15.00 equals the highest of the year, while the general average moved down another 5c at $14.10, but compares with $13.25 a year ago and $6.90 two years ago.

Better grade of beef steers held a strong position practically throughout last week, closing strong to 25c higher for the week, medium and light steers leading the advance. Prime 1,220@1,333 lb averages topped at $10.60, within 5c of the highest since April. Prime 1,651 lb averages reached $10.55 and 972 lb Nebraska yearlings $10.50. Butcher stock finished slightly above a week ago. Top for load lots of heifers was $10.00, with one head averaging 720 lbs at $10.50. Stockers and feeders were on par with a week ago. Calves advanced $1.00@1.50.

Sheep Receipts Small.

Following a two weeks' break of over $3.00 in lamb prices, producers held back supplies during the last week, with receipts at 50,200, being second smallest of the year and 25,000 smaller than the preceding week. Market reacted, and 25@50c of the loss was recovered in mid-week, but advances were erased again before the close, both sheep and lambs finishing on par with a week earlier. About 20,000 Idaho range lambs brought $15.75@16.40, with "outs" to packers and feeder around $14.50. Natives sold largely at $14.75@15.50, with a few at $15.65@15.75.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 21,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 22,358 cattle, 38,348 hogs, and 28,484 sheep a week ago, and 22,208 cattle, 43,455 hogs, and 17,378 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 55,000 sheep, against 52,095 cattle, 102,607 hogs, and 68,951 sheep a year ago.

Tax Exemption on Government Securities Changes July 2.

We wish to call the attention of holders of United States government securities to the fact that after July 2, 1926, an individual may hold only $5,000 par value of United States Liberty bonds, treasury bonds, or certificates of indebtedness free from normal taxation under the federal income tax law.

The income from any such securities held in excess of $5,000 par value after that date will be subject to the surtax. (This new rule does not apply to the first Liberty loan 3½s, nor does it apply to the income from government bonds held by corporations.)

Those whose incomes are sufficiently large to subject them to the surtax, and whose holdings of government securities are also large, may do well to take into consideration the effect this ruling will have on their income tax after this week.

Liberty bonds are selling at high prices at present, so that a switch to tax exempt securities may be made to fairly good advantage.

Municipal bonds are free from all federal income taxes, and good ones can be bought at present to yield from 4 to 4.35 per cent.

It must be remembered, however, that here we are dealing only with the tax on the income from bonds, and that in most states all bonds, except federal government bonds, are subject to the personal property or general tax.

There is, however, a type, or rather there are two very similar types, of bonds which are free from all taxes, income and general, everywhere.

These are joint stock land bank and federal land bank bonds, and these can be bought to yield as high as 4.60 per cent at present.

We offer these suggestions for those whose incomes are such that the tax exemption feature is of real importance and who would be affected by the change in the status of their government securities by this new rule.

For those who would not be so affected the tax exemption feature should be of little or no interest, and would not be worth purchasing at the expense of interest yield.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in the local unlisted securities market during the last week was of a mixed character, and while many securities showed a substantial improvement, a number developed a reactionary tendency.

Revival of activity was noted in Dodge 8 per cent preferred, stock changing hands between 37 and 38. A good inquiry was also noted for Shaffer Oil preferred, resulting in an increase of about 10 points to 98 bid, 101 asked. W. F. Hall Printing established a new high of 32½, but toward the close relinquished a portion of its gain, closing at 31 to 32. Celotex company common and preferred were in demand at slightly higher prices, the former at 115 to 116, and the latter at 90 to 91. Butler Brothers was again traded within a narrow range, and while high sales were made at 29¾ early in the week, it receded to a close of 28¾. Little interest was noted in National Theaters, transactions taking place between 8¾ and 8¾.

Values in McCord company issues of a week ago varied slightly. The common was offered at 10; debenture stock was ex-dividend 50c, and was quoted at 16¾ to 17¼; while the "A" preferred was in supply at 70. American Furniture Mart preferred sagged 2 points to 90; while the common was again offered at 5, with 4¾ bid. Holland-St. Louis Sugar was fractionally easier at 2¼ bid, 2½ asked. Godchaux preferred continued in demand at 9¾ to 11. Keystone Steel and Wire common, after selling at 40, was offered at this price, with buyers at 38½. The preferred, however, moved into new ground with sales at 99. Creamery Package continued steady around 35¾, with the non-voting unchanged at 33½ to 34½.

Elgin National Watch continued strong, sales being made at 90 and better. Bids of 89½ were common at the close of the week with stock available at 91. Acme Steel held its last week's gain, selling around 71½ to 72½, ex-dividend. An increased turnover in Universal Gypsum common was reported at 13½ to 14¼ stock being in demand at 13¾, with cheapest stock offered for sale at 14¼. The preferred was quiet, being in demand at 72 with offerings at 73¼. Western Grocer common was unusually quiet, the common stock being sought at 75 with very little stock offered at any price. Renewed buying in Albert Pick preferred advanced that stock from sales around 94 to high sales of 97½, ex-dividend, the market closing stronger with 97 bid and stock offered at 97½.

In the bank stock group Continental and Commercial National enjoyed the largest turnover, selling at 456, ex-dividend $4, up 4. Chicago Trust improved an additional 5 points to 255 bid, 265 asked. State Bank of Chicago was in demand at 700 with limited offerings at 703. Union Trust continued in good demand at 392 bid, without attracting sellers. A few small lots of National Bank of the Republic were traded in at 272. Northern Trust changed hands at 480, ex dividend, up some 4 points.

An agreement by the Commercial Credit company to take over all preferred and common stock of the Mortgage and Acceptance corporation offered to it before the close of business July 10 stipulates tat for every 7 shares of first preferred of the Mortgage and Acceptance it will give 2 shares of its 6½ per cent first preferred, $100 par, and 3 shares of no par common.

The recently formed Container Corporation of America will start functioning July 1, having acquired the plants of the Philadelphia Paper Manufacturing company, the Cincinnati Corrugated Box company, the Chicago Mill Paper Stock company, the paperboard and fabricating plants of the Chicago Mill and Lumber company, and the controlling common stock interest in the Mid-West Box company of Chicago. The latter concern will maintain its corporate existence.

AUTO AND SHOE FACTORIES FIND BUSINESS GOOD

BY HARPER LEECH.

There is interest, almost humor, in the fact that the automobile and the shoe businesses are exhibiting precisely similar trends. As far apart as the poles, representing the first and nearly the last word in transportation, different in age by eons, both are leading to a revision of some very popular economic generalizations.

Mass output, standardization, and low costs of production are not, after all, it appears, sure thing bets in the game of modern business.

A notable feature of the present motor year has been the great increase of sales by some of the smaller companies producing specialty cars, while a relative falling back of the largest producer of the most standardized car has been the subject of more casual conversation than any American topic this year.

In the shoe business there has been a similar prosperity of some small producers, a flow of business back to the older shoe centers with smaller plants, more highly trained labor, and higher costs of production. Public fancy is the answer in both cases—public fancy backed by a buying power on the part of the public which fantastically enough traces back in large measure to the immense amount of wealth that the general adoption of mass output and standardization of production has placed in the hands of the buying public.

Modern capitalism develops a new paradox every few days. Yet people say modern life is commonplace. The truth is that it is so complicated it often bewilders rather than intrigues.

Certainly there are no certainties in modern business. The economies and financial independence secured by a vertical type of business, reaching all the way back to raw materials, also involve investments of such magnitude that immense volume of sales becomes an ever more pressing necessity.

Realization of this has been leading to the reconstruction of the board of directors of the modern corporation. Boards long have contained representation of finance and operating management.

PRICE OF GRAINS FALLS FOR WEEK, WHEAT IN LEAD

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation was on again yesterday in July wheat. While somewhat firmer at the start on wet weather in the southwest and strength in Liverpool, heavy selling developed immediately after the opening with a break of 1⅞c from the early top to a low of $1.33¼. The finish was about the inside figure, with net losses of ¼@1c.

July closed at $1.33¼ to $1.33⅜, or about ⅞c under the September, the narrowest spread in many weeks, and compared with 4c over on Thursday. December finished at $1.35¼ to $1.35⅝.

All deliveries of oats sold at a new low on the crop, with July touching 38½c, and the finish was ⅝@⅞c lower, with July 38⅝c. September 39⅝@39¾c, and December 42¼c. Corn, while easier early, firmed up later on prospects that the senate again would consider farm relief legislation and closed ⅛@⅜c higher, with July 69¼@69¾c, and September 75@74¾c. Rye was ⅛@⅜c higher, with July 90c and September 93⅝@93¾c.

Grains Lower for Week.

Scattered liquidation was on in all grains the last week, with wheat in the lead, the finish yesterday showing 2¾@3¼c under the close of the previous week, with July leading, while corn lost ½@1c, oats 1⅜@2½c, and rye 2⅛@4⅝c. Lard lost 2½@7½c, ribs 70c, and bellies 32½@42½c.

Houses with eastern connections were on the selling side of the July, and the trade had the impression that a leading New York operator had finished liquidating a long line. There was free selling on the purchase of 100,000 bu No. 2 hard winter to come here from Kansas City at 1½c over July for shipment by July 15, and on the heavy receipts in the southwest. Hutchinson, Kas., had 233 cars and Wichita 461 cars, and it would not surprise operators if the latter received around 750 cars on Monday.

Cash wheat premiums were easier in practically all winter wheat markets, with the basis here steady to 4c lower, the later on hard, while Kansas City was off 2@3c. Rains were reported in parts of Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas, nd may delay harvest and thrashing to some extent, but sufficient grain has already been hauled to elevators to keep the movement liberal for some time to come. Export demand at the seaboard ws slow. Liverpool closed ¼d higher to ¼d lower on prospects of small world's shipments.

As was the case on Friday, the main pressure was on the July, and there was selling of that delivery against purchases of September, with some traders looking for the July to go to a discount. Kansas City July closed 1c under the September. Lack of outside speculative interest is regarded as a deciding factor in causing the erratic price changes and the refusal of the market to respond to the news.

No Pressure on Corn.

Corn failed to show the weakness generally expected by the trade, and while buying was largely in the way of short covering there was no material pressure on the market. Country offerings to arrive were small. Weekly forecast suggested showers and warmer, which would be highly beneficial for the new crop. Stop loss orders were uncovered in oats and prices declined sharply. More optimistic crop reports were received from the west. Rye showed independent strength due to continued unfavorable weather in Europe, and there was also buying of rye against sales of wheat.

TRADING IN GRAIN FUTURES

Trading in grain futures on the Chicago Board of Trade the last week, as compiled by the Grain Futures administration, follows, last three ciphers omitted:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export demand for cash wheat at the seaboard was disappointing, but there were bids from abroad slightly below a working basis. Southwestern premiums were slightly easier at 7c over Chicago September for last half July shipment; 6c over for first half August, and 6¼c over for last half August and first half September, loading at the Gulf. Scarcity of ocean freights and further advance in rates tends to restrict business.

Chicago handlers sold 10,000 bu wheat, 171,000 bu corn, 111,000 bu oats, and 2,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with 10,000 bu No. 2 hard sold in store at 13c over Chicago July.

Milling demand for cash wheat was less active and spot premiums here were steady to 4c lower, with hard showing the decline. No. 2 hard sold early at 11c over, and later 9c over was the best bid. No. 1 hard sold at 10c over. No. 2 red brought 4@5c over the future. Kansas City quoted premiums 2¼@3c lower with No. 2 hard 8@9c over July, while red winter at St. Louis weakened at the first and closed 5c lower. Spring wheat premiums were little changed.

Offerings of cash corn were not large, with prices ½c higher to 1c lower, as compared with July. No. 2 grades sold at 1⅛@3c over; No. 3 grades at July price to 1½c over, and No. 4 grades at July price to 1c under. Outside markets were unchanged to 1c lower.

Cash oats sold moderately with the basis steady to ½c lower. No. 2 white brought 1⅛@1½c over, and No. 3 white July to ½c under.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 21 cars; corn, 58 cars; oats, 68 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 5 cars.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The wheat trade is fearish. Lower prices are expected on Monday, as a big run of wheat in southwestern markets is likely. It is too early for Chicago to have big receipts and a heavy run is not to be expected until later in the season. There were 694 cars of wheat at Hutchinson and Wichita, Kas., yesterday, which tended to make the trade here very bearish. The tendency is to sell on all bulges.

As this is the calendar period for buying corn and there has been heavy liquidation, pressure was lighter and a few local operators who have been excessively bearish with spreads between July and September and July and December disposed to close them yesterday, which assisted in giving a rally. The disposition for the time being is to go slower on the selling side.

The only interesting feature in oats was the execution of a big changing order to buy July and sell September, presumably for cash interests.

A decrease in the visible supply of wheat is expected on Monday. Chicago, Minneapolis, and Duluth stocks are to decrease. Kansas City should have a good increase. World's shipments are estimated at 12,200,000 bu, against 9,120,000 bu last year.

Chairman Hamill of Iowa says the campaign for farm relief legislation is to be pressed harder than ever. The executive committee of twenty-two, representing eleven states, is to meet in the near future and arrange for another active campaign.

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

A better showing was made in primary receipts of grain for the week, with an aggregate of 12,794,000 bu, and an increase of 342,000 bu over the previous week, 50,000 bu more than last year, and a gain of 270,000 bu above the five year average. The feature was the big increase in wheat receipts, particularly in the southwest, which exceeded last year's, and a decrease for the week in corn. Details follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Heavy rains were reported in the Texas Panhandle where harvesting of wheat is underway, also rains in Kansas. The forecast is for unsettled and warmer for that state. Temperatures are low over the northwest and are to be followed by warmer.

Weather in Europe on the whole is distinctly unfavorable as given by reports to Broomhall. All central Europe has too much rainfall. Hungary complains of damage from rust and lodging. Roumania and Germany have had flood damage.

Kinyon's report to J. S. Bache & Co. from Villard, Minn., said: "Montevideo to here few late fields of grain have a good stand. Many fields weedy and crops will be light. Corn has a good stand but is late. Plenty of moisture to mature wheat, but must have warmer weather to make a corn crop."

Le Count's report from Fargo, N. D., to Stein, Alstrin & Co.: "Made 160 mile drive on Friday. Early wheat is heading short, will make a light crop but there is a lot of later wheat that has made splendid recovery since I was in this territory and will make a good crop with favorable weather. Ample moisture to mature the crop."

The Illinois Central railroad's crop report says corn needs warmer weather. Fields are well cultivated, but cotton is milking fair to good progress. Wheat in Illinois was improved by rain. Oats in southern Illinois need rain.

Reports from Beatrice, Neb., say farmers in Gage county are cutting wheat. Some have finished and expect to begin in oats soon. Average yields of wheat are better than last year. Rains have also greatly improved oats and more than half a crop will be harvested. Corn in some fields is more than waist high and prospects in some sections were never better.

CLOVER HAY AND RYE STRAW

Clover, clover mixtures and rye straw were in good demand and lighter supply. Prairie hay was in small supply and good request. Arrivals were 7 cars timothy and clover; 1 car packing prairie and 1 car oat straw.

A Bull Market In the Rails—A Bear Market In the Industrials ?

Is that a likelihood? History shows that the reverse has been true.

From 1914 to 1919 was a great bull cycle. Industrials advanced on the average 65 points. But in the same period the railroads declined more than 10 points.

Two different sets of factors are now governing the rails and industrials. The factors of 1914 to 1919 have been reversed. Will the rails remain stationary while industrials decline, will industrials remain stationary while rails advance, or will we have side by side a big bear market in the industrials and a big bull market in the rails?

STOCKS SEESAW AS WEEK ENDS; TRADE IS DULL

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net chge.
20 railroads	93.03	92.73	92.94	—.23
20 industrials	156.47	155.92	156.34	—.20
40 stocks	124.75	124.32	124.59	—.21

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Stock prices drifted aimlessly in today's dull trading as speculative accounts were evened up for the week-end. Evidences of agricultural discontent over the failure so far to obtain farm relief legislation were used as a pretext for an early selling movement, but bullish demonstrations in a few popular specialties brought about moderate recoveries before the close. Trading was sluggish, with total sales falling below 438,000 shares.

Confusion in the immediate trade outlook added to the market's unsettlement. After the recent quickening of business activities the latest analyses of the situation showed that hesitation was again appearing in wholesale and retail lines, and that earlier estimates of summer operations might have to be modified.

Merchandising Issues Are Sold.

Pending more definite information regarding the progress of crops and the price trend of agricultural commodities, professional traders were inclined to look with distavor on the stocks of companies doing a large business in the farming district. Woolworth, Kresge, Montgomery Ward, and other merchandising issues were under selling pressure, but partial recoveries took place in the late trading. International Harvester was heavy, but Case Threshing Machine continued in demand.

Motor shares tended lower at the opening, but were subsequently strengthened by short covering. Hudson, which yesterday dipped to the year's lowest level, rallied 2 points to 52½, while General Motors, Willys-Overland, Studebaker, and Fisher Body closed fractionally higher. An advance of nearly 3 points in Goodyear Tire preferred contrasted with the selling of U. S. Rubber.

Steel Shares Are Irregular.

The conflict of price movements was extended to the steel group, where the best showing was made by Gulf States Steel. U. S. Steel held firm, but Crucible and Republic tended lower.

Speculative interest was transferred from the representative industrials to the more responsive specialties, with gains of 1@4 points recorded by Commercial Solvents "B," Davidson Chemical, New York Canners, Union Bag and Paper, Mexican Seaboard Oil, and United Cigar Stores. These were counteracted to some extent, however, by declines of 1@3 points in American Snuff, Cocoa Cola, Simmons company, Pullman, Electric Auto Light, and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe.

Waning interest was shown in railroad shares, most of which merely marked time. Delaware and Hudson rose 2 points, but Nickel Plate and the Chicago and Northwestern issues turned heavy.

Bond Market Is Irregular.

A strong investment demand for the $30,000,000 United Steel Works of Germany loan, resulting in its prompt oversubscription, today contrasted with ebbing interest in the bond market. Outstanding German bonds were strength ened by the success of the offering. General Electric 6½s going to a new high at 108, while the government 7s and the Rheinelbe Union 7s hovered just below the year's high levels.

Prices of other listed bonds fluctuated unevenly. Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s, Louisville and Nashville 5s, and Rutland 4½s advanced 1@2½ points, and a single transaction in Worcester, Connecticut and Eastern 4½s, normally inactive, took place at 86, an advance of almost ten points over the last previous sale. Skelly oil 6½s were the only important feature of the industrial division, moving up 1½ points to 146½, within a fraction of the year's top price.

N. Y. Surplus Reserve Increased.

The weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks today shows excess reserve of $21,895,860. This is an increase of $2,136,970 compared with the week before, when excess reserve of $19,758,890 was reported. Loans, discounts, etc., increased $25,919,000 and net demand deposits expanded $34,963,000, while time deposits expanded $8,999,000.

Foreign exchanges were steady, with a rise of about ten points to 16.14 in Spanish pesetas standing out as the principal feature. Demand sterling held firm around $4.86¾, while French francs were slightly higher around 2.90¾ cents.

Manufactures Lead All U. S. Exports, Data Shows

Washington, D. C., June 26.—(AP)—Finished manufactured products continued to lead the list of exports of the United States during May, while crude materials led in the import column. An analysis of last month's foreign trade, announced today by the commerce department, placed the final value of exports at $356,621,000 and imports at $321,629,000, compared with May, 1925.

The exports were: Finished manufactures, $170,781,000, as against $162,708,000 in May, 1925; crude materials, $67,312,000, against $65,973,000; semi-manufactures, $50,707,000, against $58,818,000; manufactured foodstuffs, $24,053,000, against $41,161,000, and crude foodstuffs and food animals, $25,155,000, against $19,425,000.

Imports were: Crude materials, $128,199,000, against $136,241,000; finished manufactures, $63,022,000, against $60,880,000; semi-manufactures, $61,059,000, against $56,320,000; crude foodstuffs and food animals, $35,908,000, against $34,140,000, and manufactured foodstuffs, $31,931,000, against $39,900,000.

Germans Fear Ford; Act on Cameroon Rubber Co.

BERLIN, June 26.—(AP)—Stockholders in the Cameroon Rubber company will issue 100,000 shares nonvoting preferred stock, for sale only to Germans, to prevent foreigners from acquiring a majority holding. It was reported through the Hamburg bourse that Henry Ford had acquired 700 shares in the company.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, June 26.—(AP)—Rayon prices will be reduced on Monday, the trade looking for a decline of 35 cents a pound from a basis of $2.00 for 150 Denier Rayon. Cotton goods were somewhat more active in the gray cloth division today, and in some finished goods lines. Wool markets were quiet. Raw silk was easier and quiet. Silk goods for fall appear to be in better demand, especially many of the heavier grades. Yarns were steadier. Cutters of hosiery knickers are now buying for spring in a liberal way, the new offerings showing a fancier character than anything hitherto shown.

Now- for America a revolutionary European-type high-speed Light Car

This New Car Offers:

30 miles on a gallon of gasoline

55 miles an hour . . . 5 to 30 miles in 13 seconds

4-wheel brakes . . . stops in 51 feet from 40 miles an hour

Turns in 34-foot circle . . . easiest car in America to park

5 feet 8 inches high . . . lower gravity center . . . greater safety

European-type body . . . more inside room than any other light car

A three minute study of these remarkable facts may save you from buying an obsolete automobile

THIS is the announcement of a revolutionary new-type car, different from anything you have ever known before.

A car that combines the advanced engineering practice of Europe with new and improved standards of American performance.

This new-type car is a challenge to all former engineering practice. It casts aside every old tradition. And marks the most important light car engineering improvement in America during the last 16 years.

Because of easy handling in traffic, the Whippet will strongly appeal to American women. It will park in a 14-foot curb space

This new car has a low, European-type body. With height and length in true symmetrical proportion.

It is 5 feet 8 inches high . . . not as tall as the average man. Yet it provides more room and comfort than you've ever found in any automobile of this class before.

It has a high-torque, 31 horsepower motor of small bore and long stroke—the same engineering principle used in the fastest racing cars of America and Europe.

It turns in a 34-foot circle . . . that's less than the width of an average city street. You can park in 14 feet . . . which is much less than the space required for the ordinary car.

4-wheel brakes are an integral part of this new car's chassis design . . . a necessity which light car owners have not heretofore enjoyed. Measured tests show that it will stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles an hour.

Its center of gravity is extremely low, with ample road clearance . . . thus giving a sense of security you have never found in any light car. Something you actually feel when you drive this car.

Two engineering ideals combined

The Overland Whippet represents a combination of the most advanced European and American engineering thought.

It is a complete new car . . . designed and built as a unit . . . not an old-fashioned reconstructed chassis.

For over three years, Willys-Overland engineers in Europe and America have been developing it. Over 360,000 miles of road tests proved the practical advantages of this car before it was released for production.

55 miles an hour

Here's a car that will do 55 miles an hour in the hands of the average owner . . . with all the reserve power that this implies.

You can drive this car as fast as you like with the utmost ease of control . . . for no light car ever hugged the road like this before.

In traffic it gets away with lightning pickup . . . stop-watch tests show that it accelerates up to 40 miles an hour 18% faster than other light four-cylinder cars.

It runs like a "six" and pulls like a tractor.

The Overland Whippet will climb the gruelling grades of the Cove Mountains, of Pennsylvania, in high.

In all your life you've never driven any car like this before. Its wonderful activity . . . its flashing bursts of speed . . . and quick acceleration . . . have never been available in any car of this type.

Smart European-type body design

The distinctive body lines of the Overland Whippet frankly resemble the smartest automobiles of America and Continental Europe. Stand in front of this car and you can imagine yourself on the boulevards of France.

The radiator is typically foreign . . . every line, curve and contour of the body is the result of painstaking craftsmanship and study.

Low-swung . . . rakish . . . graceful as a Whippet . . . that's the only way to describe it.

Complete symmetry of design has been achieved with compact dimensions.

Compared with contemporary big, bulky cars the Overland Whippet appears smarter and much more graceful. That's because height and length are in true artistic proportion.

In the Overland Whippet you have the feeling of riding closer to the ground . . . with the resultant sense of solidity and absence of that sidesway so noticeable in the conventional type of car. That high-up-in-the-air feeling is gone . . . here is a new kind of riding comfort.

Step into this car and you will be surprised to find so much spacious room. Due to its unique body and dash construction there is actually more head room and leg room than in any other car of this price class.

45 inches from dash to the front of the fore-seat cushion. Several inches more than you have been accustomed to.

44½ inches from the toe-board to the front of the rear seat cushions. Again several inches more than in other cars of this type.

All seats are placed in a naturally restful position so that you have complete relaxation as you ride. No more sitting bolt-upright . . . you ride in this car, not on it.

30 miles on a gallon of gasoline

Here at last is an automobile that will run 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline . . . well over 1,000 miles on a gallon of oil . . . with extraordinary mileage on tires . . . and the smallest tax rating of any car in America today.

Imagine if you can what this saving will mean to the average owner in a single year. It cuts present operating costs just about in half. Doubles the value of every dollar you now spend for upkeep.

Exhaustive tests so far indicate that the average year's operating cost of the Overland Whippet should save you from $75 to $150 in gas, oil, tires and mechanical upkeep.

Money that goes back into your pocket. Money you must add to the list price of any less economical car you consider.

Based on these figures, it is easy to see how standards of automobile value must change in the next 30 days.

With this new factor of economical operation, list prices do not mean the same today. Resale values of less modern and less efficient cars are bound to suffer.

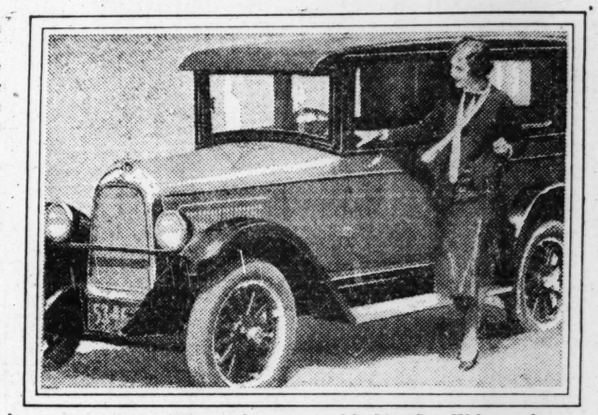
New standards of mechanical design

The new principles . . . the new ideas . . . the new standards of design in the Overland Whippet are bound to change your whole conception of light car mechanical features.

Its high-torque motor of 3⅛-inch bore by 4¾-inch stroke, is by far the most efficient light car engine made in America. It actually develops more horsepower per cubic inch of piston displacement and pound of car weight than any other light 4-cylinder engine.

In 13 seconds

Stop-watch tests show that the Whippet accelerates 18% faster than other light 4-cylinder cars



One of the first Whippets being inspected by Miss Lois Wilson at her New York motion picture studio

It has an 80-lb. torque . . . this means greater pulling power . . . the ability to master hills without shifting gears.

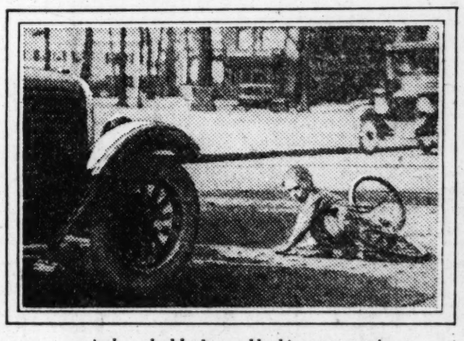
Because of this greater efficiency, the motor of the Overland Whippet costs more to build yet less to maintain than any other light car engine made today.

The Overland Whippet is the only light 4-cylinder car that has the modern force-feed oiling system throughout the engine, instead of the old-fashioned splash.

It is the only 4-cylinder light car that combines genuine Chrome silicon steel valves with silent chain front-end drive and pump water circulation.

It has long connecting rods, long valve guides. Its valve stems are unusually long, with more space above for cooling. This extra space makes for quietness of operation and longer life. For the life of the engine is measured by the life of the valves.

Greater accessibility for inspection and repairs is another outstanding engineering feature. The Overland Whippet has all of the engine refinements characteristic of the most expensive cars.



12-inch 4-wheel brakes enable this car to stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles per hour

New chassis features

Horn, spark and throttle control are on the steering wheel as is standard practice on the highest price cars.

The position of the steering wheel is adjustable to fit the requirements of the individual driver.

The worm and gear irreversible steering mechanism is typical of this car's quality and is especially designed for full balloon tires and 4-wheel brakes.

Timken bearings are used throughout the front and rear axles.

All 4-wheel brakes are 11 inches in diameter, of the mechanical internal type. They provide 192 square inches of braking surface . . . far more per pound of car weight than any other American light car built today.

Each is completely encased, thus not susceptible to weather conditions.

Brake and clutch pedal pressure has been developed so that a child could drive this car with ease and safety. Gear shift and emergency brake are right at your finger tips. Remarkable ease of gear shifting has been perfected in this new-type car. Underslung semi-elliptic Vanadium steel springs add immeasurably to its riding and driving ease.

Designed and built without restrictions

The engineers who designed this car . . . and the men who built it . . . have worked without restrictions.

Nothing has been spared that would improve its engineering or its quality.

The Overland Whippet is not a 1 or 2 year car. Instead, it has been honestly built to give years and years of satisfactory service . . . to deliver thrilling, trouble-free performance for thousands and thousands of miles.

This new-type car has such costly equipment as a one-piece windshield, cowl ventilator, quick-acting crank-type regulators on doors and windows.

Although the car is very low, windows are unusually broad and high . . . the exposed glass area is approximately 16½ square feet.

The doors of this new car are 33 inches wide . . . thus providing easy entrance and exit.

Compared with old-fashioned, bulky cars the Whippet appears smaller and much more graceful

A beautiful cut velour trimming is used for seats and cushion backs . . . with sides and head-lining to match.

A dome-light and a handsome walnut-finished instrument board add to its unusually attractive and complete interior equipment.

To millions of American women this car will bring an entirely new pride of ownership—a new delight in its comfort and refinements.

The car is beautifully finished with durable triple-coated lacquer that will retain its lustrous beauty for years and years.

The Overland Whippet is a quality car through and through. Your first inspection will tell you that.

In Europe, people are accustomed to paying $1500 to $1800 for a car of this size and quality. Yet today, because of the tremendous manufacturing facilities of Willys-Overland, it sells in America for less than half this price.

You can compare the Overland Whippet with all other American light cars on the basis of price alone. But from the standpoint of engineering, performance, comfort and quality, it has established an entirely new criterion by which all other light cars must be judged.

The Overland Whippet is furnished in three body styles . . . Sedan, Touring and Coupe.

No more sitting bolt-upright—seats are placed in a naturally restful position

See this new-type car

Come, see this car. Take this advertisement with you and check the things we say here against what you find. We have purposely understated every fact. We have told you the story of the Overland Whippet without exaggeration.

You have never seen a car like this before.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet, it is not sound judgment today to consider the purchase of a less modern car.

A new trend of automobile design is dawning in America. Other light cars of similar design will follow this one.

But today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

In fairness to yourself, see this car.

The first formal showing of the Overland Whippet is now being held by dealers in this territory.

STEUBEN CLUB PLANS 32 STORY LOOP BUILDING

Membership Roster to Be 15,000.

"In those colonial days when George Washington was in dire need of experienced military officers to train his soldiers and stiffen their morale the famous German soldier and champion of democracy, Baron von Steuben, a lover of freedom and independence, came with an offer of his services and his private fortune, which was gratefully accepted.

"He organized the colonial army and gave much needed aid to the colonies in securing their independence from foreign tyranny and insuring the glorious development of our country.

"In this he towers above all other names of foreign soldiers in the revolutionary war, not excepting La Fayette and Kosciusko. Now, after a century and a half, those of German blood in Chicago, as a testimonial to this great soldier and patriot, have founded the Steuben club, a corporation chartered under the laws of Illinois and organized not for profit."—Excerpt from statement by Henry J. Greune, president of the Steuben club.

Chicago, already famous for its clubs, built or building, is to have another magnificent structure which in some ways will surpass anything of its kind in the world. This is the proposed thirty-two story home of the Steuben club, an organization which contemplates an ultimate membership of 15,000.

HENRY J. GREUNE

This huge roster is to include people of German descent as well as German born residents of Chicago and the middle west. There will be 1,000 life memberships, 5,000 non-resident and 5,000 resident members.

Two Sites Under Consideration.

Two loop sites are now under consideration and the selection is expected to be made shortly. Vitzthum & Burns, designers of the Midland club, the proposed La Salle club and the Sky Line club on top of the Bell building, which they also designed, will be the architects of the Steuben club.

As shown in the accompanying picture the skyscraper club will not follow the old fashioned Chicago type of club building. It'll not be merely a huge packing case, surmounted by a gigantic cornice and ornamented with a galaxy of pent houses and roof tanks. It'll be one of the first imposing examples of the New York set-back style of architecture, with all of the usual roof atrocities taken care of in the general architectural scheme and hidden from view.

Has Room to Expand.

In reality it will be a fifteen story clubhouse set on top of a seventeen story commercial building. The use of setbacks not only adds to the beauty of the building's skyline but it gives the club a couple of imposing open terraces. The plans call for the gradual leasing of the commercial space in the first seventeen stories into club quarters as the organization grows. The upper part of the structure will be called the German building.

This Means that instead of having to acquire adjacent space and build annexes as the membership roll enlarges the club will merely expand street-wards till eventually it is expected the organization may occupy all but the first floor.

Huge Open Air Gymnasium on 32d Floor.

Probably the most outstanding feature of the club building will be the huge gymnasium on the top floor, so arranged that the glass roof can be rolled back and an open air space accommodating 2,000 Turners at one time made available.

A large swimming pool is planned in connection with the bath department on the upper floors of the club, just below the gymnasium. A large number of rehearsal rooms will be provided for the practicing of singing societies.

Other floors of the fifteen story club section of the thirty-two story building will be used for a large main dining room, private dining rooms, cardrooms, billiard and lounge rooms, bowling alleys and, in fact, all the other comforts and conveniences found in the modern metropolitan club. There'll be 500 sleeping rooms, all with baths.

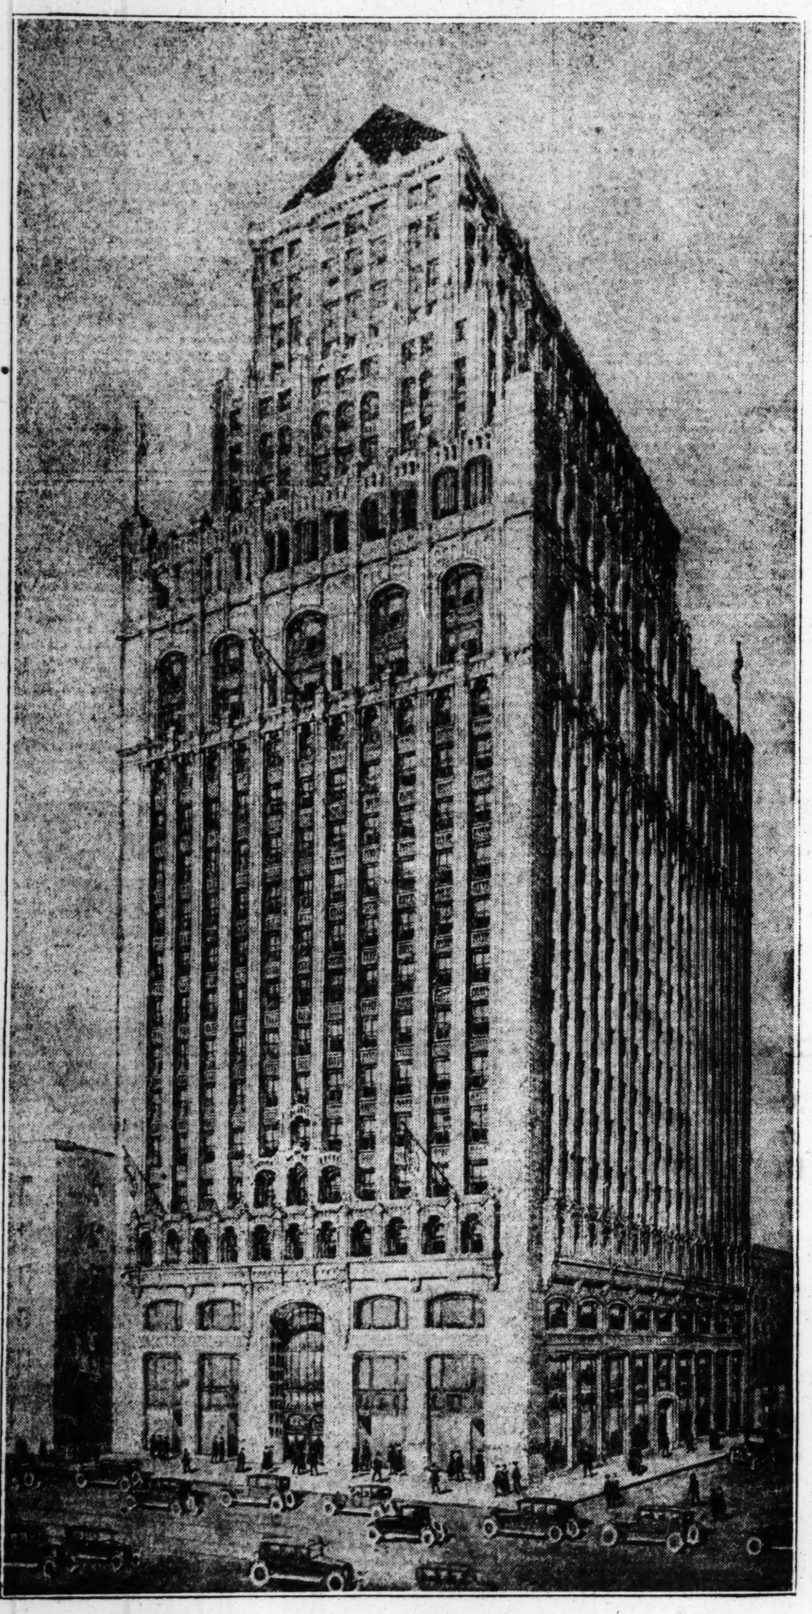
Who the Officers Are.

Henry J. Greune of the Greune-Mueller Coal company is president of the new club. Walter R. Miller is vice president. Frank Trautman is secretary.

The advisory board is composed of Frederick Hildmann, C. R. Woodward, Judith Roth, C. F. Pegenau, Frank Heitmann, William J. Zuttermeister, Alfred Samuel, G. A. Zeugel, F. C. Adams, Charles Hauptmann, and Laura M. Reinholz.

The club has temporary headquarters in the First National Bank building in suite 1559. Permanent quarters are to be established in the Atlantic hotel. No application for membership will be accepted except from people of German ancestry.

WITH SET-BACKS A LA MANHATTAN

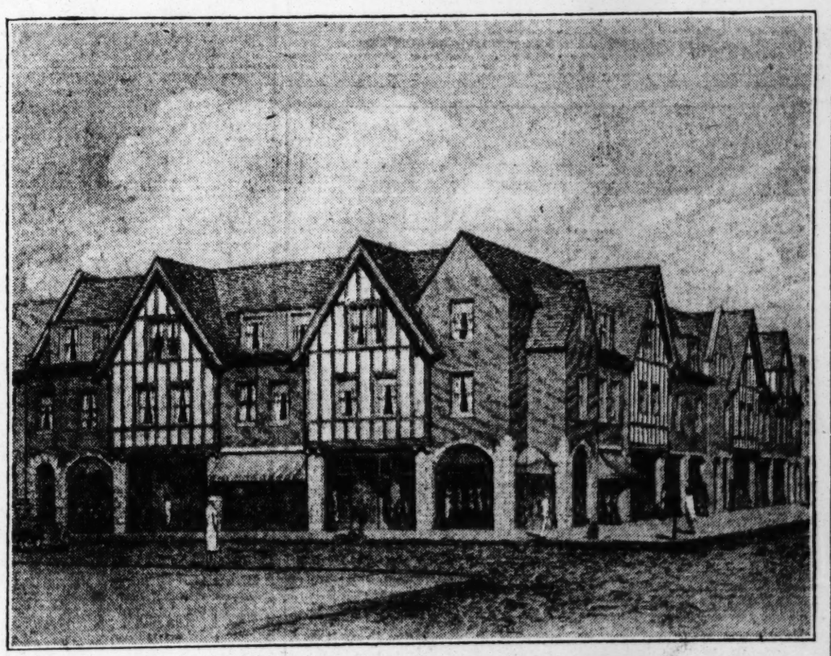


Vitzthum & Burns designed the above thirty-two story structure to be erected by the new Steuben club on a loop site to be announced later. It will cost approximately $4,000,000. Instead of the customary packing house style of architecture New York set-backs are employed, and the usual painful medley of roof tanks, penthouses, and smokestacks will not disfigure the Chicago sky line. Details are given in a nearby column.

ROSEMONT APARTMENT HOTEL

A nine story apartment hotel will be erected at the southeast corner of Rosemont and Winthrop avenues, in the Edgewater district. It will be called the Rosemont and will represent an investment of about $1,000,000 when completed. Roy F. France & Co. are the architects.

LIKE AN OLD ENGRAVING



Resembling an old time steel engraving is the picture above illustrating the attractive mercantile building which M. K. Meyer, president of the Winnetka Trust and Savings bank, will erect in Winnetka. The building was designed by Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton. It will contain a large department store space on Elm street and four small shops fronting on Chestnut street. The upper floors will contain apartments. There will be a large, attractive courtyard entered through a gateway from Chestnut street. The cost will be about $180,000 and the structure will be ready for occupancy in the spring of 1927.

BOUL MICH SITE IS BOUGHT FROM PALMER ESTATE

Walter Ahlschlager to Be Architect.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

One of the most spectacular building projects ever announced for Chicago, involving probably $10,000,000 in all, is to give this city a 400 foot Ritz hotel tower, a twenty-three story office building, and a luxurious playhouse, if present plans are carried out. This ambitious group of buildings, to be designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, will be directly opposite the Drake, in Streeterville, with a block of frontage on Upper Michigan avenue, between Walton and Delaware places.

WALTER AHLSCHLAGER.

Details were disclosed when a syndicate of Chicago investors signed contracts for the purchase of the site from the Potter Palmer estate. The price was not disclosed, but it is understood that the property was valued by the Palmer estate at more than $2,000,000. Ross & Browne were the only brokers in the deal.

400 Foot Ritz Tower.

Mr. Ahlschlager has submitted drawings and Pischen Bros., contractors, have made estimates to the syndicate for an 850 room hotel, to tower skyward 400 feet. The main section of the hotel will be twenty-six stories, according to the plans, with the tower climbing many stories higher.

It is understood that the Ritz interests of New York will operate the hotel, which of course will bear that internationally famous name. It will be on the north half of the property purchased, with the main entrance directly opposite the Walton place entrance to the Drake. The hotel will have shops on both Boul Mich and Walton.

Playhouse on Delaware Place.

On the south half of the site an office building is contemplated, with an intimate type theater just back of it, fronting on Delaware place, with its main entrance directly opposite the Casino.

The playhouse will have only one balcony and it is planned to make it one of the most luxurious theaters in this country. It will have an entrance connecting it with the Ritz hotel, which means that guests of the Drake, Lake Shore, and other Gold Coast hotels to the north and east may enter through the Ritz lobby.

Plan Elaborate Setbacks.

It has been hinted that the most elaborate use of setbacks so far undertaken by any local architect will be employed by Mr. Ahlschlager, so that the group promises to be one of the most distinctive architectural features of the middle west.

The entire property purchased fronts 215 feet on Michigan avenue, 231 feet on Walton place, and the same on Delaware place. Title to the property was taken for the syndicate by Rose I. Davis.

The big project will be carried out in units. The Ritz hotel section will be the first to be constructed.

This will give Streeterville four big hotels within a few hundred feet of each other. The fourteen story Davis hotel is to be built directly to the east of the Ritz on Walton place. The Drake and Lake Shore hotels are directly across Walton to the north.

Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were attorneys for the syndicate, and Winston, Strawn & Shaw for the Palmer estate.

ARCHITECTS HAVE USUAL PEACEFUL ANNUAL ELECTION

Although there were two tickets in the field in the recent election held by the Illinois Society of Architects, there was little excitement, as nearly every one was on each ticket. As already announced, Leon E. Stanhope was unanimously elected president, his name heading both tickets. Byron H. Jillson again is vice president. H. L. Palmer was named as financial secretary on both tickets, so was unanimously reflected. Robert C. Ostergren again is treasurer and Ralph C. Harris continues as secretary.

H. L. PALMER.

George Heimle of Springfield is the only new name among the officers. He becomes second vice president, succeeding Frank A. Carpenter.

Two new directors were elected, each for three years: Emery Stanford Hall and Alfred Granger. The board of arbitration was reelected.

We'll Bet Antoinette Would Know What "Valaze" Means

Probably Antoinette Donnelley could write feelingly and intelligently about the fact that Madame Helena Rubenstein has leased the three story building at 666 Upper Michigan avenue, now occupied by the M. O'Brien & Son art galleries. Never even having heard of Helena, and not being able to locate Antoinette at the moment, we'll have to depend on Dwight B. Yoder, of the office of Earle A. Shilton for our inspiration.

"Madame Rubenstein is one of the leading manufacturers of beauty preparations, with beauty salons in London, Newark, Paris, Detroit, Vienna, New York, and other large cities," patiently explained Mr. Yoder. "She's leased this building owned by Samuel J. Walker Jr. and his sister, Madame Helen W. Szukalska, for fourteen years, beginning May, 1927.

"Madame Rubenstein, now located at 30 North Michigan, will establish in her new building a 'Salon de Beaute Valaze,' comparable to her New York salon and—"

We stopped Mr. Yoder there and suggested he translate that "Salon de Beaute Valaze." He admitted he didn't know what it meant. When Philip Hampson, assistant real estate editor, who spent a year in Paris during the war, and who speaks French like a Parisian, likewise muffed the word "Valaze," we let Mr. Yoder continue.

"Madame Rubenstein will do considerable remodeling and furnishing," he said. "Madame Manka Rubenstein, who has been the head of the Paris establishment, will come to Chicago to take charge here."

FORMER HOME OF DE KOVEN ON ELM STREET IS SOLD

The house at 104 Bellevue place, which was built for the late Reginald De Koven at the time of the world's fair, has just been sold by the Pennsylvania railroad to Mrs. George Howland for $60,000. The railroad bought the residence from Mr. De Koven just ten years ago, and it was occupied by the late William H. Scriven, an official of the road, until his death last fall. E. A. Warfield represented the railroad and Louis C. Sudler of McMenemy & Martin, Inc., was broker for the buyer.

PLAN $100,000 18 FLAT BUILDING ON ASHLAND AVENUE

Arthur Kruggel & Co. plan an eighteen apartment building on the lot, 50x125 feet, at 4843 North Ashland avenue, which they recently secured. The apartment building is to cost about $100,000. Mr. Kruggel recently sold the property at 5420-24 Broadway, containing three stores and two apartments, to Annyta Rabinoff for a consideration of $70,000, subject to $35,000. He took in part payment the Ashland avenue property, which was valued at $25,000.

Pays More than $1,000 per Foot on North La Salle St.

A reported $25,000 was paid for twenty-four feet of frontage on North La Salle street yesterday by Marie Hodgkinson, who purchased the nine-room residence at No. 1347 from Mrs. Beth Weber McCormack. G. Gill, of McMenemy & Martin, was broker.

9 STORY HOTEL IS ANNOUNCED FOR EDGEWATER

Sunken Garden Will Be Feature.

A new tall apartment hotel is announced for Edgewater. It's to be called the Rosemont and will be erected at the southeast corner of Winthrop and Rosemont avenues.

The Rosemont will be nine stories high. Designed by Roy F. France & Co., the structure will be in the Adam period style of architecture. The exterior is to be of colonial red brick with pulcicromo terra cotta trim.

There will be an ornamental canopy over the main entrance on Rosemont leading to an elaborate lounge, which will extend across the Winthrop avenue elevation. An elaborate sunken garden will be located in the south court.

The structure will contain 120 one and two room apartments. All are to be furnished. When completed the project will represent an investment of about $1,000,000. The present buildings on the site have been wrecked and work will start in about three weeks.

The structure will be owned by the Rosemont Building corporation, composed of Roy F. France, architect; Merritt F. Eldridge, secretary and treasurer of the Chicago Engineering Works, and Louis A. Roos, a loop jeweler.

RUDOLPH NEDVED IS MADE HEAD OF ARCHITECT BODY

Rudolph Nedved, Chicago architect, has been elected president of the Chicago Architectural Exhibition league and will have charge of the annual exhibition of that body at the Art institute. The league is made up of the Chicago chapter of the A. I. A., the Illinois Society of Architects and the Architectural Sketch Club of Chicago. Harry B. Wheelock, president of the Chicago chapter, A. I. A. and Leon E. Stanhope, newly elected president of the Illinois Society of Architects, were elected vice presidents of the league. Daniel H. Burnham was made treasurer and George Nedved was named as secretary.

Protective Real Estate Board Will Have Picnic

The Protective Real Estate board of Cook county will hold a basket picnic at Columbia park, Willow Springs, Ill., on June 30. Tickets may be had from John B. Bernard, 2606 Avers avenue, Crawford 1333.

PAYS $140,000 FOR FOUR HOUSES IN CEDAR STREET

An interesting deal was consummated in the rapidly growing de luxe apartment and hotel district on the near north side, when Mrs. Minnie C. Butts of 849 North Clark street purchased the property at 59-61-63-65 East Cedar street from Stella F. Polk, for a reported price of $140,000. The site, which is expected to be occupied by a major development in a few years, measures 82x72 feet. It is now improved with four 4 story stone residences, which formerly belonged to the Potter Palmer estate. The seventeen story apartment building recently announced for 70 East Cedar street will be just across the street. Mrs. Polk bought the property from the Palmer estate about two and a half years ago. W. C. Kaindl was broker in the deal.

Economical Drug Company Plans 25 Chicago Stores

The Economical Drug company announces an expansion program which calls for the opening of twenty-five more drug stores before Sept. 1. One of the first of this chain will be at St. Louis avenue and Roosevelt road, where space has been rented from Samuel Isenstein for a fifteen year term. A Spanish design will be used in the remodeling of the store, which is 100x34. It'll have a fountain room, also in Spanish, with a thirty-two foot fountain of California tile.

SYNDICATE BUYS DU PAGE COUNTY, 277 ACRE TRACT

W. Hayden Bell has sold the tract of 277 acres along Butterfield road and 22d street extended, which he bought last January, to a syndicate composed of Lee J. Lesser, George W. Prassas, Edward Sonnenschein, and Henry Hedberg. Title was taken by Albert Hartman. The price is reported as $470,000, which is at the rate of $1,700 an acre.

The property, which lies a couple of miles or more south of Villa Park, and a few miles west of Westchester, is to be developed along ambitious lines, it is claimed. Details, however, are not available at present. Lindheimer & Wells were brokers and Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson and Julian Luster were attorneys.

SYNDICATE PAYS $300,000 FOR A GOLD COAST SITE

A reported $300,000 was paid yesterday by a syndicate for the block of frontage on the east side of De Witt place, between Delaware and Chestnut. Title was taken in the name of Gertrude Fried.

The property was sold by the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee. Ross & Browne were the only brokers. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were attorneys for the syndicate.

The property fronts 221 feet on De Witt, 100 on Chestnut, and ninety-five feet on Delaware place. The new owners have no building plans at present.

UNION OFFICIAL STEPS INTO ROLE OF DORIS BLAKE

Finds Girls of Today Not Up to Scratch.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Young people marrying today use far less wisdom in planning a successful marriage career than their ancestors did twenty, thirty, and forty years ago, according to William Maloney, business representative of the Hoisting Engineers' union, who was selected from a field of candidates last week for the position of secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Federation corporation.

WM. MALONEY.

The Federation corporation was organized a few months ago by the Chicago Building Trades council to help wage earners to build homes on a 100 per cent union basis. It was decided to lend money to prospective home builders to the extent of 66 2-3 per cent of the total valuation of the building cost. As the activities of the company expanded the bar was let down and other trades unions were allowed to participate in the home building movement, and at the present time most of the large local unions are interested in the enterprise. The capital of the Illinois Federation corporation is now nearing the $350,000 mark.

Sheriff on Heels.

"Take the young married couple of today, and right off the reel they move into apartments where the high rents keep them just about a step and a half ahead of the landlord and the sheriff," Maloney said.

"And to keep ahead of those two gentlemen both the young married man and his better half are obliged to work. While it is true that conditions of all classes of wage earners have improved tremendously in the last ten or fifteen years, both from the wage and housing angle, nevertheless the great improvement has resulted in domestic changes which cannot be complimented.

"In the times of way back when, the young lady entering into matrimony figured her home planning differently than does the girl of today. Back in 1900, a young married couple was contented to live in a flat, the rent of which was not considered exorbitant. However, there was more work to be done to keep a home of that type neat and clean. In the average home of that period there were no vacuum cleaners, or similar devices to lessen home cleaning.

Paid Cash Then.

"The girl of the 1900 period, or the period of 1880 or 1890 bought her furniture on a cash basis and obtained it piece by piece as the family budget warranted. Then, a certain sum from father's pay envelope, in the event he brought one home, was laid aside in cases illnerr, or any other misfortune rapped on the door. The roof of the old time home most generally shielded the heads of a large and healthy family of children from the elements."

Mr. Maloney pointed out that about the only recreation afforded heads of homes then was obtained from family sources and occasionally in a glass or two of good beer.

High priced movie shows were unheard of then, he said, adding that a musical comedy or drama once or twice a year satisfied and was the order of the day.

Not Much Garbage.

"But now," he said, "young women just married will not think of renting an apartment unless it has a garbage incinerator, one which slides refuse from the apartment to the boiler room. In the old days there wasn't much garbage left when a housewife and mother had to feed from six to ten and sometimes twelve children.

"Too, in the old days the German butcher got a big play, the average family putting on a big feed Sunday when all members of the household would put their feet under the table. This has become passe and now it is the delicatessen shop owners who have to pay income taxes. So take it all and all, while housing has improved, there was more happiness and contentment in the days of large families, real beer, than there is today in homes in which the voices of children are never heard."

The Harbor

McNally & Quinn are the architects for the seven story apartment hotel to be known as the Harbor which will be erected at 434 Belmont avenue. There will be fifty-three apartments of one, two, and three rooms each, with one seven room apartment on the top floor. The style of architecture is Adam. The project will represent an investment of $420,000. The Harbor will be ready for occupancy about Oct. 1.

WORKERS BUSY ON APARTMENT INN FOR GORDON TER.

Of Spanish Design; Cost $820,000.

Work is now under way on a tall apartment hotel at the southeast corner of Gordon terrace and Clarendon avenue which will replace the old frame residence which long occupied the site. The yard for a number of years provided a tiny ball ground for the "kids" of the neighborhood.

The structure is to be known as the Gordon Terrace Apartment hotel. It's to be nine stories high and will contain 112 furnished apartments of one, two, and three rooms.

Edmond J. Meles is the architect for this structure, which will be of Spanish design, in harmony with other buildings of a somewhat similar type in the district. The exterior is to be of face brick, trimmed with cut stone. There will be a few metal balconies here and there to relieve the monotony of the walls.

The main floor is to contain an attractively furnished lobby with a terrazzo floor, Caen stone plaster walls, and a beamed ceiling.

The structure will be owned by the Gordon Terrace Building corporation, of which J. Goldberg and Abe Goldstein, builders, are the principal stockholders. It is stated that Mr. Goldstein will buy a large part of the furnishings for the hotel in Europe.

When completed it is said that the project will represent an investment of $820,000. The Straus Brothers company of 10 South La Salle street has underwritten a bond issue of $485,000 at 6½ per cent on the development.

La Vergne and Quincy Flat Building Sold for $146,000

The twenty-four apartments at the southeast corner of La Vergne avenue and Quincy street, 106x124, were sold by Morris Cohen to John T. Kerwin, former president of the Footgear Manufacturing company, for $146,000, according to Elmer Maher, broker.

For the second time in the last twelve months prices are reduced on "Caterpillar" Tractors. The huge increase in sales has again made possible a saving in manufacturing costs which are passed on to the "Caterpillar" purchasers in the form of lower prices. The quality has in no way been changed to make these reductions—"Caterpillar" Tractors will give the same trouble-free, gratifying performance that has made them so famous.

At these lowered prices contractors will find it an economy to put another tractor on their jobs and speed up work.

Let our representative call and give you costs and ideas on how to grade and move earth by cheap, efficient, modern methods.

Work is under way on an $820,000 apartment hotel at the southeast corner of Gordon terrace and Clarendon avenue. The structure will be nine stories high and will have 112 apartments of one, two, and three rooms each. The hotel, of Spanish design, is being erected from plans drawn by Edmond J. Meles. The site formerly was occupied by an old residence which was surrounded by a large yard. And for several years the yard served as a ball ground for the boys of the neighborhood, oftentimes forcing the more sedate inhabitants passing by to dodge the misdirected spheres that were wont to hurtle through the air. The Straus Bros. company has underwritten a $485,000 bond issue on the project.

Nine Apartment Building Rising at Quincy, Lotus

Samuel Favish is erecting a nine flat building at the southwest corner of Quincy and Lotus avenue, Austin, which he bought from Dr. John H. Evans for a reported $35,000. The Greenfield-Sherman company were brokers in the sale.

South Park-61st Corner Changes Hands: $135,000

The southeast corner of South Park and 61st, containing nine stores and four offices, was sold by Michael Davis to Maurice Garmisa for a reported $135,000. David Snyder of Snyder & Cohn, was attorney.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To June 27, 1916; 10 Years Ago Today

An exceedingly attractive apartment building, known as the Parkington, is being erected by Carl O. Lindquist and L. W. Larson at the northeast corner of Wisconsin avenue and Washington boulevard, Oak Park. The building, which was designed by Architect John A. Nyden, will contain twenty-three apartments of four and five rooms.

A tract to be known as the Ridgemoor addition to Evanston has been subdivided by Miss Ella McCollough. The property lies on Ridge boulevard and Stewart street, running west from Ridge to Barton avenue.

Alexander H. Revell sold to Elizabeth Cudahy Nelson, the wife of William P. Nelson, a piece of property 100 x158 feet, south front, in Barry avenue, 100 feet east of Sheridan road, for a reported price of $50,000. It is stated that Mrs. Nelson will build a residence on the site.

Barnard Company Leases Space in Federal Street

The W. W. Barnard company, a seed, plant, and bulb firm, has leased 22,000 square feet of warehouse space at 3942 South Federal street from the Lee Tire and Rubber company of New York for seven years at an aggregate rental of $52,800. E. N. Duerlin & Co. negotiated the lease.

Will Build Junior High in Lincoln Street, Evanston

A junior high school, which it is said will be a model for other high schools of its type in the country, will be erected at the southeast corner of Prairie avenue and Lincoln street, Evanston. Charles & Smith are the architects. Helen McGuire has just conveyed title to the property.

To June 27, 1906; 20 Years Ago Today

James W. Stevens of the Illinois Life Insurance company has leased the property at the northwest corner of Clark and Monroe streets, now occupied by the Hamilton club. The Hamilton club lease has six years to run with the privilege of a ten years' extension. It is believed, however, that Mr. Stevens and the club will come to terms, permitting the former to take possession of the property. Mr. Stevens agrees to erect a ten story building on the site in 1916.

JAMES W. STEVENS

The International Harvester works bought from the American Trust and Savings bank, trustee, a tract of twenty acres at the southeast corner of 119th and Loomis streets, for a reported price of $40,000. The property will be used for a lumber yard.

McGuire & Orr sold for S. W. Crandall of Syracuse, N. Y., the twelve flat property at 1705-13 Kenmore avenue for $55,000, Mr. Crandall taking in part payment 1,250 feet of north shore property fronting on Sheridan road and Linden and Greenleaf avenues, Wilmette, at a valuation of $50,000.

R. G. Dun Leases Floor in New '300 W. Adams Bldg.'

R. G. Dun & Co., for twenty-three years in the New York Life building, has leased for ten years the entire seventh floor of the twelve story "300 West Adams building," which David Shetnitz is to erect on the site of the old Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. wholesale building at the northwest corner of Adams and Franklin.

Three other concerns are negotiating for five floors in the new office building. Gus Neufeld and Mr. Shetnitz negotiated the Dun lease.

To June 27, 1896; 30 Years Ago Today

De Lancey H. Louderback, president of the Northwestern Elevated railroad, has just purchased a piece of ground, 50x150, in Sheridan road, for $5,000. This gives Mr. Louderback a frontage of 150 feet. He will build a magnificent residence on the site. Frederick D. Whiting, general manager of the Cunard line of steamers, bought 100x183 feet of ground in Sheridan road, with riparian rights, for $11,000. J. L. Cochran negotiated both deals.

DE LANCEY H. LOUDERBACK.

Plans have been negotiated by Richard Schmidt for the new hospital which the Alexian Brothers will build on the site bought by them last November for $70,000. The buildings, to cost $150,000, will be grouped on the land, which has a frontage of 597 feet in Belden avenue and Huber street and 200 feet in Racine and Herndon avenues.

Jenny & Mundie have been commissioned by Levi Z. Leiter to remodel the east half of the old Grand Pacific hotel into a first class hostelry. The plan is to model the hotel after the Astor house of New York.

Canadian Building Permits Show Gain Over May, 1925

The rapid upward swing of Canadian building activities was indicated by figures furnished by S. W. Straus & Co. yesterday, showing a 16 per cent gain in May permits compared with May, 1925. Canada's May permits totaled $18,513,422, of which $9,500,000 was for 1,950 dwellings.

ABANDON HOSPITAL PLAN.

The vacant southwest corner of South Park avenue and West 22d street, 225x112, has been bought by Kohout Brothers, realtors, from the Cicero General Hospital association for $50,000 cash. The new owners will improve with three seventy-five foot automobile salesrooms. This site was purchased two years ago by the Cicero general hospital association, but the idea of building a hospital recently was abandoned and donations are to be refunded to subscribers.

START MOVE TO CLEAN UP ROOF LINE SCRAMBLE

Action Promised by Leon E. Stanhope.

"What we want to do is to get the public to raise their eyes from the skirt line to the sky line—then people will see the beauties of architecture."—Harvey Wiley Corbett of Helme & Corbett, New York architects, in a speech before the Illinois Society of Architects at their annual banquet on Tuesday.

One of the first planks in the program of the new president of the Illinois Society of Architects, Leon E. Stanhope, was announced yesterday by this well known Chicago architect. It is to do something to make the skyline of Chicago attractive enough to cause the average Chicagoan to follow Mr. Corbett's foregoing suggestion.

LEON E. STANHOPE [Moffett Photo.]

"Probably no large world city has such an atrocious sky line," said Mr. Stanhope, "a sky line in which hideous eyesores in the shape of roof tanks, smoke stacks, ventilators, penthouses and other ill shaped structures and objects are scattered about on the roofs of buildings otherwise architecturally attractive.

Mars Loop Views.

"The view from practically any office in the upper floors of loop skyscrapers is completely marred by the hideous roofs of the average Chicago building.

"The situation is improving slowly, however. Architects and owners both are realizing more and more that the roof is in many cases the most conspicuous part of the building and that no matter how attractive the design may be, the architectural ensemble is spoiled if the roof is a jumble of tanks and penthouses.

Set-Back Solves N. Y. Problem.

"New York has practically solved this problem by using the set-back style of architecture. Chicago still sticks to old-fashioned lines. Meanwhile I hope the Illinois Society of Architects may be able to do something to improve roof line conditions. Eventually, of course, the set-back automatically will solve Chicago's problem as it has New York's."

Any one reading this story who doesn't spend any time in a loop office and who may not understand what a view from a skyscraper may mean, should look at the next column where a TRIBUNE photographer's camera will vividly explain things.

This picture, by the way, isn't an exceptional one. It was taken from the Tribune Tower merely because it was the handiest. Take a look out of almost any loop office building upper story, except, of course, out of those along Boul Mich, south of Randolph, and you'll see as unsightly a mess of roof ornamentation as THE TRIBUNE photograph shows.

America Puts Up 295,386 Buildings During 1925

New homes and apartment buildings to house 491,222 families were constructed in 1925 in the principal cities of the United States, an increase of accommodation of 48,303 family shelters as compared with the year previous. To accomplish this, 295,386 separate buildings were constructed. According to figures obtained from Washington bureaus by the research department of the Greenebaum Sons Investment company the building activities for 1924 took care of 442,919 families, 443,673 families in 1923, 377,305 families in 1922, and 224,504 families in 1921.

Two Noted Firms Lease Stores Near Logan Square

S. W. Straus & Co. are underwriting a bond issue of $350,000 on a two story commercial building which will be erected at the northwest corner of Spaulding and Milwaukee avenues, in the Logan Square district. The structure will contain nine stores on the ground floor and seven offices and a large restaurant on the second. The Walgreen Drug Co. and F. W. Woolworth & Co. have leased stores. The owner is the Milwaukee and Spaulding Building corporation of which B. Leo Steif and Charles P. Schwartz are the principal stockholders. Mr. Steif also is the architect.

Downers Grove Adopts Zoning Board System

Downers Grove, a suburb west of this city, on the Burlington, is the latest nearby town to announce a zoning and building restriction system. This arrangement was made to secure the proper development of the suburb and to prevent "squatter" subdividing. R. W. Carpenter is secretary of the zoning board.

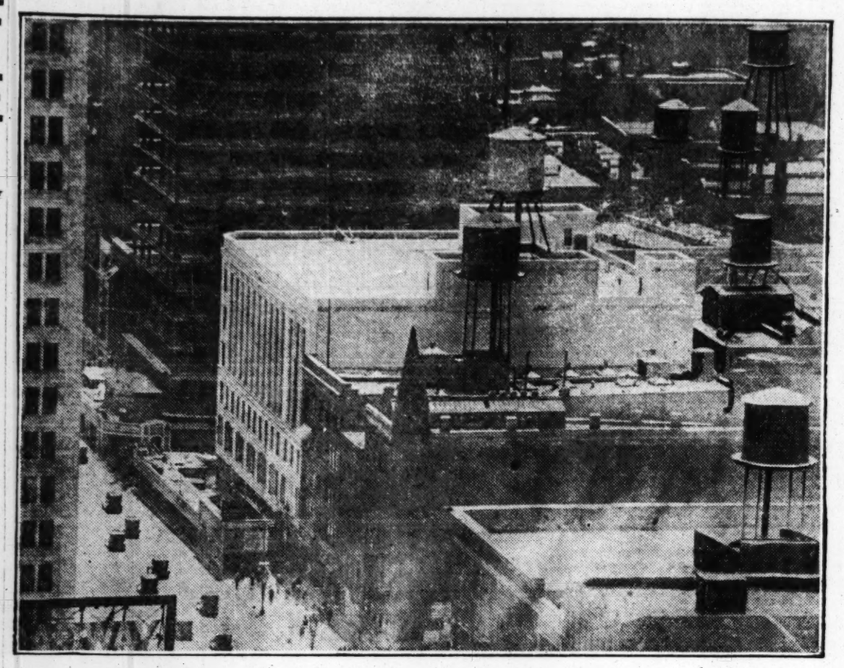
Stores and Garage on East 47th Street Sold; $165,000

Elon Johnson and William F. Greig sold to Joseph Bigley the four stores and garage at 437-45 East 47th street, 100x200, for a reported $165,000. They took in part payment the eighteen apartments at 6205 Langley avenue at $120,000. Humphrey & Grubb and Carroll, Schendorf & Boenicke were brokers.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

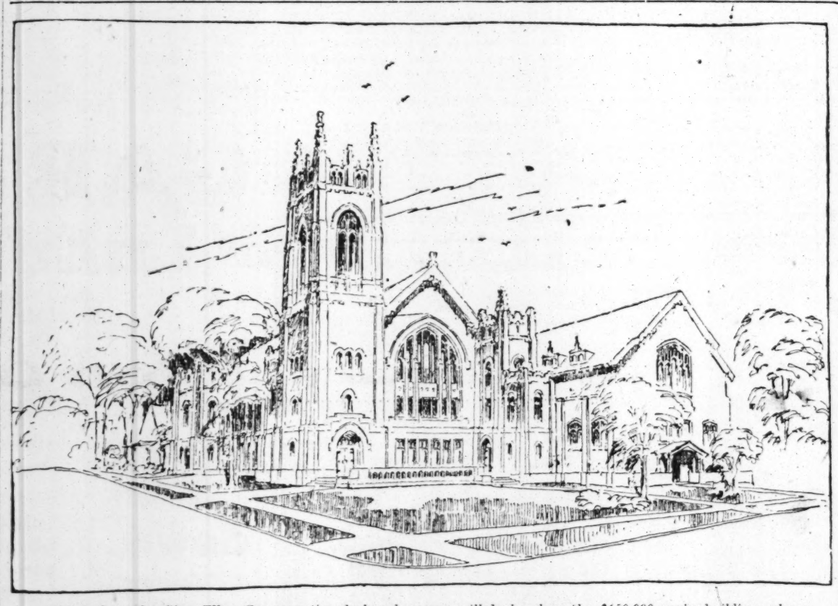
The value of the building under construction at 10719-23 South Park avenue is $175,000 instead of $100,000, as stated in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday. Louis A. Switzer is underwriting a bond issue of $100,000 on the project.

A Bit of Chicago's Scrambled Roof Line



Isn't this a charming bit of scrambled architecture? It's a view southwest from The Tribune Tower and shows more plainly than a real estate editor's typewriter ever could how tanks, smokestacks, penthouses, and other eyesores combine to make Chicago's roof line, plainly visible, of course, from all neighboring buildings, about the most unsightly vista to be found in any large city. Of course, most of these roof atrocities are on old buildings. The white six story structure in the center, however, is a brand new modern building going up at the northwest corner of Michigan and Lake, so the huge tank perched on steel legs seems unnecessarily conspicuous and unsightly. It also has three separate penthouses made of brick. The trend of modern city architecture is to hide such eyesores either in a tower or else add a set-back story and inclose all penthouses, tanks, and stacks.

Glen Ellyn Congregational Church



This is how the Glen Ellyn Congregational church group will look when the $150,000 main building, shown on the left with the tower, is completed. Holmes & Flinn, Chicago architects, have designed an English Gothic edifice to seat 650, with arrangements made for a transept to be added when needed at the northeast corner, with 250 more seats. The original building, on the right, will be used for Sunday school purposes, and with its gymnasium will be available as a community center.

The first floor of the new edifice will be devoted entirely to Sunday school uses. It will be of the same colored brick as the original building, with Bedford stone trim. The tower will be made so chimes can be installed later if it is thought best. Work is to start in about two months, with completion set for next year. The church group is at the northeast corner of Forest avenue and Anthony street. The Rev. Orville Kiplinger is pastor.

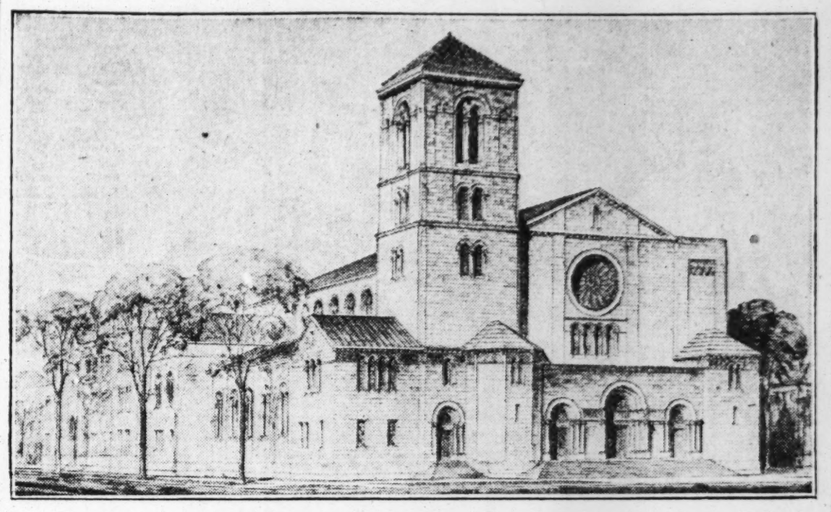
A Bulwark of Christianity



The dream of the Edgewater Presbyterian church to have one of the finest religious plants in the city is now moving toward fulfillment with the start of work on the congregation's $400,000 community house at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Bryn Mawr avenues. The church owns the entire block on the north side of Bryn Mawr between Sheridan road and Kenmore and eventually a church to cost $400,000 or more will occupy the eastern half of the property, facing on Sheridan road. The development was designed by Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton and the style of architecture is Italian Romanesque. The exterior is to be of variegated and colored Indiana limestone. The community house will contain an auditorium, gymnasium, various classrooms, and on the fourth floor apartments for the pastor and his assistants. The present pastor is the Rev. Asa J. Ferry.

33 APARTMENTS TO HELP SUPPORT CHICAGO CHURCH

Announce Building Plans for St. Timothy's.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

There is going to be one church in the city where the pastor will not have to cast such anxious eyes and listen so intently when the collection plates are passed among the members of his congregation. Sounds like the description of a church in the Promised Land or Evanston, but it's not—the church will be right here in Chicago, at the southeast corner of Central Park avenue and Huron street, to be exact.

Of course it is to be expected that Dr. Norton and othe. chance ministers who may happen to glance over these columns will scoff, but here's how the St. Timothy Episcopal church will do it.

The church will erect a large apartment building on a part of its property and then collect, and it will be up to the tenants to pay and pay and pay, thereby making less urgent calls on the pocketbooks of the congregation.

A New Tower.

St. Timothy's has an important building program under way. First, it is going to remodel and enlarge its present church and parish house, build a tower, entrance, and narthex on the church auditorium floor level, and a chapel in the basement. Going back to the foregoing sentence a moment, it may be well to explain for the ignorant, like ourselves, that a narthex is not some soft of a throat affliction, as its name might seem to indicate, but, according to Mr. Webster, a vestibule, lobby, or outer porch leading to the nave of a church. So apply to the foregoing narthex the part of this definition which you like best.

The present church roof will be removed and it will be replaced with a new one. There are to be copper flashings and downspouts. The tower of the church is to be of face brick with stone trim, and it will have at the top a large cross that will be illuminated at night.

Returning to the apartment building, which will occupy the Central Park avenue side of the church property, there are to be six four-room and twenty-seven three-room flats, thirty-three in all. Most of the first floor will be used for church offices and activities. But on the upper floors the building will be like any other apartment.

Most Modern Equipment.

The architects for the church, Morison and Wallace, state that the best of equipment and material will be used, as the officials of the congregation believe that they can keep down expenses to a minimum in this way. The flats are to have telephone cabinets, steel medicine cases, the latest kitchen equipment, and other features.

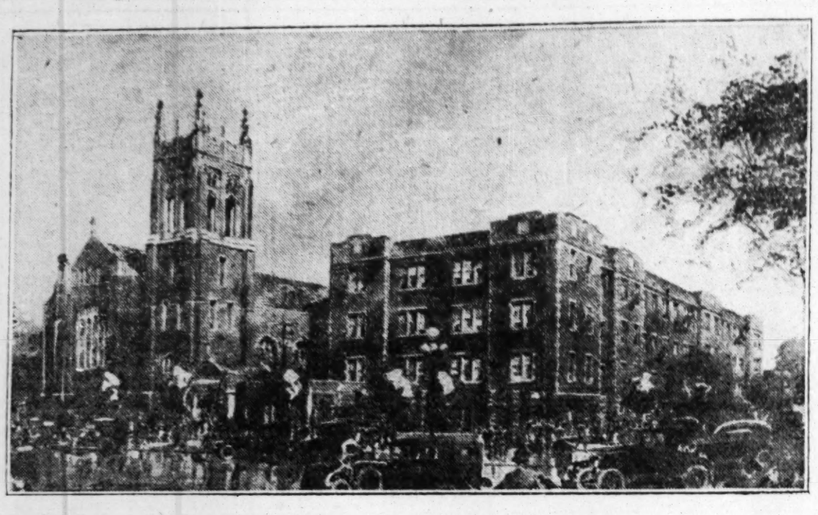
The boiler room in the basement will have boilers large enough to serve the needs of both the apartment building and the church. The two buildings will be connected underneath by a concrete tunnel and above ground by a cloister.

The exterior of the apartment building will be of face brick on all sides, with stone trim. The cost of the project will be $250,000. And the lucky pastor of the church is the Rev. C. M. Andrews.

COTTAGE GROVE AVENUE DEAL.

A. Bernstein and Sam Schrager sold to T. F. McFarland the building at 8038-40 Cottage Grove avenue, containing two stores and four apartments, for a reported $39,000. Solomon Smith of Hugo Ash & Co. was broker.

An Ecclesiastical Landlord



In announcing a $250,000 building program for St. Timothy Episcopal church at the northeast corner of Central Park avenue and Huron street it is revealed that the congregation will put up an apartment building with thirty-three flats to help pay the expenses of the church. The program calls for a remodeled and an enlarged church, a tower, and other improvements and an apartment building on a part of the property. Morison & Wallace are the architects. The rector of the church is the Rev. C. M. Andrews. Rendering by F. W. Fitzpatrick.

Flats for La Grange

A. C. Dallbach is erecting a thirty-three apartment building in 6th avenue, near Harris avenue, La Grange, Ill. It is to be called the Colonial. Arthur B. Malwurm is the architect.

Frank De Lugach Acquires 16 Acres; Will Subdivide

Frank De Lugach has purchased sixteen acres bounded by Rockwell at 87th and 88th streets and California avenue. He has subdivided it into 160 lots and will place it on the market as Beverly Manor. The property is near the Beverly Country club. California avenue and 87th street are zoned for business and the remaining lots are for apartments and houses.

Kenilworth Beach Residence

A residence with the design carried out in the tradition of the English seacoast home is being erected at the northwest corner of Abingdon avenue and Warwick lane, Kenilworth beach, Kenilworth, for H. W. Alger, a director of the Durant Motors corporation. William T. Braun is the architect for this unusually attractive residence. The exterior is of peach color clinker brick, laid skintled, with overlapping mortar joints. The timberwork is adzed and stained brown, with rough troweled cream stucco. The roof is of wood shingles, weathered brown in color, laid with rustic wavy line butts. The living room, dining room and hall walls are finished in rough plaster effects, painted and glazed.

News of the Architects

Hall, Lawrence, Ripper & Ratcliffe announce that Peter E. Camburas has been made a vice president of the firm. Mr. Camburas has been connected with the company for fifteen years.

TWO COMPANIES ADD TO HOLDINGS IN FACTORY AREA

Considerable activity is reported from the Central Manufacturing district, where a number of firms have either acquired or expanded holdings. The Chicago Pneumatic Tool company has purchased from the trustees of the district 12,270 square feet of ground in Iron street, near 37th, for a reported price of $15,500.

The firm will buy from the district a two story mill building of brick construction. H. E. Poronto, J. C. Erickson, and J. B. Whidden represented the district in the deal.

Two firms expanding their holdings are the Cleary Box company and the Sterling Fuel Oil corporation. Both have leased additional space in the district. The oil company now has 34,912 square feet and the box company 27,073 square feet.

Leases First Floor of New Warehouse to Studebaker

Charles J. Weber, who operates the Available Express and Van company and who is erecting a six story fireproof warehouse at 7730 Stony Island avenue, has leased the first floor to the Studebaker Sales company for a term of years. H. C. Stickney of McKey & Poague, was broker. The building it is expected will be completed Sept. 15th.

Livingston Bakery Plans Garage Near Its Factory

The Livingston Baking company has purchased the five houses adjacent to its factory at Herndon and Diversey parkway. They are to be wrecked and a two story garage, 125x125, is to be built. E. M. Steiner of the Lincoln Real Estate exchange was broker for all parties. Herrick, Vette & Peregrine were attorneys.

INDIANA STONE QUARRIES EXPECT BIG PRODUCTION

Twelve million cubic feet of building stone will be shipped from the Bedford-Bloomington district during the present year, according to A. E. Dickinson, president of the Indiana Limestone company. His estimate was based on shipments during the first six months and orders now on the books.

"The spectre of a serious building depression," Mr. Dickinson said, "seems to have faded like other dark omens of hard times. If we are to continue using the building construction as the barometer of general conditions, it must be admitted that the present year should give a splendid account of itself."

Mr. Dickinson was recently elected president of the Indiana Limestone company, the $40,000,000 corporation which acquired the properties of more than a score of companies in the great quarrying district of Indiana. Lawrence H. Whiting, Chicago banker, is chairman of the board.

SHERWOOD AVENUE SALE.

Hermann Juhnke has sold to Anton Misik the six apartment building at 1434-36 Sherwood avenue, for a reported $40,000, subject to $20,000. The three flat building at 820 Newport avenue, valued at $22,000, was given in part payment. George W. Kramer represented both parties as broker.

REAL ESTATORS TO HAVE OUTING IN MORTON GROVE

With the summer season just beginning, the most important matter now occupying the attention of the members of the Cook County Real Estate board is what it's going to do on July 14. If the weather bureau prepares a dish of rain and storm there will be lots of gloom, for July 14 is the date set for a gala outing at Morton Grove, in the forest preserve. The board has had grounds reserved for the affair. John J. Hecht, president of the organization, announces that there will be outdoor sports, music and dancing.

J. F. HECHT. [Walinger Photo.]

HOTEL TO GO UP AT BERKELEY AVE. AND 52D STREET

Leon L. Lewis has purchased from Harry Kamen for Edward Mayer and Kurt Rosenthal the property 76x100 feet at the southeast corner of 52d street and Berkeley avenue. Olsen and Urbain has drawn plans for a three story and English basement apartment hotel which will be erected on the site. John E. DeWolf & Co. have underwritten a loan of $90,000 on the project. Rosenthal, Mayer and Lewis have the building contract. Mr. Kamen was represented in the deal by Aaron Dodenweiser and associates.

232 Acres on St. Charles Road Sold for $104,000

The Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee for an undisclosed syndicate, has acquired the Clark L. Anderson farm of 232 acres north of Wayne at the St. Charles road station of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railway. H. A. Wehmeier was the seller and the price was $104,000. HERE'S A HOUSE FOR WOMAN WHO IS HER OWN MAID

Colorful Exterior Gives Charm to Home.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Unaffectedly a small house, it is unusually well adapted to the needs of the women with a small family who does the major part of her own work. Thoughtful study has resulted in an interior that leaves no detail missing which might contribute to ease and efficiency in house management.

This era of the ubiquitous motor car has had its effect on the domestic régime of the small family throughout the country. Day help, with its solving of laundry and cleaning problems has become standardized; and the easy access the motor permits to restaurants and hotels for week-end relaxations have had considerable share in freeing the home woman from the need of the one time maid of all work. With the general house servant eliminated, the home plans can center around the immediate family circle. An extra bedroom is done away with, and the extra expense involved can be spent on time saving devices and labor saving equipment for the mistress of the home.

Has Five Rooms.

Only five rooms in all, with the living room and dining room in one. A plan very frequently adopted today, for the added spaciousness and comfort it affords to the main floor plan, and for the saving in effort and expense in the upkeep of a separate room for dining purposes only.

In its exterior and interior alike, it meets the trend of the present generation's demand in architecture; that the small house shall possess the health giving attributes of air and light in abundance. It has incorporated into its limited space the best features of the large house. Correctly developed in every detail, it achieves a distinct individuality of its own.

Observe the peaceful serenity of the exterior, the absence of any striving for the ornate and the pretentious. The simplicity of the roof, without restlessness or top heaviness. Its coloring, too, has been thoughtfully chosen and artistically worked out. It is well to remember in the selection of the colors of your house, that for every one who sees its interior, a hundred observe carefully the outside.

Spirit of Simplicity.

The entrance of this home closely harmonizes with the spirit of simplicity which prevails throughout. Too frequently the home builder, in his plans, fails to recognize the importance of the entrance. It should not be considered merely as an accepted architectural detail. The most any kind will do attitude has ruined the effective first impression of many a house. Here it is found perfectly consistent with the general design of the dwelling and it enhances the gracile notes of beauty the interior possesses, by its dignified, graceful style.

Inside, the entrance or central hall is large enough for all practical purposes, but it does not take too much floor area from the rest of the house. The stairs to the second floor are on the right and beyond there is a more than ordinarily generous clothes closet. Every woman with small children appreciates this accenting of size in the first floor coat room.

Living Room Forty Feet Long.

The same attention to practical convenience is seen in the tool room adjoining the kitchen and in space reserved for wood for the grate in a niche in the living room.

This living room, with the closed porch beyond, has a sweep of nearly forty feet in length. Ample wall space has been allowed for furniture, and there is a great abundance of light and air through the French windows of small plate glass.

The porch opening from the living room has been enclosed, to give it all the comforts of an additional room. No more desirable spot could be found for children to play in. No matter what frontage the house may have, this porch, exposed on three sides, will have sun some part of the day. If the house faces north, it will be sun bathed on one of its sides the entire day.

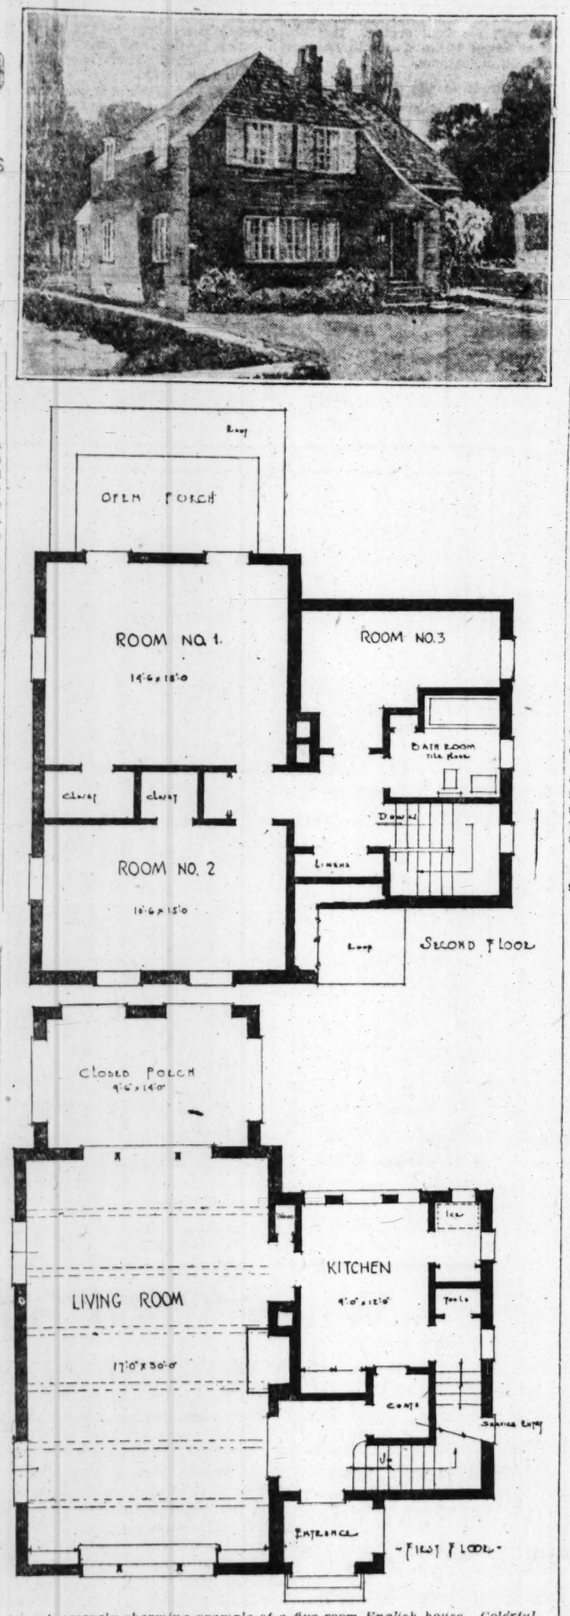
The kitchen has windows on only one side, but there is a window opening on the small hall between the outside refrigerator and the tool room, which permits of ventilation from a second side.

Absence of Windows.

The same absence of windows, excepting on one side, is found in only one other room in the house. That is the small bedroom on the second floor. An extra dormer window could be built in without much added expense.

The bath room with tile floor is large. So are the closets of the two main bedrooms, and the linen closet on the main second floor hall. There is no closet in room number 3, but a long one, running the length of the inside wall next to the master's room could be installed, if family conditions make it necessary.

The cost of a house like this, built along the lines suggested, should run from $8,000 to $9,000, according to the interior finish, and the varying conditions of labor cost and material prices. As planned in the present instance, there is a basement under the entire house. It can stand on a forty foot lot.



A serenely charming example of a five room English house. Colorful, cheery, it possesses the health giving assets of light and air which the modern generation everywhere demands. Pierre Blouke is architect.

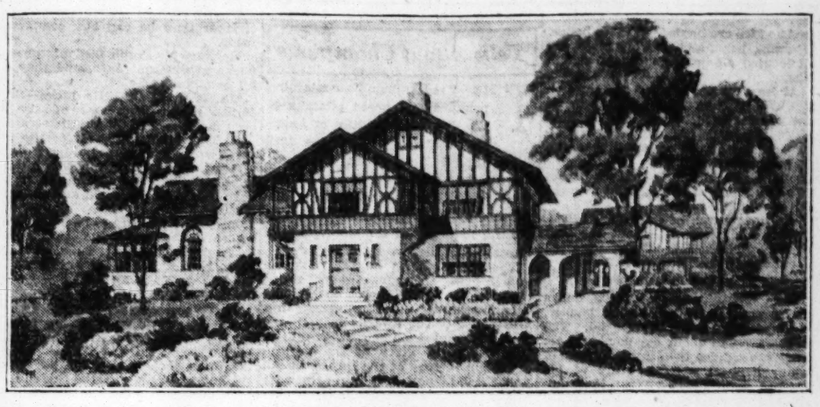
In Swiss Chalet Style



A residence in the Swiss chalet style of architecture has been designed by James F. Denson for Frank Oechslin for the southwest corner of Iowa and Ashland avenues, River Forest, Ill. As the illustration shows, the walls of the first story will be of rough stucco finish, while the building from the second floor line will be hand hewed open timber. A feature of the residence will be an unusually large living room which will extend through two full stories. Roffe Beman made the above rendering.

WORK UNDER WAY ON HOSTELRY AT 6332 WINTHROP

An eight story hotel is under construction at 6332 Winthrop avenue for the Winthrop Avenue Building corporation, of which Theodore Williams is the president. Mr. Williams is also architect for the building. The site, 46x150 feet, was purchased by the corporation for a reported price of $35,000 from Mary Ann Stein. J. C. Chutkow was broker in the deal. A bond issue of $265,000 on the project has been underwritten by the Fidelity Mortgage company of St. Louis.

BUYS LELAND AVENUE RESIDENCE.

Alexandra G. Cokins has bought the residence at 2830 Leland from George E. Klotter for a reported $32,000, through E. B. Woolf & Co.

"No heating troubles or wasted fuel in our houses"

Say These Builders

The builders listed in this advertisement install the Minneapolis Heat Regulator as standard equipment in houses they build to sell. Tear out this list and remember the names of these builders if you are thinking of buying a home and want to get your money's worth.

These builders include the Minneapolis because it fits in with their policy of conscientious building. It means greater heating comfort at lower fuel cost. The Minneapolis automatically keeps the temperature uniform and saves you the trouble of hand regulation of the drafts and dampers. It lowers the temperature at night automatically and raises it in the morning before you arise, so you may dress in a warm room. Besides it saves fuel—1/5 to 1/3 of your normal fuel expense at least.

The builder who equips his houses for economical upkeep is a good builder to do business with. Look for the Minneapolis when you inspect a home with the intention of buying. Write, call or phone for copy of free booklet, "The Proper Operation of the Home Heating Plant."

NIXON ADDS TO HIS ORIGINAL 1925 RISK IDEA

Payments Made Till Buyer Is Well

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

What we believe will be one of the most far reaching and constructive moves made in the realty world for a long time, and one which seems sure to be almost universally adopted when competitors realize its significance, was announced by George F. Nixon & Co., last night at a banquet held by that firm at the Hotel Sherman.

Briefly, it is a protection insurance plan whereby every installment lot buyer from the Nixon concern is safeguarded to the final payment in case of accident. In other words, if a person buys a lot and two weeks after making the first payment

From the Chicago Sunday Tribune, June 20 Issue

Two Great Factors in Life— Love and Fear

It is Love that prompts man to seek and provide a home. It is Fear that holds many a man from investing his savings and a portion of his daily earnings in real estate. Fear that accident or illness might cause him to lose the greater part of his investment and the shelter for his family.

George F. Nixon & Company, realizing this human service, has provided accordingly. Purchasers of Nixon real estate are relieved of this great handicap—FEAR.

The Nixon organization is not selling insurance. It is giving purchasers protection with its own guarantee certificate. In case of accident or illness the payments are not deferred—they are paid. To make it 100% secure, George F. Nixon & Company had this guarantee certificate underwritten by a legal reserve company—the largest of its kind in America.

This Health-Accident Protection is given you in addition to the Nixon Estate Protection Plan, by the terms of which should you die your heirs will receive a paid-up deed to the lot and a cash refund of all payments beyond your first down payment.

Let us supply you with full particulars regarding Nixon Protection. 'Phone, write or call at our office in the Nixon Building.

FARM AND GARDEN

40,000 Pekins Pay $65,000 in Year to Duck Farmer

William Weber Explains the Methods of His Business.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

BY mastering the fine points in the Pekin duck raising business, William Weber can count his ducklings before they hatch and estimate with a high degree of accuracy what his harvest will be at picking time. From almost half a century's experience he knows in advance that his duckling crop will be 40,000 this season, bringing in a gross return of more than $65,000, from a flock of 472 breeders.

He is manufacturing ducks and making money doing it. On his 140 acre farm—100 acres of land and 40 acres of water—near Lake Villa, Ill., Mr. Weber is transforming 500 tons, or 1,000,000 pounds, of feed into 220,000 pounds of ducks for roasting this year.

It is an expert's business requiring experience. Amateurs usually fail when they try raising ducks without first learning the tricks of the trade from a veteran duck breeder and feeder.

Duck raising is a seasonal business. The Weber duck farm is run by the calendar and by a system that turns out a duck in ten weeks. I followed Mr. Weber around for a half day, asking a million questions, and I got the impression the layman gets in walking down the assembling line in an automobile factory. Figuratively, Mr. Weber's job is that of assembling a body, two webbed feet, two stubby legs, two downy wings, a yellow bill, and a quacking klaxon. His business is more than that, of course, for he must know the science of breeding, the whims and fancies of ducks, their habits, the feeds and mixtures that pile on pounds quickly and economically, and then the appeal this gamy, dark meated fowl has to the appetite of the American consumer.

Regulating the Output.

To begin with, Mr. Weber regulates his season's output by the number of layers he keeps in the breeding pens. He says that each duck lays about 140 eggs. They lay early in the morning, usually between 2 and 8 a. m., seldom later than 8. There are five hens to every drake in the Weber flock. Only two year old ducks are used where breeders are being produced. Eggs from young ducks less than a year old are used in producing ducklings for the market.

On the Weber farm all the duck eggs are used for incubation purposes and are never sold. The ducks start laying about the first of the year or a little earlier, and the incubators are started about Jan. 20. It takes exactly 28 days for the eggs to hatch, and the whole operation of the farm is run accordingly. There are three incubators used, with a capacity for 6,000 hens' eggs or 4,400 duck eggs each, or a total of 17,200. A new batch of eggs is started every other day. During the incubation season, which lasts from the latter part of January until the first of August, about 700 ducklings are taken from the incubators every other day. Between each setting of eggs the egg trays are disinfected.

New blood is introduced into the Weber flock every fourth or fifth year, but each time, Mr. Weber says, the ducks are given a slight setback. He is now planning to follow line breeding to avoid bringing in new blood from the outside.

Starting Them Out.

From the hot water incubators the ducklings are taken to warm brooder houses as soon as they are dry. Here they are kept in small pens, fifty to seventy-five in a pen. They are moved into larger pens as they grow and require more room. Each pen is equipped with a water fountain, automatically filled, a feed board, and a compartment heated by steam pipes. The little ducklings are fed four times a day. The day I was there 4,000 ducklings were being cared for in the warm brooder house. The caretaker with his systematically arranged equipment fed, bedded with thin pine shavings and watered the 4,000 in one and a half hours.

In a systematic way the ducklings are shifted from pen to pen, finally winding up in the fattening pens ready for the pickers. They are kept in the warm brooder houses about twelve days. From there they are moved to cold brooder houses where they are kept for ten days, and the third move takes them to still another house, known as the cold house, where they are kept until they are nearly six weeks old. They are then turned in an open field for about two weeks. Box elders furnish shade for the ducks. They spend the last two weeks in the fattening pens which line the lake for nearly a quarter of a mile and are arranged so the ducks can play in the water and on the shore. Having water for the ducks to swim in during the fattening period is important, says Mr. Weber, although he has been successful in raising ducks on land without a lake.

All the pens are filled and emptied in rotation. A miniature railway is built along the lake front, over which feed and ice are hauled. The ice house, fattening pens, and packing plant are all located along the shore of slough lake.

At least 70 per cent of the eggs on the Weber farm have hatched up to the present time. Later the hatching percentage falls off. Often as low as 50 per cent of the eggs fail to hatch in midsummer. But Mr. Weber gets about 90 ducklings from each layer; 50 to 60 is considered a good average for each duck.

The first batch of ducks are killed, picked, and marketed about the first of May. Marketing is kept up until about the first of November.

Sells Under Contract.

Mr. Weber sells all of his ducks under contract to a Chicago packer. He is getting 28 cents a pound. The ducks average about 5½ pounds each. They are scalded for fifteen minutes in water kept at a temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit. After they are picked they are dipped in water heated to a temperature of 190 degrees for a half minute or less to plump the body. After plumping they are kept in clear cool water for two hours and changed to another vat of cool water, where they are cooled down slowly with ice. The head of the duck is tucked under the left wing and tied with a white tape carrying the Weber duck brand printed in red letters.

One man averages picking 100 ducks a day and is paid 8 cents a duck. The ducks are all packed on the farm, thirty-three in a case, and trucked into Chicago. They are never held on the farm more than twelve hours. Twenty-four hundred ducks are marketed each week.

Most of them are consumed in Chicago, going principally to German hotels and restaurants. Some are sold to hotels and restaurants at summer resorts. The ducks are put in cold storage, but since they do not keep in cold storage as well as chickens they are all sold by the first of February and none of them are kept there for any great length of time.

Began 45 Years Ago.

Mr. Weber started in the duck raising business at Wrentham, Mass., forty-five years ago, coming to his Lake Villa farm on Sand lake in 1911. His son, William Meyer Weber, a graduate of the Northwestern university law school, is now manager of the farm. Nine additional men are used.

SELF-SUFFICIENT FARMERS!

G. I. Christie, director of the Purdue university agricultural station, Lafayette, Ind., painted this picture of a Lousiana farmer the other day in talking to the agricultural committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce:

"The average Louisiana farmer gets up early, at the alarm of a Connecticut clock, buttons his Chicago suspenders to Detroit overalls, puts on a pair of cowhide shoes made in Ohio, washes in a Pittsburgh tin basin, using Cincinnati soap, and dries on a cotton towel made in New Hamshire, sits down to a Grand Rapids table, eats hot biscuits made with Minneapolis flour, Kansas City bacon and Indiana grits fried in Omaha lard, in a St. Louis stove. He buys Irish potatoes grown in Michigan, and canned fruit put up in California, seasoned with Rhode Island spices. He claps on his old wool hat made in Philadelphia; puts New York harness on a Missouri mule, fed on Iowa corn and plows his farm, covered by a Massachusetts mortgage, with an Indiana plow.

"At night he crawls under a New Jersey blanket, and is kept awake by a Louisiana dog, the only home product on the place."

And yet Mr. They Say, an eminent authority, continues to tell of the isolation and independency of the American farmer.

Tells About Champions

THE "red album," containing primped and posed pictures of the live stock beauties of America and a review of the 1925 International Live Stock exposition and the hay and grain show, has just been issued, and is now being distributed by B. H. Heide, secretary and general manager of the show, to men interested in the live stock industry.

The book, known as the "Review and Album," contains 354 pages of illustrations of the grand champions, champions and other winners, and also a list of the awards in both the live stock and grain shows. It tells in few words the story of the twenty-sixth anniversary of the International, which will be held here again this year at the Union stockyards the latter part of November and the first part of December.

feeding. There is little authentic literature on the raising of ducks for the market and some of Mr. Weber's advice may be of value to beginners in the business. He is now using commercially mixed feed, but says he can mix feeds at home from $8 to $10 a ton cheaper than he can buy commercial feeds.

Starter mash for little ducks—Bran, 40 lbs.; wheat flour, low grade, 20 lbs.; corn meal, 35 lbs., and meat scraps, 5 lbs. This mixture is fed for the first three weeks with plenty of fresh water.

Growing mixture to be fed to ducks from 3 to 8 weeks old—Bran, flour and corn meal, 100 lbs. each, and 35 lbs. of meat scraps.

Fattening mixture to be fed from the eighth to the end of the tenth week—Corn meal, 200 lbs.; flour, 100 lbs.; bran, 25 lbs., and meat scraps, 25 lbs. Feed is withheld for a day before the ducks are killed.

Mr. Weber also feeds cod liver oil to prevent leg weakness, using about 2 lbs. of the oil, mixed first in bran, to each 100 lbs. of feed. The cod liver oil is left out of the feed in hot weather.

He never feeds a fertile egg that has been discarded from the incubator.

From the 40,000 ducks Mr. Weber will get about 6,000 pounds of feathers which sell at 65 cents a pound. The feathers will bringing nearly $4,000, or enough to cover the cost of picking. The wet feathers are dried in a centrifugal machine commonly used in modern laundries. Two minutes in the machine wrings out the excess moisture and the feathers are then spread out in the feather loft over the feed mill for final drying. It takes about seven Pekin ducks to produce a pound of feathers.

Profit in the Business.

"There is good profit in the duck raising business for the man who has had an opportunity to serve an apprenticeship under some good duck man," said Mr. Weber when asked if he would advise other farmers to tackle duck raising. "I have seen few men fail where they first learned the business under an experienced man. Many fail where they start into this business haphazardly and before properly training themselves in the work of breeding, feeding, and preparing ducks for the market. Much also depends upon the individual."

Mr. Weber has found it necessary to post his farm with "Keep Out" signs. Ducks are nervous creatures and are easily disturbed. For that reason casual visitors are not allowed. "We have found that ducks are so timid that it is necessary to keep visitors away," he said. "Ducks are afraid of strangers. They are particularly restless in hot weather. The quieter we keep them, the faster they grow, and the fatter they get."

PAGEANT WILL SHOW PROGRESS OF I. C. DISTRICT

Indians to Help Recall Days of Long Ago.

Citizens of Richton Park and Monee and members of the Richton Park regional Development association, having been forced on to the map by electrification of the Illinois Central, are making preparations to help the public get acquainted with their section of the suburban area. Plans were concluded yesterday for the staging of an immense historical pageant on the old Sauk trail during the eight days beginning July 25.

The promoters of the spectacle, comprising the leading citizens and most of the owners in the district, plan to give it without the aid of the pocketbook of the visitors. Everything will be free and no aggressive young catch-as-catch-can real estate salesmen will be on hand to jump on the running boards of the autos and extol the beauties of his firm's properties to the spectators.

The owners have agreed to cooperate in the celebration solely in order that as many people may see the country with their own eyes, and no individual owner or organization will be allowed to indulge in high-pressure salesmanship.

Indians to Take Part.

Fifty Indians, mostly Chippewas, will be imported from the reservations of northern Wisconsin. They will probably be on the grounds at least ten days before the pageant opens and will camp in their own tepees during their stay in Richton Park. A large herd of buffalo will also be shipped in from the plains. A paddock will be built, in which the animals will be kept. Each night at the concluding number of the pageant a buffalo hunt will be held, after which a feast of roast buffalo will be indulged in by all present at no expense.

The pageant, which will be directed by Dr. James Lattimore Himrod, will be in seven episodes. The opening episode will depict life along the old Sauk trail before the advent of the white men. The Indians will put on a twenty-minute pantomime in which they will do their native dances, including the sun dance, the corn dance, the horse dance, the arrow dance, the ghost dance and the dance of despair.

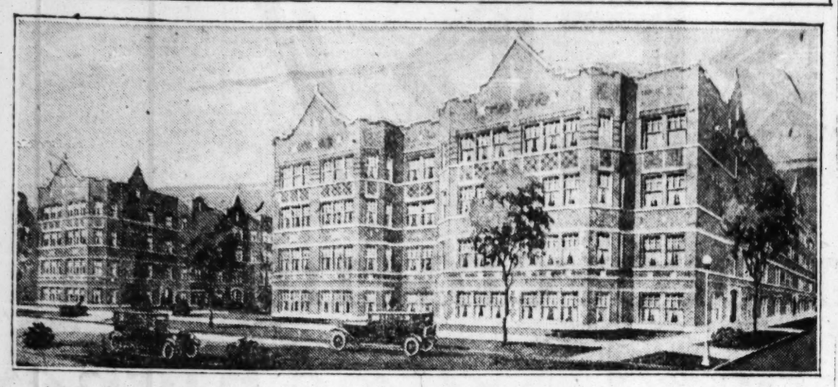
Dancing Every Night.

Following the pageant, which will be staged every evening at dusk, there will be dancing on the newly paved section of the Sauk trail to continue throughout the evening.

The purpose of the celebration will be threefold. Besides reviving the historical prominence of the old Sauk trail it will commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Illinois Central, which actually began operations Feb. 25, 1851, although the charter was obtained the previous fall, and it will also mark the actual completion of the road's electrification. Assurance has been given by President Markham that electrified trains will be running to Richton Park by the time set for the opening of the pageant.

H. P. Harding is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, and other members include Dr. Himrod, Fred Lustfeldt, principal of the Matteson schools, W. P. Heyn, Victor C. Michaelson, E. H. Marhoefer, Paul Yalos and Harry V. Coffy.

For Forty-three Families



A forty-three apartment building is under construction at the southwest corner of 80th and Paulina streets by Karl J. Lindblom and C. J. Erickson. It will cost $282,000 and will be ready for occupancy about Sept. 1. The architects are Lautz & Christensen.

AUBURNHIGHLAND DISTRICT GETS A NEW APARTMENT

To Have 43 Flats, Cost $282,000.

Beverly Court, a large apartment building, is now under construction at the southwest corner of 80th and Paulina streets, in the Auburn Highland district. The structure will contain forty-three apartments, six of two rooms and kitchenette, twenty-four of three rooms and kitchenettes, and thirteen of four rooms.

The building is to be three stories high with an English basement. The style will be English Tudor and the exterior is to be of face brick with stone trim. It will be ready for occupancy about Sept. 1.

It is stated that the building will represent an investment of $282,000 on completion. The site it measures occupies 148x125 feet. The Heitman Bond and Mortgage company has underwritten a bond issue of $140,000 on the project.

Lautz & Christensen are the architects and the owners are Karl J. Lindblom, a realtor at 1404 West 79th street, and C. J. Erickson, a plumbing contractor of 5845 South Halsted street.

CIVIC PROGRAM IS FORGING AHEAD IN NILES CENTER

Work on the underground improvements of Niles Center is advancing at a rapid pace, and already there have been installed a sewer system involving an expenditure of $2,100,000 and a water system costing $1,400,000. And there are still to be spent $1,200,000 on the sewer system and $800,000 on water mains.

Sewer and water improvements have been constructed or are under construction for practically all the property in greater Niles Center south of Church street. Special assessments are now pending and work will probably begin about Oct. 1 on improvements for the district north of Church street.

The paving of the streets in the district is also going ahead, and the value of this improvement already in or being installed is $1,000,000. It is stated that there are 2,000 acres of subdivided land now ready for building.

GARAGE IS LEASED.

Rosenthal, Mayer & Lewis recently closed a lease with Max Kunkel for the garage located at 5308 West Madison street for ten years to Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. for a term rental of $90,000.

Garage for Broadway

Fox & Fox, architects, designed the above garage, which will be erected at 3157-63 Broadway for Frank Kaplan & Son, who operate the Melrose garage. This will be the first three story garage outside the central district. It will be completed about Sept. 15 and it will represent an investment of $225,000.

HARPER AVENUE FLATS CHANGE HANDS; $300,000

Joseph Rosenberg and Harry Zisook have sold the Dorset apartment hotel at 5417 Harper avenue, containing fifty-four suites, and leased for ten years at $28,500 annually. Jacob C. Chutkow bought it for a reported $300,000. The J. C. Chutkow company was broker and Joseph Rosenberg attorney.

HYOID CHAPTER OF ATLAS CLUB BUYS NEW HOME

The Hyoid chapter of the Atlas club has purchased from George M. Atwell the house at the southwest corner of 64th and Ellis avenue, Fred G. Marshall taking title for the buyer. The price was $24,000. The club formerly occupied the residence at 5412 Ellis avenue. This was sold to make way for a large apartment building. Leon Kirk & Sons were the brokers.

Prosperity always follows the "L"

Experienced investors in real estate know that property located near the "L" lines will increase more sharply in value than land located anywhere else. Official Cook County tax records show that property within one-half mile of the "L" increased 8-fold in value while Chicago property as a whole only doubled in value.

The "L" tracks are laid to Zelosky's WESTCHESTER. The "L" terminal station, next door to Zelosky's office, is completed. When trains start running, values will begin to rise. An opportunity for profits similar to those made everywhere along the "L" lines is offered here. But you must act now! Send for facts about 8-fold profits.

The Sign of GOOD CONSTRUCTION

There are certain items which go into the construction of any building which give a good indication of whether that building has been "skinned" or built for satisfaction and durability.

Take such an item as the plastering, for instance. Plastered surfaces make up about 85% of the visible interior of any residence. A good plaster job is a thing of beauty for the life of the building—a poor plaster job means cracks, streaks, discolorations and a constant drain on the pocketbook for redecorating.

Unfortunately, the finished plaster job gives very little indication as to the quality and materials which went into it. That is why plastering contractors are now using the Better Plastering Sign reproduced above. It is only used on jobs where plastering is up to the Better Plastering standards.

If you are thinking of buying, look for this sign. The plastering contractors listed below are co-operating in this movement and will be glad to explain the advantages of Better Plastering on Metal Lath.

BETTER PLASTERING ON METAL LATH

DISCOVERED!

WHAT gives the baseball its ability to resist the terrific impacts of the bat? It is the cover. Remove it and the ball will quickly go to pieces. The same principle applies to plaster wall board.

You may have thought that any kind of paper would do for the surfacing of plaster wall board—that its strength and rigidity came solely from the quality of the plaster core. This is not true.

Beaver laboratory experts long ago made an important discovery. It showed that the quality of the facing or binder was far more vital to the strength and rigidity of the board than even they had thought—that by giving it a fibrous quality for toughness and combining it with a fine quality of rock plaster core, a startling increase in strength was gained.

This simple discovery has brought vital improvements. They are offered you today only in Beaver Bestwall, and at no greater cost.

Costs no more—see the Beaver dealer

For quick, permanent remodeling and repairs, as well as for new walls and ceilings, you can have Beaver Bestwall at no higher cost.

That is because the special fibre facing is made in Beaver mills by specialists with a complete organization and finest equipment.

Why be satisfied with less? Why let any buying habit influence you?

Here is great strength. Here is safety in handling—less breakage. Here are important advantages and improvements for which you pay no more. Why not have them?

You will know genuine Beaver Bestwall anywhere by the cream-colored surface and the Beaver trade-mark. Demand these marks of identification on every sheet.

There is a representative building supply or lumber dealer selling genuine Beaver Bestwall in every locality.

Perfect surface for decoration

The improved fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall, in addition to being tough, is unusually hard and smooth. Also, it is specially sized and calendered. Even a severe rubbing fails to make it "woolly."

This fibre surface offers a perfect base for most charming decorative effects. You can paint Bestwall. You can calcimine it. You can even apply wall paper and remove it without injuring the surface: Think what this means in redecoration.

Furthermore, this fine fibre surface saves you money in decorating cost. It does not drink up paint and calcimine like ordinary paper. Make the "water glass" and the "paint" tests, and prove it.

These tests prove it!

Beaver Bestwall is made with a plaster core of finest gypsum rock plaster. Then it is finished with a new, improved facing or binder of astounding toughness.

This facing is a fibre product, made by Beaver experts in the Beaver mills where wood fibre products have been produced for over 20 years. It adds several very desirable advantages to Beaver Bestwall.

A few simple but convincing home tests are listed and described. We invite you to make these tests yourself—to critically compare Beaver Bestwall and its tough fibre facing. Choose where you will spend your plaster wall board money by what you find out.

A Simple Comparison

Its tough cover enables the golf ball or baseball to withstand terrific impacts of club and bat. The same thing applies to plaster wall board. The extra tough fibre facing—permanently bonded to the rock plaster center—gives Beaver Bestwall its remarkable strength.

The "Water Glass" and "Paint" Test

Place a sample of Beaver Bestwall over a glass of water. Invert the glass so sample is underneath the water. Also apply paint to a sample. Note how little is absorbed in each case. Very economical.

The "Fire" Test

Every panel of Beaver Bestwall—the superior plaster wall board—is approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and manufactured under their laboratory supervision.

The "Surface" Test

Swiftly rub your finger tips over the fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall. Note that it does not scuff up and become woolly—a feature of the fibre facing which is sized and calendered.

The "Strength" Test

Lay a piece of Beaver Bestwall across two piles of bricks or between two chairs. Pile heavy weights on the center. Note the surprising weight it will hold without breaking.

Easy to Apply

Saws and nails like lumber. Quickly applied to studding over old walls or ceilings. Will not warp, buckle, crack, crumble or fall. Is fireproof, moisture-proof. Produces smooth, clean, permanent walls and ceilings.

Many Uses

Use it for durable, fireproof walls and ceilings in new dwellings and buildings of every kind.

For quick, permanent, economical repairs for remodeling at low cost—reclaiming wasted attic space; lining garage or summer cottages; adding needed rooms, or walls in the cellar; making partitions in stores, factories—and for 101 other uses where a smooth, clean, permanent wall that will not warp, crack, crumble or fall is required.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

By Sara Moore

MAYME HICKEY'S SHORTHAND DIARY—(IMITATION)

She wore a dress of plain black silk,
And strings of pearls dull-white like milk.

The hat that perched upon her head
Was one from which all style had fled.

And yet, the doorman bowed and bowed;
The snippiest salesclerk acted cowed.

I listened to the other girls:
"One knows she's class; in black and pearls."

Then I the bargain basement sought;
A fifteen dollar black dress bought.

And string of pearls—one-twenty-nine . . .
A small, short string, without much shine.

I didn't copy her old hat,
One shrinks before a test like that.

But did it work? I'll say it did.
Just watch that "starter" touch his lid.

There is no doubt in my mind, girls,
Folks judge a lady by her pearls.
Imitation!

BIGGER BUSINESS MEN.

That bootleg king has built a marble palace;
This gunman's wife "sails from New York for Rome."
That handsome patron of the season's opera
Behind a Harlem bar was once at home.
Beer runners dress for dinner and hi-jackers
Are cornering old master works of art;
Soon magazines will have to print their pictures
With interviews on "How I Got My Start."

O, Babbitt! Don't you feel that you're a piker?
(The meanest gangster makes you seem a flop!)
Well, when you instituted money standards
You never realized—where it would stop.
I make no howl against the man who "gets his";
"Success" inspires our quaint democracy;
In time we girls will all compete to marry
Some scion of Rum's aristocracy.

YOUNG WIFE TO A FORMER SUITOR.

Two years ago you passed me by
To seek a wife less flip than I;
You wear a pained, regretful look—
Since then, you've heard, I've learned to cook.

You don't deserve to be consoled;
(Your broken heart leaves me quite cold!)
For I might tell you, but I won't—
That, though I've learned to cook
—I don't.

Good Form in Introductions

By Persis Standish

LEGION are the letters that come to me saying, "What is the correct form of introduction?" Or, "What shall I say when I am introduced to a young man?" Or again, "How shall I acknowledge an introduction to an older person?"

Now comes a letter saying, "Please make it simple for me. I have read the etiquette books and I don't want to know how to greet a cardinal, or a king, or an ambassador. I don't expect to meet any."

That is the rub—there are many people who never expect to "make society" or mingle with the great and near great and yet who wish to be politely and correctly mannered. Do you suppose any one who knew better would say, "Meet t'is wife," or "Ma, I wanna make you acquainted with my boy friend?" Certainly not. I venture to say there is not one person in the great republic but wishes our national reputation for politeness equaled that of the French. But, alas, we are a self-conscious people, an adolescent people, and, with the gaucherie of the young, most of us would rather blunder along than put ourselves to the pain of inquiring about these things.

A woman of my acquaintance says she can tell a great deal about one's background by the way one accepts an introduction or makes one. This is a rather feline way to judge persons otherwise unknown, but it is true that a great deal of grace and a great deal of awkwardness can be displayed in the simple acts of being introduced or introducing.

Errors to Avoid.

There are two or three things one should never do. First, never use the phrase "make you acquainted"; next, never say "pleased to meet you"—it is obviously false, because you never know on introduction whether you are pleased to meet any one or not. That is all that needs to be said against it. Never present a woman to a man; always present a man to a woman, even if the man is a distinguished person and the woman only a subdeb. Never say "Mr. Something, meet Mr. Anybody." The word "meet" is not used. When you are introduced never say "I am glad to know you," unless the person to whom you are introduced is some one intimate with other members of your family or some one with whom you have had in common some reason for wishing to be introduced. Then it is better to say "I am glad to see you," or "It is nice to meet you here."

If you are a man, never offer your hand to a woman on introduction and do not feel hurt if she does not offer hers. It is a woman's privilege to offer her hand to a man, but she does not do it to any casual stranger to whom she is introduced. If she likes you a great deal she may offer her hand at parting in sign of good fellowship, but it is better to shake hands too little than too much. If, however, a man offers a woman his hand, thoughtlessly or through ignorance, or just in spontaneous friendliness when they are introduced, it would be exceeding rude if she did not take it cordially and a decided social breach to ignore it altogether.

Respecting Age.

Young people are always presented to older people of the same sex, even though it is supposed to be the custom for married women to take precedence over unmarried ones. If they are near an age this rule may be observed, but if there is a difference in ages that is quite apparent, the matron is presented to the maid. For instance, Mrs. Jones, a young matron, is presented to Miss Brown, who is many years her senior, unless Mrs. Jones has won fame of some sort and is already a distinguished personage. Ethel Leginska, for instance, would have Mrs. Upper-Ten, the queen of metropolitan society, presented to her, no matter where they might meet.

Young men are presented to older men. A guest of honor, however, has every one presented to her—old, young, distinguished, and otherwise. She will, however, acknowledge the distinctions and age by her manner.

The correct form of introduction is, "May I present," but as that is rather too formal for most occasions and sounds a bit stilted it can be understood instead of spoken and one may introduce by simply mentioning names, provided one does so in the proper order. For instance, one introduces an old man to a young woman by saying, "Miss Struthers, Mr. King." Or one introduces a contemporary to one's mother, saying, "Mother, this is Miss Green." One person of the same age is introduced to another by saying either name first, simply, "Mr. Smith, Mr. Brown," but never repeating the names, as "Mr. Smith, Mr. Brown—Mr. Brown, Mr. Smith." That is unnecessary and ridiculous. The simpler the introduction, the better and the easier. One may also say, "Mr. Rogers, do you know Mr. Gorden?" or if you are not sure that you are introducing friends for the first time to strangers you may say, "Miss Gray, I think you know Mr. Elliott?" Never say it as though you expected an answer, however, for this may cause embarrassment to either or both parties.

Correct Replies.

The correct form for receiving an introduction is simply to say, "How do you do" or "Good evening," or "Good afternoon." If you wish, you may repeat the name, saying, "How do you do, Mr. Jones."

But a simple "How do you do" suffices. It is then easy enough to find some topic of common interest even though you begin with the weather, or by asking some interested question, such as "Do you live in Chicago?" or, if you know the person does not, "How do you like Chicago?" If you do not understand a name mentioned at the time of introduction never say, "I didn't catch the name," or "What is your name?" but inquire later of some one else who has been introduced to the same person.

The "how" of introducing is a simple matter, but the "when" is not so simple and must be left largely to the discreton of individuals. The general rule, however, is to make no unnecessary introductions. Introduce your good friends to your good friends, if you wish, anywhere and any time, but be wary and chary and over careful of introducing acquaintances, either to acquaintances, or to friends. Never make introductions to those in your party of casual people who stop to greet you in public places. If two are walking on a street or shopping together in a store and a third person comes up to greet one of the two the other should walk on and not make an introduction necessary. If you are leaving a house when others are entering do not wait to be introduced to them. Say good-by and leave at once. If you have become acquainted with some one on a train or on shipboard do not introduce that person to a friend unless you have first explained the situation and asked permission in private of that friend. Men should never introduce men they do not know well to their women friends without warning them of this fact. A hostess should never drag a guest about a room introducing her or him to a great many people. She should, of course, introduce her guest to those near at hand so he will not be stranded, but to be the sort of hostess who buzzes about all evening busy as a bee, just introducing people, is to be a pest.

Woman's Prerogative.

To neglect introductions is as bad form as to make too many and there are times when they must be made a business of. If a party is small every one should be introduced to every one else. If a group of people attend a public function under her auspices a hostess should see that they become acquainted. For instance, if she has invited some friends to play bridge at a charity affair she introduces those who are to play together, or those who sit together to watch a football game or tennis matches, or any group of people who sit together under her auspices. No matter how big a party, she should see that the young girls have dancing partners, that dinner partners know each other, and that any one under her roof asking an introduction to another person should get it, or not be there.

If a hostess is remiss about these things those sitting next to each other at table or in a drawing room naturally introduce themselves, or just talk as though they had been introduced. This does not, however, constitute the basis for friendship, or further recognition. A woman has a right to forget any man after the party. But no man may cut a woman who bows to him if he considers himself a gentleman. Women still retain their social superiority, in spite of all their strivings to be merely the equal of man. A man, however, may forget another man, though to do so would proclaim him less than the man he cut, however good his reasons might be. The recognition by a salutation of another person's presence means nothing at all save that the person who gives it is well bred.

Get Ready for Summer Parties, Boys and Girls

By Sally Joy Brown.

ARE you looking forward to a happy summer, girls and boys, now that vacation is almost here? And are you ready to win invitations to the parties that we're going to have every week while the summer lasts?

I know you are—so I have a splendid one to start our playtime. Next Sunday, July 4, I'll announce the names of my hundred guests. Then on July 8, a week from next Thursday, we'll have our first big day as the guests of the big amusement park at White City! And all you need to do to win an invitation is to write a winning letter telling why you'd like to come!

You all know White City, and what fun we'll have spending a whole day there, so the letters will be easy. You know what a thrill there is to come sailing down the chutes, with a big splash at the bottom; you love the swoop and rush of the rides, now away up in the air, now shooting along at top speed on the ground. You like the shows, the Fun House, the Cyclone Bowls. So just think of all these treats waiting for us—imagine yourself having all this fun as my guest—then just put down on paper how you'll feel about it, and you'll win an invitation, I know.

Now Just a word about the letter. I'm going to announce the names of my hundred guests next Sunday. To do that I must pick them during the week, so your letters must be in the mail by next Wednesday night—earlier, if possible. And in your letters don't fail to give me your age. I can't invite any one who doesn't state his or her age; and so be sure to give it and your address and to have your letter in the mail by next Wednesday.

You'll want to be getting at your letters right away, I know, so I won't say anything more right now. Just think of the wonderful treats White City has in store for all of us—make up your mind that you're going to be with me right at the start of our summer's fun—and let me have your letters right away! And watch next Sunday's paper to find your name among the winners!

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Asks for Dictionary.

"I wonder if any one has an English dictionary they no longer need. It does not matter how old it is. R. C."

If you have more than one dictionary perhaps this young lady could have one of them. Let me know.

Needs an Icebox.

"I am asking you to help me with a lady who is a widow with four small children. Her husband died and left her penniless. She is in need of an icebox which she cannot afford to buy. Will you kindly ask your readers if they have one they no longer need?

"MRS. C."

With four small children to keep food fresh for, an icebox is certainly necessary during the summer months. If you are thinking of replacing yours here is an ideal way to dispose of it.

Needs Infants' Wear.

"I am the mother of five children and am expecting another shortly. I am in need of clothing for myself and also for the newcomer. I am quite large, wearing size 48 or 50, and my little girl, 6, needs clothing. I will appreciate anything your readers might have for any of us. MRS. K."

Can you help this mother take care of herself and her babies? Infant clothing seldom wears out and this is a good way to dispose of it.

For Young Readers.

"I have a set of ten books, as follows: "Uncle Sam's Boys: In the Ranks," "As Sergeants," "As Lieutenants," and others. "I am sure some young reader would appreciate them.

"J. P."

This is an interesting offer, and these books should make delightful summer reading for you boys out of school. If you'd like to have them, let me know.

For Her Vacation.

"I am a working girl helping to support my mother. I have a week's vacation and would like to have some knickers, size 18, and a three-quarter sized mattress. I need both for my vacation and will be so grateful for them.

"I. M."

Can you help this girl make her vacation an enjoyable one? You can do it with the knickers you no longer want, or with the mattress.

For an Old Lady.

"My grandmother, aged 73, has just had her leg amputated and I am asking you to help in getting a wheel chair for her. We cannot afford to buy it.

"M. F."

Let's try to make this grandmother's days as comfortable as possible. A wheel chair would help a great deal.

4. The Vionnet evening dress of white satin with a Chinois blouse is embroidered in lines of pearls.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Everybody is in Paris now. It is too early for Deauville, and too late for Cannes. May is the heyday of the social season here, and the Paris couturiers are "making hay" while the social sun shines. During this harvest the luminaries of the haute monde are making styles, and so the style chronicler is particularly busy. Between getting an idea of what the professional style makers are going to lay in for fall, at the mid-season openings, and observing what the amateur mode monarchs are wearing, we have to keep moving around with our eyes open and our pencils and notebooks in hand.

Ever since February we have kept, somewhere in the foreground of our minds, the "Page Boy" silhouette, with its flaring hip line, knowing that the aristocratic amateurs and patronesses of the mode would settle its fate on their return to Paris. And, also, that the professionals would either advocate it or ignore it, according to the Paris trend. The time is here when this unusual silhouette gets the verdict, and we are all in the court to hear sentence pronounced. With the smart woman as chief counsel for the defense, and the American buyer as advocate, naturally the result is favorable. Women who can wear this "Page Boy" line have the advantage of really looking like the flowers to which lovely ladies have so long been compared in song and stories, while their partisan sisters, who cling to the straight line, must be satisfied to impersonate the flower stem. And that's that.

Those women whose hip measures permit have indorsed the flaring hip line. "And that," mourned a forty-four dowager from New Rochelle, "settles it. Those 'Page Boy' silhouettes are bound to be styles in spite of the full blown rose figures that can't wear them." I sympathize with our ample sisters, who will have to let this line alone, but all the while I believe that this new line is a particularly lovely and piquant one for those who can wear it. The couturiers who are advancing the "Page Boy" silhouette are among the "big six" of Paris—artists who seldom make a mistake in interpreting for modern woman the costume side of life. Our artist has sketched for you today four interpretations fo this line, in four different types of costume, each one an eloquent argument for its vogue.

Our first model is the Page sports frock, and incidentally this particular model is one of the most successful of the spring and summer season. Yteb, who created it, has gotten into it the slim youthfulness of the straight line with a lot more verve and variety than the straight line can ever show. In the first place, she has made this model of candy striped taffeta, vivid colors in fine lines on a ground of beige, and this is a material that is being repeated in light weight woolens for autumn. This is the kind of dress that is ideal for the summer frock, for the shady porch, and for an afternoon at the country club. It is appropriately called "smart." The waist is a simple theme, with straight lines accentuated by vivid vertical stripes, and topped by a deep V yoke of white organdie, edged in two rows of rickrack. That triangle of the yoke, offset by the square of the neck line, is a charming and effective detail. At the bottom of this waist is the gathered, flaring peplum made of the plaid border of the striped taffeta and separated from the waist by a wide belt of red leather with an enamel buckle. The skirt is so plaited at the sides that it looks like a straight striped skirt of taffeta, while giving lots of stepping room.

Our second model shows the "Page Boy" officiating in a successful daytime frock. Created by Madame Vallet of Martial et Armand, the real creator of this unusual silhouette, this model is an ideal specimen of the line. For the tall woman who doesn't know just how to dispose of her length this model is particularly good. First, there is the simple breaking of the line by a yoke at the shoulders, and then there is the flaring page line at the hips. As the model is all in dark blue taffeta these breaks are subtle and therefore most effective. The gilet, which is edged with black and gold embroidery, is of yellow crêpe georgette embroidered, itself, in a line of gold thread.

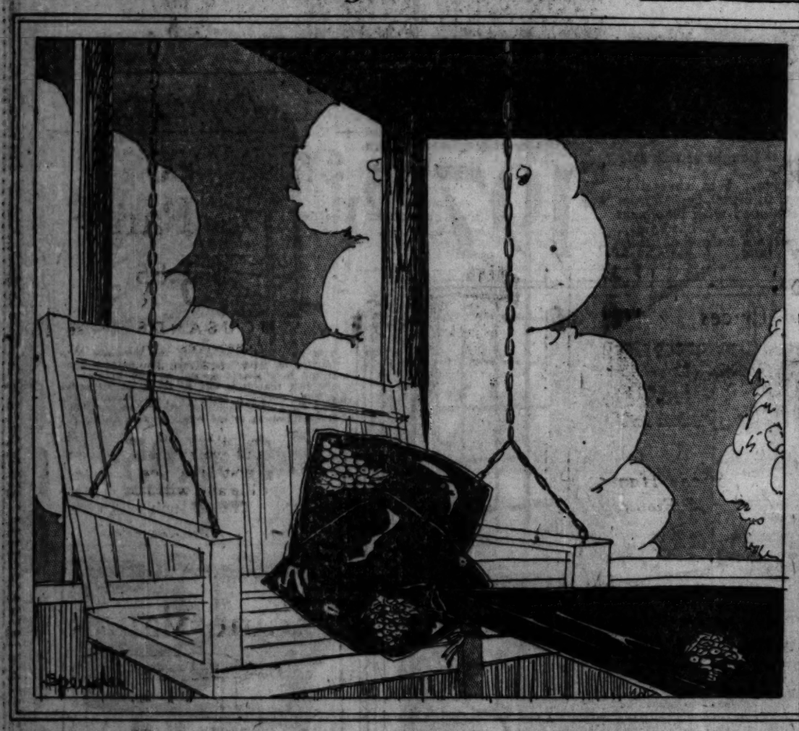
The little standing collar, edged in gold beads, and its string cravat are smart details that mark the summer season. The sleeves are given a flare above the wrist with circular bands of taffeta outlined in gold embroidery, and the waist is softly bloused by the big box plaits in the front and back. Madame Vallet shirrs the peplum at the sides and finishes it with a narrow taffeta sash at the high hip waist line, tied in the center front. The skirt is plaited with fine knife plaits at the sides, so it lies quite flat and looks appropriately narrow, although it is actually ample, indeed. I have seen this same model repeated by its creator in serge for cool days and it is equally effective in that fabric.

Our third model, also from Martial et Armand, is the all black costume which is coming more and more into Parisian favor. This is one of the outstanding models of the midseason collection of this house. The collar, which is a taffeta scarf, ties smartly under the right ear, or may be worn by the careless in long ends that hang to the waist in front. The surplice closing of the straight blouse shows a generous V of soft skin in front and terminates under a softly folded girdle that ties with those papillion bows and ends that are unique to taffeta. The peplum, or "page boy," as Paris calls it, is not gathered at all, but is cut so that it is flat front and back and extremely circular at the sides. The skirt beneath is cut in the same manner.

Our fourth model shows the flaring hip line in the evening dress, and was first seen at a dinner dance at the Ritz recently. It bears all over its distinguished surface the inimitable stamp of Madeleine Vionnet, who is a great creator as well as an excellent dressmaker. Vionnet has done what no mere copier could do in using white satin to get this flaring line from the waistline to hips, with the little dip right at the center front. Mme. Vionnet calls this the "Chinois" line, with its long blouse, cut in one piece with the circular peplum. The unusual decolletage and the long lines of the front are accented by pearl embroidery, which also outlines the flaring lower edge of the tunic and the bottom of the skirt. This skirt is cut, according to the Vionnet standard, in intricate simplicity, with a scarcely visible flare, that begins about four inches above the hemline at the front and sides.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

By CLOTILDE



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that does not twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

Pillow Covers for Summer Cottages.

If you have a summer cottage with a pleasant porch or an apartment with an open one, you will be interested in making the table cover and pillow covers pictured today.

Black oilcloth is used, and for the card table cover it is cut the same size and way as one made of linen would be. The edges are bound with black mercerized braid, stitched on the machine, and tape lengths cut off and hemmed at one end to tie to the table. Then to make the cover pretty you should put a gay design across one corner. The one shown here has a bunch of grapes with the leaves and vine. The grapes are made of the smallest size buttonmould, painted the color of the deep bluish purple green, and these are sewed on to take the shape of a bunch of grapes. The stems are done in mercerized floss in hem laid around the rest of the bottom a chain stitch, while the leaves are cut out of oilcloth or kid and put on with the blanket stitch. The effect is wonderfully good.

Then cover the porch pillows in the same material, decorating the pillows across a corner with a matching bunch of grapes and leaves. Bind the pillow edges together in a right side seam. These pillows and table cover can be left out of doors all summer without being hurt—just occasionally washing or dusting the surfaces.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MRS. H. D. S.: I am sorry you had trouble with the seams on your couch cover, where they end. The French seams where the inside are pieces join the seat and back and must be finished first—that is, after the fold across the front edge of the seat and top of the back have been stitched, and after the first stitching is done, turn the raw edges in so as to make a finished seam ¼ inch wide, cutting off some of the raw edges if necessary. When the arm seams are reached at each end, clip them in a seam's width and turn in those edges and overhand, so that they will be free and not included in the seam across the top. These seams are treated the same way at the bottom.

The hem is turned up separately on each arm strip (after the seams have been clipped and overhanded), then the hem laid around the rest of the bottom and the French seams will stand out as they should, where they finish.

EXCESSIVE PERSPIRATION

by Antoinette Donnelly

Avoid This Common Annoyance by Using These Preventives and Remedies.

No matter how strong may be the appeal to the eye, if an unpleasant odor attacks the organ of smell a woman's charm is shattered.

It is doubtful if there is another source of personal discomfort that causes as much misery to the individual herself, even when it is perceptible to others it is more distressing. In some instances it is only distressing to others. The victim may be unconscious she is offender. Unfortunately, friends do not enlighten her, and she goes in ignorance of the real cause of her social ostracism.

In an earlier article on Mouth Hygiene, the subject of unpleasant breath was discussed. To a certain extent there is a correlation between the offenses of the breath and of bodily odors. The retention of waste in the bowels leads to absorption of the decayed material into the system and eventually to the passing off of a fetid odor, either by the breath or the pores of the body. Both of these cases by both processes of elimination.

Habitual constipation and intestinal fermentation result in unpleasant odors.

A certain amount of perspiration is necessary to health. The work of the sudoriferous glands is to remove water from the system and carry off waste matter, so that cleanliness enters as one of the most urgent requirements in checking perspiration odors. The openings of the perspiratory glands must be kept free and unclogged to maintain their proper functioning.

Cold Shower Is Urged.

Frequent bathing is essential where there is no odor from perspiration, but more so where there is hint of unpleasantness. The cold shower habit is strongly urged as both preventive and remedy, this to be taken in the morning following the warm soap and water bath the night before. So much of excessive perspiration trouble among women is due to lowered vitality, nerve tone of the skin, nervousness, and a general rundown condition that the cold shower, or plunge, is beneficial in restoring vitality to the nervous system.

Water is to be taken inside, as well as out, as a remedy. The first essential to proper digestion, proper assimilation, proper elimination, and sweetness of person is to take into the system enough water to dissolve the food materials and to wash away the waste. Constipation and failure to get free kidney action are likely to result from lack of water.

Exercise and general bodily tone are closely knit that consideration of muscular work of some kind should be given in connection with the regulating of perspiration.

First, then, the simple rules of hygiene are to be observed and the general health built up.

Powders and perfumes should never be used to cover up an odor. It only increases its unpleasantness. However, a powder may be used beneficially after the bath, and a simple compound is made up of equal parts of powdered talcum and powdered boric acid.

Astringents Are Helpful.

An abundant flow of perspiration in localized spots necessitates special measures of care. While it would be far from advisable to use astringents to excess, or to apply them to all parts of the body, since it would interfere with the throwing off of waste, they may be used locally without detriment to the health. Under the arms is where application is most often necessary, and here no harm is done by stopping perspiration, providing the application is not irritating to the skin.

There are excellent deodorants and astringents on the market that come from the hands of reliable manufacturers. Follow the instructions provided with the article you choose. They are clear and well defined. Do not use these after shaving under the arms, or after using a depilatory. It is best to apply the astringent lotions the last thing before retiring at night, not letting an article of clothing come in contact with the skin before it is completely dry.

A good solution to correct excessive perspiration is a twenty-five per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Do not apply this to excess. Once every second or third day for the first week, and once a week for several weeks thereafter will cause a rapid amelioration of the excessive sweating. It is usually sufficient to make three such applications, then to wait for a recurrence before resuming treatment. Or, an application once every ten days may be made to ward off recurrences. This preparation is not wholly bland. Excessive use of it will cause a sharp itching or stinging sensation, which usually subsides if the part is not scratched. Excessive or careless use, followed by scratching, can easily cause a skin trouble, but I have never seen this happen where reasonable care was exercised.

The lotion should be allowed to dry thoroughly before clothing is permitted to touch the skin. If itching does occur in spite of precautions, an ointment of cold cream will give relief. Or if this is found too strong for your skin, dilute it by dabbing water first on the part to which you intend to make the application. Before using any perspiration remedy always thoroughly wash the parts to be treated.

Other Methods.

Mild cases are benefited by bathing the affected surface with hot water, to which either boric acid or alum has been added. Dry powders dusted upon the surface in which some deodorant is incorporated may be found effectual in these milder cases. Where the odor is pungent and disagreeable more drastic measures are needed. Principally remedies calculated to strengthen the nervous system are demanded.

Too much cannot be said about the need of changes of clothing. Underwear and stockings should be changed daily. If the perspiration is noticeable the continued wearing of woolen dresses and sweaters accentuate the offense. Woolen materials absorb the odors and they are almost impossible to get rid of once they permeate the goods. Dresses worn during the day should be hung up to air before an open window. Dresses should not be put in the closet immediately after wearing. Nor should shoes, unless one wants to permeate the entire wardrobe with the unpleasant odor. Where possible, let the sun get at the dress that is being aired.

Beauty Answers

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

F. H.: FIFTEEN TO TWENTY minutes is a fair estimate of the time you should spend in exercise each day. You may do this at one time or divide it ten minutes morning and evening. However, you should allow at least two hours to elapse after eating a hearty meal. I have a set of exercises which are just the thing for you. Send along a stamped addressed envelope asking for "My Youth Preservers."

MRS. R.: DO NOT WEAR SUCH tight hats. They are the cause of your falling hair. They restrict the circulation in the scalp and prevent the hair from reaching it. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on caring for the hair. It contains many helpful suggestions for you.

MISS L.: IT IS JUST AS ESSENtial to brush the tongue clean as the teeth. The tongue accumulates tartar deposits, especially near the root. Use tooth powder on your tongue and brush it as you would your teeth. Tooth brushes are especially serviceable for cleaning the tongue. A weak solution of vinegar is also good.

MRS. M.: AS GREAT CARE should be taken with your child's first teeth as you would have her give her permanent ones. In fact, even greater attention, if anything, should be taken. If they are not cared for they will decay and become infected, affecting her general health. If any of her first teeth are lost before the proper time the second will not develop properly, causing irregularities in the second teeth.

MRS. P. C.: BRUSHING THE hair morning and night will give it the lustre you desire. If your scalp is inclined to be dry, massage a little olive oil or sweet almond oil into the scalp each morning. Brush quite vigorously to furnish stimulation to the scalp and hair. In a month's time you will see a decided improvement.

MRS. H.: DEEP BREATHING EXercises will be found helpful in developing your bust. If you can go to a swimming pool and spend 15 to 20 minutes swimming, say three times a week, you will be amazed at what this exercise will do, not only in the development of the bust but in every way. It is the best exercise known. It causes you to breathe properly and brings many muscles into play. If swimming is impossible, send along a stamped addressed envelope for the other exercises.

MRS. R.: YES, OLIVE OIL rubbed into the hands will soften the skin; and it is also a good remedy for brittle nails, or if the nails will be the means of causing the brittleness. Soak the fingers in oil which has been slightly warmed. Allow them to remain there for a few minutes. Do this every night, massaging the oil several times.

MRS. D. R.: FOR AN OILY scalp dilute alcohol, using small amount of absorbent cotton. Several times a day wipe off the face. You may use the following formula: Flower water, six ounces; benzoin, one-half ounce; glycerin, two ounces. Mix the witch hazel and orange flower water, shake lightly and add the tincture of benzoin. Apply with a piece of cotton morning and night. For mild cases of oiliness, 1 dram of boracic acid mixed with four ounces of rose water is helpful.

ADELAIDE: THE CIRCULATION is poor when you suffer from cold feet. Outdoor exercises and a cold plunge in the morning will do much to improve the circulation. Try the tip-toeing exercise, which is merely to walk on tiptoes around the room, gradually increasing the speed as you go. This may be done just before getting into bed. Stationary running is also good.

ALICE: TO PREVENT THE IRritation you complain of after removing hair from under the arms, rub on cold cream. If you do this at night the cream may remain on during the night.

ELEANOR G.: I'M NOT IN FAVOR of reducing in a case like yours. You are a growing girl and need your strength that you may develop into a strong, healthy woman. But I have a set of exercises, "My Youth Preservers," which are just the thing to keep you in good condition. You may eliminate candy, sweets, and eat sparingly of bread. Send along a stamped addressed envelope for the exercises.

IRMA G.: NO, YEAST WILL NOT make you put on weight quickly, neither will it keep you thin. With many people it does solve the constipation trouble and has been found successful in clearing the complexion. If you wish to increase your weight, eat cereals every morning, using plenty of sugar and cream on them, use bread and butter freely, and eat rich desserts. They are fat producing. I have a booklet called "How to Gain Weight," which you may have for a stamped addressed envelope.

K. C.: BORAX ADDED TO THE water for the bath softens the water, but its continued use is not recommended, as it is an alkali and abstracts fat from the skin, leaving it dry. The same is true of sodium bicarbonate.

MARY B.: YOU CAN REDUCE THE size of your legs by strenuous exercising. I'll be glad to send exercises to you, if you will let me have a stamped addressed envelope.

THE CAPE, THE SHAWL AND THE DOLMAN RULE OUR SUMMER EVENINGS

SPECIAL PATTERNS
by May Manton

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—There are two depressing experiences in the life of the average woman. One of them is to have a man apologize for not having called on her recently and the other is the ...gestion to wear a daytime wrap with an evening gown. ...e latter cup of humiliation does not have to be drained, ...ourse, by her with an adequate income. This privileged ...er has not only one, but many, formal evening wraps and ...cannot realize the hardship of "making something do" ...a wrap when one goes out in the evening.

...ortunately the summer evening wrap is not—or at least ...eed not be—the costly affair of winter. Often it is more ...a tax upon the ingenuity than upon the purse. The fact ...it is that many of the most effective creations of this ...son—that charming and delightful group of transparent ...cts—may be achieved by the home dressmaker.

...n excellent example of those simple and exquisite little ...ning wraps which may be dashed off almost extempo...eously is the shawl-like garment in the center of our ...re. This model is much in the spirit of our present sea...n. The fact that it is short is in itself conclusive proof ...its chic, for the French designers have made up any num...r of such abbreviated evening wraps and nearly all of ...em follow this shawl-like movement.

...It goes without saying that the simplicity of line exacts ...me compensation in the way of distinctive fabric. This ...odel, for example, selects for its medium that mousseline ...e soie which has been revived in both wraps and frocks. ...s background is white and upon this are embroidered ...ils in mauve and gold. Mousseline de soie in matching ...ave is applied as a border in notched effect and this ...der is extended to form the knotted ends. It is interest...g to note that this delightful little shawl follows the lead ...the fashionable frock in adjusting its folds so as to swathe ...r hips.

...There is no doubt about it! We are shawl-bound as ever. ...Indeed, there lurks in your mind an idea that we are ...mitting any infidelity to this type of evening wrap, all ...t you have to do is to look over any roof garden or any ...ater audience. Shawls, shawls, shawls! They occur as ...en as the word "the" on a page. Deep fringe nearly ...ays sways their mood, but for the rest they are abso...tely capricious. They may be of crêpe in a solid color or ...y may bear gorgeous motifs of painting or embroidery. ...Capes are another haunting apparition of our evenings. ...is does not mean, however, that the coat has relinquished ...s hold entirely. It does not mean even that the skimpy ...ile tailored model of coat is out of the picture. The fact ...t is that this latter type of garment, so much in vogue ...the last two winters, was chosen by two or three women ...ending the opening of a fashionable roof garden. One of ...se models occurred in rose colored velvet with not even ...collar to distract from the severity of its straight line and ...row sleeves. Only a cluster of real orchids on the ...oulder was there to soften the effect.

...Nevertheless, although this type of coat is still sponsored, ...re is no gainsaying the fact that we are moving into ...mmer coat quarters. The dolman influence, so widely ap...rent in daytime modes, has affected our evenings. We ...ve constantly dropped shoulder lines, wide, picturesque sleeves and the body of the coat often reverts to the wrap-around movement.

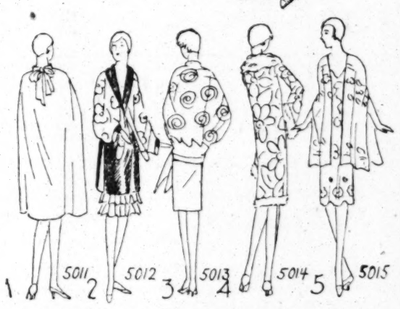
Typical of this new spaciousness is the imported coat second from the right. It is of white georgette embroidered in silver and trimmed with white ermine. Beneath the collar of this snowy pelt the plain white georgette of the foundation is folded back into revers. As to the wrap-around movement, now so frequently revived, this borrows a new significance from the fact that the front section is curved into wide scallops contrasting with the perfectly straight line of the back.

One cannot recommend this garment on the ground that it is either easy to make or inexpensive to buy. This wrap, so much in the spirit of our new evening coats, obviously involves an outlay of more skill and more money than does, for example, the captivating wrap at our extreme right.

This cape has, indeed, as much to recommend it as a June day and the joy of it is that anybody who can use a needle at all should not be baffled by its line. Of course the material used in the original represents that same note of elegance and individuality which usually makes up for the guileless contours of these Parisian creations. But one is not obliged to use this same handwoven orchid lamé with its border design of gold. No, one may substitute for it chiffon or georgette and still not lose all in the translation.

1.—The bow's art is often at its best when punctuating the back neck-line of a cape. Such has been the decision of the designer of this model, a rose velvet creation lined and bordered in gray chiffon.

2.—A famous dolman model is composed of unlined black lace with motifs of green and cerise beads, a black satin hem and touches of green metal cloth.



OTHER VIEWS OF TODAY'S MODELS.

3.—This model is one of the smart new wraps that declare in favor of both brevity and the shawl movement. It is of white mousseline de soie embroidered in color and banded in a harmonizing tone of self-material.

4.—A white georgette embroidered in silver is trimmed with white ermine.

It is made in four sections and the two front ones are lapped over to the back so that the fitted shoulder effect, so highly respected nowadays, may be sustained. At the back of the neck the two straight lengths of material are sewed together and subsequently shirred, and from this shirred area emerges one of the smart details of the model—to wit, a bow and streamers of narrow satin ribbon with picoted edges.

Yes, the outgoing streamers are still being scheduled by fashion. One sees them sailing off from the back of many a smart daytime cape of kasha, or satin, or taffeta, and in the evening some touch of distinction is frequently sought in either a simple bow or else a bow with long streamers placed directly at the back of the neck.

Again this trick is utilized in the cape at the extreme left. This cape is not a bit tyrannical in imposing its fabric-will upon you. It may be of chiffon or georgette made over self-material, or it may be of taffetà or Ottoman lined with chiffon. Indeed, the original material was of velvet lined with chiffon.

Whatever be its composition, both details and color scheme of this wrap are exceedingly ingratiating. Also it falls into the group of evening capes which may be made at home and yet not look it. It's just a simple cape, that's all. But its color—rose lined with gray—is charming. And so, too, is a finish which relies upon a narrow neckband and a front border of gray chiffon. This latter gains addel character from the rows of shirring that punctuate it. As for the bow in the back, this is of the coat material.

To enumerate the types of evening cape which are now in good repute is too ambitious an undertaking. Suffice it to say that fine plaits and shirring are both features of their vogue and that tiers, often plaited, are as frequent a manifestation as is the bloused back.

Beyond doubt chiffon is the favorite medium for the summer evening cape, but both mousseline de soie and the sheer varieties of crêpe join in this concerted movement toward transparency of effect. Still another confederate in the cause is lace, which, either alone or in combination with fabric, makes some of our most enchanting models in this domain.

An instance of the charm of lace is afforded in our second sketch. This was one of the noteworthy wraps brought over in the spring and it is so much in accord with midsummer currents that there is no danger of its becoming passé.

This model evolves a dolman shape of which the upper section, including the sleeves, are of fine black lace, unlined and sprinkled with a design of emerald and cerise beads. The lower section is of black satin which is doubled under and which joins with cuffs and collar of green metallic cloth to dissipate the cobwebby effect of the lace. The collar terminates in ties of the metallic cloth.

Evening certainly casts no slurs upon the position of the ensemble. Chiffon, in particular, stresses this vogue and, as I have frequently remarked, the dance frock of this fabric often rounds out its destiny by an unlined cape in self-material and self-color. There are, too, many less consistent ensembles which make the cape of a contrasting fabric and seek unity only through color harmony, lining or trimming detail.

It goes without saying, however, that the ensemble evening costume is only for her with a generous dress allowance. The best that the average woman can do is to plan her dance wardrobe as a whole. That is to say, if she selects a mauve pattern or background for her wrap she cannot afford to select a vivid red frock. Indeed, the woman of limited income can do nothing better than to choose white chiffon with metallic embroidery for her summer evening wrap.

TELLING FORTUNES BY CARDS

by Doris Blake

This Pastime May Brighten a Rainy Day, or Fill in a Gap at a Party.

THERE is just enough superstition in the heart of the average soul to delight in the prospect of having her fortune told. We stoutly maintain we don't believe a word of it, yet let a pack of cards be brought on the scene and an individual gifted with the ability to wrest bright promises therefrom and we—of the female sex, at least—are reduced to the same common level of "interesteds" and "hopefuls."

There is an uncanny fascination about this delving into the mysteries of the future, even though we know no human being by the aid of cards or any other so-called occult measure can honestly reveal the future. Mysterious coincidences sometimes baffle us. These serve to keep alive a superstition, born some thousands of years ago on the shores of the Mediterranean, that in a pack of cards may be hidden the key to our future.

Let them pass as coincidences, nothing more. And believe that the survival for centuries of the popularity of cartomancy is based on its universal appeal to the imagination, and has nothing to do with facts.

I make this appeal to treat fortune telling by cards purely as a diversion because of the interest exhibited in methods I have already offered in this column to readers, and because requests come constantly for further help in unravelling the mysteries of fate.

Only as an amusement feature do I know anything about fortune telling by cards. But I grant it is an interesting pastime and one likely to be thoroughly enjoyed by your guests, and there come moments in the affairs of hostesses when such diversion is welcome.

With which preamble I shall now proceed with another comparatively simple system for those interested. To become a skillful teller of fortunes you must be equipped with a knowledge of human emotions, hidden features and problems, and an imagination with which you can whip them into a promising tale.

How It Is Done.

Take your pack of fifty-two cards and let the one whose fortune is to be told shuffle them well as she concentrates upon a wish. Have her cut the pack toward her with the left hand, with her mind still on her wish. Divide the second pack by a cut, making three packs, all told.

Turn these three packs right side up and read into the three exposed cards events in the past which are likely to color the future.

Shuffle again, divide the pack into three, turn up the cards, and from the three now exposed read predictions for the present. Repeat the shuffle and cuts for the story the future will unfold, using the table presented below with the meanings of each individual card.

Suppose, in your third cut, the ace of clubs turns up, the nine of hearts, and the ten of diamonds. Your story would read something like this: Your future unfolds great promise of success in your profession. Your ambition will be attained. The wish that lies nearest your heart is to be fulfilled and in the near future is seen a profitable journey.

Shuffle your cards again and with the left hand spread them out on the table, face down. Choose from the group three cards for your "Surprise." Read these in the same way you transcribe the "future." Select three more for your wish, wishing hard as you select them.

Shuffle again and pick one card from the turned down pack as the card that will tell the most immediate occurrences in your future.

The Meanings of the Cards.

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1926 by The Chicago Tribune.

2665—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 40 inch material with ¼ yard of 40 inch contrasting and 2½ yards of binding.

2496—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅝ yards of 40 inch material with ⅜ yard of 44 inch contrasting and 1⅞ yards of ruffling.

2573—Junior frock. Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 8 requires 2 yards of 40 inch material with 2½ yards of binding.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

CREPE de chine, satin and crêpe combined or taffeta, any of them would make up well by pattern No. 2665. The upper part of this dress is cut in two pieces, and to the depth of a low waist line. The drop shoulders form short sleeves, and if long ones are preferred there is a pattern provided. The bottom of the dress consists of a two piece circular skirt that is attached to the waist in a scalloped outline. At the neck the dress is slashed to a given point, and there are shaped facings attached—the directions given with the pattern telling exactly how. The collar extends beyond the neck of the dress in long tie ends, and the dress may be worn open at the neck, showing a shield, or closed and using the tie strings to fasten at a normal neck line.

Where the skirt and waist are joined some particular work will have to be done. At the point where the bottom of each scallop comes on the upper edge of the skirt a quarter inch clipping should be made to allow the edge to be turned in. This turned in edge should be basted down carefully, using a fine needle and thread, so as not to mark your material. The upward curving edges of the bottom of the waist should be clipped at close intervals and the edge turned up toward the right side and carefully basted down.

Then pin the skirt in place on the waist, pinning first at the lower edge of each scallop. This sort of work, if carelessly handled, can be stretched enough to spoil a perfect finish. The next step will be to baste the two parts together, and it will be best not to baste too near the upper edge of the scallops, because the stitching should not cross the bastings. It is difficult to remove bastings if caught in the stitching. Then a second stitching should be put in, so the bottom edge of the waist will be caught.

This pretty slip-on dress pattern No. 2573, closes on the left shoulder. The shoulders are long, forming short sleeves and if full length ones are desired, a pattern is provided. Front and back of the dress are laid on a fold of material in the center; and at the sides there are circular insets that give a graceful ripple to the skirt. Figured or plain crêpe, taffeta or challis would make up well, and no trimming is needed beyond the contrasting color used for binding neck, short sleeves and the bottom of the dress. A half inch wide bias band of the contrasting color should be stitched on over the joining of the circular insets.

Where the closing comes on the shoulder, finish the front of the seam in a faced hem, and the back in an extension. Set the snaps in from the edge, ¾ inch apart, and use the smallest size.

Pattern No. 2496 is for a dress with long lines that will be becoming to figures inclined to be too full. A narrow panel is inset the length of the front, and the dress is closed at the right side of the panel. There are inverted plaits at each side seam, and these must be pressed in flat.

The dress is cut in front with a square neck, and in the back it is rounding. A collar that rounds across the back and reaches to the square neck in the front makes an attractive finish there. There are long, close fitting sleeves, finished with turned back cuffs, and the pattern is perforated for a shorter length.

The dress at the bottom, with the plaits drawn out, for size 36, is about 1¾ yards, giving ample walking room for any one.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Both Are Popular.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a boy whom I know, who is popular. I am considered quite popular. What can I do to gain his friendship?

"LONESOME."

Tell him how honored you feel to be chosen as a partner by one so popular. We all love to hear such things, and chances are he won't prove an exception, dear.

Neighbors.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a boy on my block whom I like a great deal. When we meet we always speak. Would like to get better acquainted with him. Kindly advise.

"GOOD LOOKING."

It would be the neighborly thing to stop and chat with him when you meet. Then you could suggest that he drop in to see you, dear.

Quick Tempered.

"Dear Miss Blake: I go with a nice boy who always fights with me. But he makes up first. Do you think he cares for me?

"HELEN."

He's quick tempered, Helen. His willingness to make up so quickly shows he doesn't wish to be mean or unkind. You could break him of the habit by refusing to be a party to his quarrels.

Not Worth While.

"Dear Miss Blake: I was going with a boy until my sister told me that a girl said he was not decent. I told him of it. He said that what this girl had said about him was the truth, and that he thought it best that we break up. We did, but I love him yet.

"WONDERING."

A boy who admits he isn't decent isn't worth bothering about when there are so many decent boys floating about.

MY GREATEST THRILL

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Only a Toy Balloon.

My greatest thrill was a scare. While seated alone about ten o'clock one late December evening my attention was drawn across the room where the pillows at the head of the davenport appeared to be moving. With startled eyes and filled with awe I watched more closely and, sure enough, it was no imagination, but a reality. Still watching I sat motionless, without the power either to scream or move, because I saw what seemed to be a bald head peeking up and trying to rise beyond the pillows.

In this condition I sat what seemed to be hours awaiting the return of my parents. By the clock only a few minutes had elapsed when I heard their footsteps on the porch and they walked in. This gave me the courage to utter a sound; enough to say that there was some one behind the davenport.

Investigation proved it was only my brother's toy gas balloon that was being moved by the heat of the radiator and prevented from going to the ceiling by the pillows. C. L. H.

His First Steps.

How I longed for my baby to walk all alone! But the little fellow was taking his time—no doubt about it. He was 14 months old and still he was not to be persuaded to leave the support of bed or chair and venture out into "the wide open spaces."

One day I left Sonny with a neighbor while I went shopping. When I opened the door upon my return, I heard him crying and calling for "Mama," who had evidently been gone too long to suit him. He was standing by a chair woe begone, but when he saw his truant mother his face brightened, and without waiting to be urged he walked with shaky little steps straight into my arms.

That was my greatest thrill!

M. K. V.

Near the Edge.

I believe my greatest thrill and greatest scare was about two years ago, when my husband and I were motoring from Los Angeles to San Francisco. We went the coast route, which is extremely mountainous.

It had just started to rain and we were going down one of the mountain passes. As we came to the turn in the road our car skidded and made three complete turns, each turn getting closer to the edge of the road (which was without fence or any protection). If we had gone over that edge, we would have fallen at least 1,000 feet over a hill covered with rocks. All one could see was rocks and the frames of a couple of cars that had gone over some time in the past.

Luckily, my husband had the presence of mind to steer the car into the high bank on the opposite side of the road and we were saved. Had we turned once more we would have gone over, as on the third turn we were within one foot of the edge of the cliff.

I believe this is the greatest thrill and scare I have ever had. H. E. D.

Playing Circus.

My greatest thrill nearly ended in disaster and came close to being my last one.

The town where I lived was posted with glaring notices of the circus visiting our city, weeks in advance. They were not so blatant to the eyes of us youngsters. We were so imbued with the circus fever that we decided to hold a circus of our own. My chum elected the job of wire walker. I was the flying bareback rider. The scene of our operations was the barn and horse lot.

I climbed to the hay loft, an exceptionally high one, and poised crouched, but as gracefully as the circus lady, to my way of thinking, in the loft door—then as the family horse was led out I made my flying leap, but hit the ground with a thud. All the children thought I was dying, from my groans, and I was carried into the house.

They thought my spine was injured, but thanks to a kind fate I'm not lying today a helpless cripple. B. K.

Into a Puddle.

I am just 12, but have had many thrills. When I was a small child I had a tricycle which I greatly enjoyed riding.

We have a banked barn and at the back door there is a drop of ten or twelve feet to the ground. One rainy day I took my tricycle to the barn and was having fun playing "merry go round" on it. How fast I was going around and around!

All at once I lost control and out of the barn back door I went and down, down the muddiest, splashiest bog wallow you surely ever saw. I was dragged out and taken to the house to get cleaned. K. MacD.

Chased by Mad Dog.

This morning my twin sons, aged 2, and I went shopping, and on the way to the stores passed a large dog standing quietly on the porch of a house a few doors south of our home, where I knew he did not belong. There was nothing unusual in his appearance except that his tongue lolled out as is the manner of dogs' tongues when thirsty.

We completed the shopping and were starting down the same street when several men came running toward us and said to go a different way as the dog was mad. We lived in the middle of the block and, not wanting to go 'way around, I started down the alley, busily guiding each boy by the hand through the piles of trash, etc., that, as usual, litter up such places.

About four doors away from our yard I glanced up and saw the dog at the entrance of the alley. He circled around several times, spotted us, and came running toward us at what seemed to me lightning speed.

Paralyzed for an instant, recovering quickly, I dragged my boys into a barn which invitingly stood open near us. After I had lifted each boy into a manger, I noticed there was no door to the barn. I dropped my purchases, took a boy under each arm, and (to me the sensation was one of flying) flew down the gangway, up the steps, and into a stranger's house without stopping to knock, where I collapsed.

Some neighbors guarded us home with ax and shotgun and the dog was killed soon after.

That was a thrill, one I experience over again when I see a dog of the same kind. T. F. P.

Bring Out The Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually, gently, peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing the youthfully fresh, white and beautiful skin underneath. It leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, not to be compared at all with a make up.

It hastens Nature's efforts. Shedding worn-out skin is Nature's way of renewing the complexion. Tiny cutaneous particles come off day by day. When this skin shedding begins to lag—as it does in time—complexion troubles begin. Nature may then be assisted by simply applying Mercolized Wax. The Wax actually destroys the mask of dead scarf skin—causing no discomfort. It makes the pores breathe; livens up the whole countenance. All of a sudden you seem to have lost years from your age. Freckles, pimples, liver spots, moth patches, etc., of course disappear with the disarded cuticle. Isn't this better than attempting to hide or cover up skin defects, and stifling the pores with creams or other cosmetics? Mercolized Wax will give you a new skin of enchanting beauty and girlish charm—bearing not the slightest evidence of artificiality. One that will give you complete confidence in your appearance—one, indeed, that will make folks turn a second time to look at you in passing. And all these results are accomplished by using just one box of Mercolized Wax—less than that, in fact. Try it today—95c a box, with full directions, at any drug or department store.

Send for a Free Sample Today!

FOR YEARS WE have been in touch with fat people and have been able to make a study of their troubles—Swollen feet, excessive perspiration, chafing, sores, are only a few of the annoyances they are subjected to during the hot weather—A reliable effective deodorant especially adapted to relieve FAT people was greatly needed. BON ODOR (a soothing, refreshing powder) has been sold during the past year to our own customers with remarkable success—We have now decided to put it on the market and we will be glad to send every reader of this paper a free sample of BON ODOR, together with an interesting booklet.

It quickly does away with unpleasant odors and greatly relieves sores, chafing, redness. When shaken on swollen, aching feet there is a great beneficial effect—if a foot bath is taken twice a week with two spoonfuls of BON ODOR mixed in warm water, walking should become a pleasure—BON ODOR is advised for men as well as women.

VACATIONS

What is your notion of the ideal vacation? A fishing jaunt, an ocean trip, or a lake voyage, a stay at a fashionable resort, a stretch of lazy idleness in the woods, a long motor tour—or what? Write us your idea of the ideal vacation. We'll pay $1 for every letter we print. Address Vacations, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

In New England.

I spent a month one summer at a beautiful lake in Massachusetts. Our cottage was situated upon a high bank, with over thirty stone steps leading down to the white, sandy beach. Our mornings were mostly spent in driving through the fern scented wood paths or rowing on the lake. A trip through the woods or on to the highway would repay us with filled pails of low bush huckleberries and blackberries.

I could never determine whether the lake was most beautiful with the rising sun or when suddenly lashed by a wild summer storm, with the gulls circling around in a seemingly endless flight, or when the mellow moonlight touched the little waves with silver and the peaceful night descended on another "perfect day." C. H. L.

In the North Woods.

My idea of a real vacation would be to go back to the north woods where I hunted and trapped in my boyhood, and there are times when I am there in spirit, inhaling again the spicy odors of the pines and listening to the music of the waterfalls.

Then again, I can breathe the keen air and feel its tang in my blood that seems to rush and tingle with exhilaration and the joy of life. I see a cabin in a winter night with the smoke pouring from its chimney up into the frosty skies. I see the glitter of the northern stars through the giant and naked tree tops.

As I approach the cabin door with the day's trophy, I smell the sizzling bacon in the pan, and I can taste the fragrant coffee, nectar of the gods to the famished young hunter, who later lays himself down on his couch of pine needles under the bearskin robes in wonderful, dreamless sleep.

After the big snows, when the breath of spring is wafted northward and a softer wind unlocks the icebound rivers, how the woodman rejoices in the return of wild fowl and birds and the dank odors of the budding earth! With his canoe and gun he explores the swiftly flowing rivers, while spring merges into summer and then to gorgeous autumn. Never bored, there is always something new in nature's wonderland, far from the rush and the ruin of modern life with its din and struggle and fears.

Just to go away for a while to the peace and simple life of the north woods is my idea of an ideal vacation. E. E. B.

Just a Dream.

I want to commence my ideal vacation at the head of the Mississippi river in a houseboat. It must be a nice boat, well equipped for comfort and with room for a car. I want to amble (I know one doesn't "amble" on water, but it is such a descriptive word) downstream at my leisure.

I want to fish a bit, hunt for pearl while clams (getting wealthy at the expense of a poor clam has always been one of my dreams), explore all the interesting looking spots on shore, taking inland motor trips at my fancy. I want to take pictures of all the beauty spots, talk to the natives of the different states, and compare their speech, mode of living, etc.; gather bits of this and that for souvenirs—O, I can't enumerate all the things I could do for present entertainment as well as for reminiscence for years to come on a trip like that.

I never expect to have my dream vacation realized, but I can think about it. C. W.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

The Sunday Tribune will pay $1 for each original slang expression accepted for this department. Address Slangusge Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

OUR PATRIOTIC FEAST DAY.

THE FOURTH OF JULY—"the glorious Fourth"—was long ago described as "the only secular fête known to the Yankee mind." This was supposing that Thanksgiving day was a sacred or, at any rate, a sort of church day, as it indeed was, though it has so nearly ceased to be. Once upon a time everybody went to "meetin'" on that day and listened to an extra long sermon.

But the Fourth of July was a day for fun of a sort supposed to be patriotic because many of the noises made were like those made by the explosion of gunpowder or by the fife and drum keeping time with war-like measures. The day, and it generally began promptly at twelve o'clock midnight, was filled with the popping of firecrackers and torpedoes and with the boom of cannon, when the community owned such a piece.

To such accompaniment the boys and men of the community strutted, imitated heroes in bearing, and felt themselves heroic, sometimes, when they could dress themselves up in ancient army uniforms and march in parade. The militia was out and the drum majors were as cocky as drum majors always are. The spread eagle was prominently featured.

We have some reason to believe that all of this showoff went on with the greater zest and gusto because of the array of eatables that was sure to await the heroes when they broke parade, or just got tired of beating drums or blowing horns. Certain it is that the Fourth of July dinner was a great and essential part of the day's doings, the most laborious part, though so far from being the showiest. In primitive days and ways, as in bird land, it is the male that is the showy creature.

The first thing of a Fourth of July refreshment nature a child brought up in Yankeeland may remember as characterizing the day may be the spell of lemons. Lemons were the great fruit of the day, and lemonade flowed, if not like water, yet in generous tubfuls, and there was always some made for home consumption besides. Yes, the old Fourth smelled of lemons as decidedly as the old fashioned grocery store smelled of codfish and molasses.

In the public collection of foods, of course, there were pies and "frosted" cakes, and loaves of bread by the score, and doughnuts, because a man will usually eat a doughnut any day in the year, and cookies for the children, and peanuts for everybody. Though not a product of Yankeeland any more than the lemon, the peanut has certainly had a great national place as a Fourth of July confection.

Where, today, hams or chickens would be roasted at home for a community dinner, in the old days boilers of fish chowder were cooked to perfection over fires of small sticks, and pecks of beans were baked in the ground—to accompany the brown bread steamed at home. In later and mussier days came the gallons of ice cream, but of the old time celebrations ice cream was not a part.

There are not many communities today where an old fashioned Fourth of July picnic could be planned and carried out, with dinner on long temporary tables in a grove or on some common, where afterwards there would be patriotic speeches of the old spread eagle order, band music and all. And yet when I have thought such a thing as this was forever past, some one has invited me to some church supper somewhere as like the old type in spirit as can be, though usually with some things to eat presented that were unknown in Yankeeland.

If we cannot have chowders, and baked beans, and brown bread, nor fine pies, nor home made bread, it is rather difficult to get up a real Yankee dinner, and so for our Fourth of July refreshments we can do the next best, choose nationally celebrated items of the sort that we find most convenient, perhaps including Saratoga chips (calling up a real social era in America), Philadelphia ice cream, Washington pie, but it is a trying fact that some of the national items we would like to have are not seasonable.

Meats and Portions.

A ten pound ham is reckoned as large enough to serve thirty persons, but so much depends upon the management of it that there is no saying how far it will go. Bacon is sometimes taken uncooked to a picnic dinner with the sandwich or buttered roll all prepared and ready for it. Two or three slices, or rashers, per person are usually allowed, but it can be made to go farther by cutting it fine and cooking it in a frying pan with constant stirring. It may give life and animation to some cold dishes, or hot potatoes boiled on the spot. Corned beef used to be an American standby, and for picnic dinners it is highly convenient, especially if well pressed into shape after it is cooked so that it can be sliced attractively. The old idea was that it should be cooked almost to the softness of a jelly, or far too soft to be used hot. The more expensive ham has now largely taken its place, but if we are trying to be quite "American" in our refreshments this will be in order.

Amount of Coffee Per Person.

Two level tablespoons of pulverized coffee per standard cup of boiling water will make a drink strong enough for anybody, and good enough in many cases for a drink without any cream. This means that one standard level cupful, with two quarts of boiling water, is sufficient for eight persons or even ten, since we rarely serve as much per person as one standard cupful. It is easy to make coffee out of doors by tying small measures of it in cheese cloth with a long string left, and lowering into boiling water for about three minutes and then drawing them out. Only small portions should be used, for otherwise the mass is not wet through to the center so that it will give up its strength. New wash boilers are often purchased for making coffee on a large scale, and these can be handled by two persons even easier than a great hot pailful can be handled by one. But all such management is something to learn to do and some people seem inexplicably more successful at it than others.

Bread.

Above everything else, have bread enough in serving meals out of doors, and for good measure take along some crackers. Plain bread and butter sandwiches may serve instead of a plate when a platter of meat is passing around, while their palatability will not be lessened in the slightest. There is no way of satisfying the appetite of a hungry crowd so easily as by giving them bread enough.

On Making Sandwiches.

As everybody knows, the easiest way to butter sandwiches is first to cream the butter as you do in making cakes. All sorts of rolls are really better for out-of-door sandwiches than slices of bread because they do not dry up as readily, and such items as quick Graham rolls or even bran muffins may gratify exceedingly when plain, buttered while hot, and put in the sandwich collection. If each sandwich is folded in waxed paper, which can be twisted at each end amply, it will resemble the old-fashioned torpedo and is exceedingly easy to handle. Some people use red, white and blue papers for sandwiches for Fourth of July.

Ham Sandwiches.

In filling a sandwich with sliced ham, or any meat, it is better to have it in several thin little slices—perhaps four or five—than in one piece, which often pulls out of the bread entirely with the first mouthful. And since people will not, in general, eat the fat, it is more economical to chop fat and lean alike and use it for the filling, with perhaps a few chips of lean. When a ham is deliciously seasoned in the cooking the fat of itself is just as good a filling for a sandwich as butter is good on bread. All meat sandwiches seem more attractive if pressed so as not to drop or pull apart easily. A little cooked salad dressing, served with a sandwich on a lettuce leaf, may take the place of the less wholesome pickle, while giving the desired fillip.

Sardine Sandwiches.

Remove sardines from the box, pour boiling water over them and off immediately, and then skin the fish, if necessary. Also remove any black inner skin and backbone. Mash and sieve the fish to make it into a smooth paste and blend it with an equal amount of butter, season with lemon juice, or if you like Worcestershire sauce, but be careful not to add much. Instead of mixing the fish paste with butter it might be mixed with sieved egg yolk and a bit of butter, for a filling.

Fancy Filling With Chicken.

This filling is not the sort commonly made for large picnics, but for a small automobile picnic, with a rather dainty collection of things, it would be suitable: Grind or pound to a smooth mass one cup of cold cooked chicken. Work into it about three ounces of unsalted butter and one or more tablespoons of cream, according to need, and after a tablespoon of grated piquant cheese has been blended with the mixture of butter and chicken. Add but a little salt and just a grain or two of cayenne pepper, or a dot or two of dry mustard. This can be made as smooth as butter, and so used for a spread as thin as that on a true canape. If it is not thin when mixed, put it through a coarse strainer. It can be made smooth enough to pipe. A given amount of chicken can be made to go further in this fashion than in almost any other, and is, of course, extremely dainty. It will go twice as far at least as when whole pieces of chicken of like amount are used for filling sandwiches, but some of these may be used along with the paste, paper thin slices being especially appetizing.

Banbury Tart.

One of the most satisfactory of the dainties like a pie, and yet something to eat from the hand, picnic fashion, is the Banbury tart, which is a colonial product. Make a filling of one cup of chopped raisins, three crackers rolled fine, one cup cleaned currants, one egg, the grated rind and juice of an orange to which may be added a bit of several spices or not, to taste. Roll out some well-chilled pastry into a thin sheet and cut it out in little rounds or squares. Put a little ball of filling on one-half, wet the edges all around with white of egg, fold over half and press the edges together. Run a pastry wheel around the closed edge, if you have one, to flute it and further seal the tart. Glaze with egg and bake in a rather hot oven. There are many ways of varying these and instead of cutting out rounds, the filling may be spread on a rolled out sheet, and this rolled up tight and then cut into little pieces and baked. Or the more puff paste-like the crust, the nicer it is to use two pieces of it, putting the filling on one and fastening the other on it. But the first form only is the Banbury tart, and these others have other names.

MR. NICKELDICK'S COLORED CAT'S TAIL.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

SOMETHING was wrong with the colored cat. She twitched her tail nervously, her ears sagged, and her whiskers drooped. She stopped purring and she hadn't sung for a week.

It worried Mr. Nickeldick. He was mighty fond of Tilly and he made up his rabbit mind to keep an eye on her. He noticed that she seldom drank her milk and that she stared at things for minutes at a time.

Scorched a striped shirt.

Once she scorched one of Mr. Nickeldick's best striped shirts, right while she was staring at the iron.

"She's sick with something," thought the rabbit.

"I'll speak to her."

He waited until she had washed the dinner dishes and hung up the dish towels to dry.

"Tilly," he said, stepping into the kitchen, "are you sick?"

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh, no, suh; Ah's indisposed, suh," she answered.

"What seems to be the trouble?" asked the rabbit.

"Ah is indisposed in de tail, suh."

"Aches and pains?" inquired Mr. Nickeldick.

"Both," answered the colored cat. "Sometimes de pain aches and sometimes de aches pain, and sometimes they is doin' all their stuff together."

"Tilly," said Mr. Nickeldick, "I think it would be wise to call in the doctor."

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh, no, suh," answered the colored cat. "Ah ain't got no use fo' them doctahs. What they do? They jus' come in and say, 'Stick out yo' tongue,' then they nod their head and look like a owl and say yo' got somethin' sick about yo' what has a name a mile long and then they write out a conscription fo' three dollars. No, suh, Ah got to be sick three dollahs' worth befo' Ah want a doctah 'round heah.

"No, suh; these doctahs don't charge right fo' their work. They ought to charge yo' accordin' to de amount of sickness yo' all has. If yo' all feels like thirty cents they ought to charge yo' only thirty cents; but no, they all charge yo' three dollahs."

"But you must remember, Tilly," said Mr. Nickeldick, "if you are sick ten dollars' worth they never charge you more than three dollars."

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh," answered the colored cat stiffly, "when yo' all is sick more than three dollahs' worth yo' is out of de doctah's care—yo' is then in de undahtakah's class."

Carried a dachshund satchel.

In spite of all Mr. Nickeldick could say, Tilly would not have a doctor, so the matter was dropped for the time being, but next morning the cat was much worse and Mr. Nickeldick made her go to bed.

He made a cup of catnip tea and carried it up to her, but it didn't seem to do much good, so he called in a doctor.

The doctor was a polecat in a frock coat. He carried a dachshund satchel, and a clean handkerchief in his breast pocket gave him a respectable appearance.

"You'll have to be very gentle with the patient," Mr. Nickeldick told the doctor.

"Is she sick?" asked the polecat.

"Why, of course," answered Mr. Nickeldick. "She has a very strong dislike for doctors."

"Don't blame her," said the polecat. "I'd dislike 'em, too, if I was sick."

When the doctor appeared the colored cat threw one of her shoes at him and Mr. Nickeldick had to argue with her for half an hour before she would let the polecat examine her.

The doctor looked at the colored cat's tongue. He grunted a few times and took the temperature of her tail.

"You have got wagonitus of the tail," grunted the polecat.

"LAWSY!" gasped the colored cat. "Ah didn't know Ah was as sick as that."

The doctor put Tilly on a diet of catfish and fox grass. He told her to stay in bed and promised to come to see her the next day.

Mr. Nickeldick hired Mrs. Liberty Raccoon as a nurse, and the colored cat was given the best attention for several days.

After the doctor had made several visits the colored cat decided to question him.

"Mistah Doctah, suh," she said. "Jus' what am dis wagonitus?"

"It's rheumatism of the wagging nerve of the tail," answered the polecat.

"If all Ah has got is jus' plain rheumatism of de tail they ain't no use fo' to have a doctah pesterin' 'round heah. Yo' all jus' take yo' satchel and make yo'self scarce, fo' Ah's gwine fo' to quit bein' sick," said the colored cat as she reached for her shoe. The polecat left in a huff and Tilly called for Mr. Nickeldick.

A sling for her tail.

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh," she said, when the rabbit stood beside her bed, "Ah have done dismissed the doctah. Ah don't need no doctah fo' de rheumatism. They is nothin' as good fo' de rheumatism as a iron ring."

"Iron ring!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick.

"Yes, suh," said the colored cat. "Iron draws de rheumatism. Yo' jus' get me a iron ring fo' to put on my tail and it will done draw de rheumatism out quicker than a ice cream cone will melt in a bake oven."

Mr. Nickeldick measured Tilly's tail and hurried to the blacksmith. In a short time he returned and Mrs. Raccoon placed the ring on the cat's tail.

"LAWSY!" exclaimed the colored cat when the ring had been fitted snugly on her tail. "Ah can feel it a drawin' the rheumatism right out already."

The next day Tilly felt so much better she got out of bed and dressed herself, but the ring was so heavy she had to drag her tail, so Mr. Nickeldick made a sling for it and she was able to go about her work.

In a few days the colored cat was quite herself. The rheumatism had left her and she was singing her old songs again.

"No, suh," she told Mr. Nickeldick, "doctahs is all right fo' some things, but fo' rheumatism Ah chooses de blacksmith."

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the male mockingbird should stage his dropping song, a performance as impassioned as any ever put on by a grand opera star, and thus prove himself as temperamental as great musicians of the human variety are supposed to be?

The dropping song is an unusual performance of the woodland but there is evidence of its reality from no less an enemy of nature fakers than Theodore Roosevelt himself. This song is believed to be the climax of the wooing of the mocking bird. It begins in the topmost bough of some verdant tree. There the greatest of singers takes his place for his supreme effort. He sings as though his lungs must burst. In his efforts his feathers are ruffled, each standing out as might the tossing locks of the grand opera idol.

As the singer grows more impassioned he leaps from his perch as though no longer able to remain attached to a thing so material. He vaults into the air again and again, each time returning to his former post. Through all of this his vocal efforts are mounting always to greater heights.

Finally he seems to abandon all consciousness of earthly things. His feet no longer so much as support his body by clinging to the perch. Aquiver with music he drops from the tree top. He flutters down among the leaves. He allows himself to fall from branch to branch. Slowly he makes his progress downward. But as he goes he still sings. His outpouring is now at its height. The abandon of it is complete. It continues until he finally falls limp and exhausted in the grass beneath the tree.

After he has won his mate the male mockingbird remains unchangingly constant. Mere wren fathers may desert their families but not this master singer. Through all the time that his mate is on the nest he sits near by and is likely to devote whole hours, night and morning, to song. He keeps it up during the time that the young birds are in the nest. He probably knows by instinct that bird song is acquired by ear and that his music is finding its way into the consciousness of his young ones. At any rate he sings much to his family and mere man, dwelling near by, may share in the glory of it.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help, else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

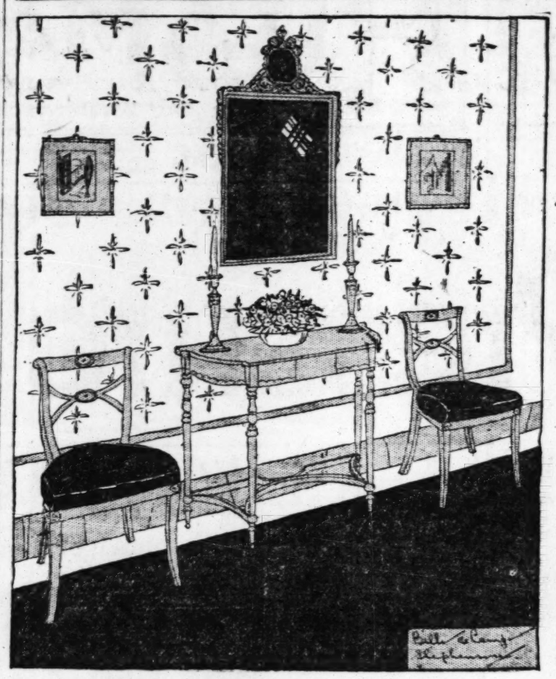
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



Gaily figured wall panels give an air of brightness.

BACK TO FIGURED PAPERS.

AT last we are emerging from the stupor put upon us by the drab, plain putty colored walls which have persisted during the last ten years or so. This wall monotony has been largely due to the uneducated public, who, unversed in matters of decoration found it far easier to arrange rooms with a plain background than those whose walls were a decoration in themselves. Not understanding the art of color harmony, they sluggishly resorted to unimaginative, uncolorful foundations, making their walls nonexistent, as far as possible.

Quite the opposite is the procedure of those artists who have a great feeling for beauty in color and texture. They plan to make the walls contribute essentially to the completion of their schemes. They know how well the fundamental structure of a room may be used as its fundamental decorative element. It is interesting to consider the creations of the great architects of the past. They constructed dadoes and wall panels of varicolored marbles, mosaics and tiles. Where there were large spaces they covered them with frescoes and wall paintings; they designed beautiful stucco decorations; they hung the walls with stamped and gilded leathers, tapestries, brocades, sumptuous velvets and brocatelles, or encased them with carved and painted wooden panelings to cover the bare plaster. How wonderfully incomparable to the deadly stifling oppression of the plain putty colored idea!

Fortunately, people are tired of these distressingly plain walls. They are demanding more spirit, more imagination, more expression of personality in their surroundings. This demand has produced a wide variety of designs in wall papers. Present day manufacturers have made an important study of authentic backgrounds to go with the furniture of different styles. Selections of lovely papers may be found in patterns which graced the houses of American colonial days; in the delightfully delicate motifs of the Louis XV period in France, or in rugged, but beautiful designs to go with Italian or English furniture. It behooves every woman who is genuinely interested in making her home a fitting environment for her family, herself and her friends, to take a thoughtful trip among the wall paper houses to find out to what extent the new patterns and colors may be of assistance. It must be remembered that the wall paper pattern often establishes the cue to the selection of furniture and colors, whether it be in cottage or mansion. It is an easy matter for the woman of taste to study her wall paper closely, visualizing in it colors for rugs, floor, woodwork, draperies, upholstery, and ornaments.

Another important point in wall treatment is the fact that color and pattern of wall paper have a marked effect upon either increasing or decreasing the size of a room. The tiny hall bedroom, the cramped, dark apartment living room or the small city dining room may be appreciably improved by the right application of wall-paper. It is quite obvious, of course, that light colors tend to increase space, as well as to brighten the whole effect. In specifying light walls to seemingly increase the size of a room, it is not necessary that they be unfigured. Patterns which, because of lack of obvious space definition, lead the eye on from point to point in easy running fashion, always tend to eliminate set areas, so that they create the illusion of spaciousness. The twining chintz and the toile, the bird and flowing flower, and the decorative landscape with easy movement from space to space and open vista, are examples of figured papers which can be used effectively to increase the size of small rooms. With the wide variety of designs existing today, it is possible to obtain the effect of nearly every kind of good wall decoration that has been known to history.

An interesting American colonial living room has a fascinating wall treatment. The room is papered only on three sides, with a decorative scenic paper. The fireplace wall is paneled with wood and built-in book shelves, all of the woodwork being painted a mellow old ivory to match the background of the scenic paper. Recessed windows are fitted with ivory gauze curtains finished with short, corded fringe in the same tone. On the comfortable sofa and arm chairs are slip covers of old blue rep, the same blue as is in the wall paper. Lamp shades are of accordian plaited glazed chintz of buttercup yellow, banded in old blue and black. The old, wide-planked floor is only partially covered by incidental rugs.

Especially lovely for bedroom walls are the gaily flowered papers copied from old printed linens and cottons, and known now as "chintz papers." A chintz paper, done in an old fashioned nosegay pattern, covers the walls in a young girl's room. Woodwork is painted dull turquoise blue and window draperies are of pale pink glazed chintz, matching the flowers in the paper. The draperies are finished with characteristic white ball fringe. Glass curtains are made of crisp white organdie. Colonial furniture of goldeny maple is admirably in keeping with this old fashioned setting, so that the room, on the whole, is delightfully quaint and charming.

The new marbleized papers which are being made today are having a decided vogue. They are heavy in quality and are highly glazed. They are especially good on bathroom walls and in hall and vestibules. I have seen some, in pinkish tones, used to advantage in a bedroom and some in parchmenty yellow in a living room. To a bathroom they give a decorative quality which relieves it from the monotonous appearance of the old hospital dressing room. In entrance halls they lend a note of substantiality. One lovely entrance hall I have seen has walls marbleized in different shades of green. In one long space is a decorative mirror flanked by a pair of precious wrought iron sidelights with gleaming crystal drops. Beneath this group stands a long, slender console table of wrought iron with a black marble top. The woodwork is marbleized black to match the table top.

In a bedroom done in the modernist manner the walls are turquoise blue, irregularly decorated with silver stars of various sizes. Pleasingly contrasted to these effective blue walls are lustrous window draperies of violet satin, bound with silver ribbon. Glass curtains are of lemon yellow silk. Covers on the beds, which are painted to match the walls, are of the same violet satin as the window draperies. Woodwork and doors are painted lemon yellow, and the doors are decorated with modernist designs in blue, red, green, white, and violet. The floor is rugged in deep violet chenille.

In the reception hall illustrated today the walls are paneled, woodwork and paneling being painted an antique ivory to match the console and chairs. These are high lighted by touches of dull gold. Outside the panels the walls are a dull, goldish-ivory color, while inside the panels is a soft, Chinese pink paper, figured in a dignified, geometric pattern, done in gold. The well balanced effect gives a pleasingly restful quality.

When a rainy spell of weather continued over several days, Lonny became quite impatient.

"Why does it have to rain so much, so's boys can't go out to play?" he asked discontentedly.

His mother told him he must be patient and suggested that he look at his books.

"Well, anyhow," drolled Lonny, "I think it's mournful weather." F. A.

Ann was 4 June 15. The morning of her birthday she climbed on daddy's lap.

"Well," she exclaimed in surprise, "I's 4 years old, an' I still fits on your lap!" K. D.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Self-Seeking.

The cheekiest person I have met was a man whose little boy, 2½ years old, was given a puppy as a present. The father took the puppy from his little boy and sold it for $10. H. O. H.

Sparing the Grass.

The cheekiest person I ever met was a neighbor who, without permission, had her rugs beaten in my yard so that the grass in her own would not be pounded down. P. H. E.

Hardly Grateful.

Our neighbor lady had the borrowing habit combined with a wonderful forgetter. One day she phoned asking if she could use a tablecloth, as she had unexpected company. My mother wrapped one up and sent me over with it.

She met me at the door and said, "You should have gone to the back door, but that's all right. I'll pay your mother later."

I did not know what she was talking about but turned around to leave, and while going I heard her say to her guests, "A nice little girl—that's my washwoman's daughter."

Who said noive? L. M. K.

Taking His Time.

A lady came into our store to buy a pair of shoes. After trying on about twelve pairs she turned to me sarcastically and said, "I don't think you can fit me here; but can you tell me of any nearby store where you think that I can be fitted?" How's that for cheek?

A. C.

Keeping the Best.

The cheekiest woman I ever knew was the one who lived next door when my husband enlisted, in 1917. When I broke up housekeeping she asked if she might take care of my houseplants for me, two lovely ferns and an immense begonia. I gladly availed myself of the opportunity, for she knew how to take care of them.

Imagine my feelings when I went to get them and she handed me flower pots with tiny "starts" of my original plants, when her own windows were full of Boston ferns and a big begonia. J. R. G.

When Words Fail.

I am an M. D. and drive to my office every morning. One day a neighbor asked to ride downtown with me. When we reached the business section I asked him where I should let him out.

He said, "Take me to Dr. N——'s office. I am not feeling well this morning and want to get some medicine."

C. H. T.

Greedy.

During a heavy snowstorm I asked to shovel off a neighbor's snow. She agreed to my price, and I set to work. It was evening and when I had but a small piece to finish she told me to quit and come back in the morning to finish and get my pay. That night it snowed again and she had me clean the entire 150 feet over again before she gave me the sum that I had asked for one job. H. S.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Mother Was Hard.

The first thing to do before revealing my husband's unkind, or shall we say refined, mental cruelty is to admit (most reluctantly) that I have a few too many surplus pounds.

Now for the story. My small son is in love with the "Just-So-Stories" of Kipling, and last night, while my husband and I were dining and trying to discuss the affairs of the day, he kept asking this question and that until I said: "Can't you stop asking questions for just two minutes?"

"No," said the son of his father. "You see, I'm the Elephant's Child."

There was absolutely no justification in this remark for the explosion of mirth on the part of the head of the house. When he was able to control himself to some extent he said to his son, "Boy, you've evened things up for me, but you've made an enemy of your mother for life." F. E. R.

Trimmed.

George was "on the pan" for the terrible hair cut he got the day we were married.

"Yes," he sighed, "I got trimmed plenty that day." Mrs. G. J. H.

Why Waste It?

One afternoon at a party I heard what I considered an extremely funny story. That night at dinner I told hubby I was going to tell him a joke that he'd laugh himself to death over. "Save it until your mother comes," was his sarcastic rejoinder. M. M. O.

Hard to Tell.

"George," murmured Minnie, "am I as dear to you now as I was before we married?"

"I can't tell," said George, absent-mindedly. "I didn't keep any account of expenses then." E. E. H.

Women the World Over.

Mrs. W. Porter Craig is Kansas City's first woman deputy city clerk.

Margaret H. Rorke has been made secretary-treasurer of the Textile Color Card association.

Miss Eleanor Mitchell, an English girl, recently won the European speed typewriting championship, with 812 touches or 129 words a minute.

Mrs. John T. Pratt, society leader and social worker in New York, recently elected alderwoman, is the first of her sex to win such honors in New York City.

INSTEAD of spending hours preparing a meal you can cook a full course dinner of meat, vegetables, fruits and desserts in ten minutes, over one burner. And the food will retain all of its natural flavor. It won't burn or stick to the pan. It won't be consumed to a pulpy mass, as no water is required. All you need do is put the food in the cooker, then go away and forget about it.

Each cooker has three inset pans. The pressure prevents the flavors from mixing. Canning rack, meat rack, cooking pan and lifter for removing pans are included.

Touring the World Via Grand Opera

By Edward Moore.

BY THE time this appears in print, the music of the participants and the applause of the patrons will have ceased, at least until tonight revives them both. What went on during Ravinia's opening performance of "Manon Lescaut" last night is printed somewhere else in this newspaper; there is therefore a good opportunity now to turn to a consideration of what's to come.

Would you, inquires Mr. Eckstein—the idea is all his—care to make a geographical and historical tour of the world through the medium of opera? The circumstances are fortuitous, he says, and all that he had in mind was the assembling of an artistic cluster for the first week of the season. But, as it turned out, the scenes of the first seven operas are laid in seven different countries and the periods range from the time of the Pharaohs to the present.

There was last night's "Manon Lescaut," in France of a couple of centuries ago, when laws were stern and gestures noble, and both laws and gestures were disregarded with easy cheer when the young folk so decided. Lest this should lead into a discussion of the entirely unmusical subject of modern conditions, one hastens to add that tonight's work will turn to Japan of the present, or at least next to the present generation.

It is to be another Puccini piece, the unfailingly popular "Mme. Butterfly." Here Elisabeth Rethberg will make her first appearance on her Ravinia return, appearing in the same part, with Mario Chamlee as Lieut. Pinkerton, Mario Basiola as Consul Sharpless, Ina Bourskaya as Suzuki, and various parts of lesser length distributed among Louis D'Angelo, Jose Mojica, Paola Ananian, and Philine Falco. Gennaro Papi will conduct.

Symphony Plays Tomorrow Night.

Tomorrow night's event will not be an opera, but a concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra with Eric DeLamarter conducting. It may consequently bear the label of Chicago, 1926. Jacques Gordon, the violinist, and Alfred Wallenstein, the cellist, will be the soloists. Mr. DeLamarter is also assigned for a concert this afternoon, which will be purely orchestral and without soloists.

Turn back to opera on Tuesday night. This is to be the fiftieth anniversary of Ravinia's foundation as an operatic center. It is therefore twice important as an occasion. The opera will be "Romeo and Juliet," medieval Italy, perhaps not the exact medieval Italy nor the exact tale of Romeo and Juliet as preserved in the archives of Verona, but a great play as seen through the eyes of Shakespeare, and an uncommonly pleasing score as heard through the ears of Gounod.

For this performance there will be another specialized cast. Edward Johnson will make his Ravinia debut as Romeo and Lucrezia Bori will appear as Juliet. Adjectives of description and laudation will be reserved until that night, with merely the present addition that Léon Rothier will have the part of Friar Lawrence, Desiré Defrere of Mercutio, and that Mr. D'Angelo, Mr. Mojica, and Anna Correnti will also sing and Louis Hasselmans will conduct.

"Lucia di Lammermoor" is up for Wednesday night, and this is supposed to be Scotland of the olden time, though the supposition has been known to cause acute distress to native Scots, just as "Mme. Butterfly" is unpopular in Japan through its unwitting disregard of Japanese good manners. In neither case is the lack of pictorial accuracy in the slightest degree against their value as operas. This is notably so in "Lucia," where Luella Melius will become another Ravinia debutante in the performance, and Giovanni Martinelli is due to turn from the dramatic to the lyric side of tenorial art. Giuseppe Danise will sing the chief baritone part, Virgilio Lazzari the basso, and Mr. Papi will conduct.

Edward Johnson to Sing "Faust."

Another shift, and medieval Germany will appear Thursday night through the medium of Gounod's "Faust." Mr. Johnson will appear in the name part, Mme. Rethberg as Marguerita, and Mr. Rothier as Mephistopheles. This will be only half the day's activities. The first of the children's concerts will be given in the afternoon with Mr. DeLamarter on the conductor's stand to explain and direct the music. This will be followed by a Mother Goose entertainment.

The page now turns to England in the time of good Queen Anne. The piece is known as "Martha," and every one who goes to opera knows that it is full of bully tunes surrounding a reasonably comic story, also that five first-class artists are necessary to put them across with full effect. The five for this performance will be Florence Macbeth, Miss Bourskaya, Mr. Chamlee, Mr. Lazzari, and Vittorio Trevisan. Mr. Hasselmans will conduct.

The final item in the week's travelogue will be "Aida," a tale of ancient Egypt written for modern Egypt at the celebration of the opening of the Suez canal about half a century ago, and one of the few works written to order which ever made a permanent success. Here there will be Rethberg in the name part, Martinelli as Radames, Bourskaya as Amneris, Rothier as Ramfis, and D'Angelo as the king, with Papi conducting.

For next week the operatic wanderings will be elsewhere.

And Now—Canned Opera.

Speaking of opera, there is a story from the east which bows possibilities of adding new terrors to amusement seekers. A concern calling itself the Vitaphone corporation will undertake to synchronize the movies, music, and the human voice, and it has signed a contract with the Metropolitan opera company to the furtherance of its ends. As they say in New York, Main street will no longer have to go to the opera. The opera will come to Main street.

There have been other plans of the kind in the past of more or less, usually less, interest. The new device, perfected by Warner Brothers, the Western Electric company, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and the Bell laboratories, undertakes to "photograph" sound on the film and release it in projection. Just which Metropolitan opera will take part in movie grand opera has not been announced, but it is told that the company will offer not only opera, but synchronized musical accompaniment for other types of film. Every movie house in the country will then be able to have its own sixty-five piece orchestra, all in a can along with the picture.

Musical Germany Suffers.

Still more about opera, this time from the pen of Manager Herbert M. Johnson, who is gadding about Europe:

"Germany has been slipping from a musical standpoint and the process is not likely soon to be checked. Concerts are neither as fine, as numerous, nor as well patronized as in other days and the once populous American student section has evaporated. The conditions that are making life hard indeed for the population operate to make it well nigh impossible for the music student and he has migrated to Italy and France, to the financial detriment of Germany. The difference in living costs, rather than in the capacity of teachers, is the determining factor. On the whole, Germany is a bit depressing from a musical standpoint, especially after a visit to England, where despite the economic strain and closely linked political-labor disturbances a renaissance of opera interest is apparent in the crowded houses during the Royal opera at old Covent Garden.

"Chaliapin created a near-war at the latter through resisting his American experiments with both the Metropolitan and Chicago Civic Opera companies in 'The Barber of

"THE WISE GUY."

Produced by First National. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Presented at the Oriental theater.

THE CAST.

Mary	Mary Astor
Guy Watson	James Kirkwood
Hula Kate	Betty Compson
Horace Palmer	George F. Marion
Ma Palmer	Mary Carr
The Bozo	George Cooper

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Now that the excitement of the Eucharistic congress is over, maybe you're ready to settle down and read a little movie news. (Do as you like about reading it. I HAVE to write it.)

"The Wise Guy," as you see by the title, is the picture picked for consideration. I was anxious to see it because a number of people who had had pre-views were so enthusiastic about it.

JAMES KIRKWOOD, who plays leading rôle in "The Wise Guy."

"Now, THERE," they said, "is a PICTURE!"

It IS quite a picture. It will make you think of "The Miracle Man." The idea behind the two stories is the same—the regeneration of a bunch of crooks who, in "The Wise Guy," as in "The Miracle Man," work under the direction of a master mind housed in a virile and magnetic male body.

As in "The Miracle Man," the crooks set out to work evil in the name of the Lord, and this time, as happened to the sinners in the other film, be it said with all reverence, the Lord turns the tables on them.

This story is an interesting one—not as interesting as "The Miracle Man"—guess comparisons had better stop—they seem to be getting a little odious. But it is an interesting one. It moves right along from one quite engrossing situation to another, handing out some hot punches, quiet laughs, unexpected developments, and good acting by the way.

The director—Frank Lloyd—was an ideal man to have been given the guidance of such a film. Any picture with a religious turn requires skillful handling and that's just about the only sort of handling this particular megaphone man knows how to do. He also knows a lot about technique. You can usually rest assured that photography, sets, scenery, and the entire mass of detail will be as they should be. The only details I found to pick on this trip were Betty Compson's too much madeup mouth and the too many closeups of her. She should NOT have closeups taken.

Vendors of Patent Medicine.

Lots of reasons, you see, why you should like "The Wise Guy." Now, here's the how of the story:

Five people compose a traveling troupe who sell a patent medicine strong enough to "knock a Northwest Mounted policeman south." (Subtitle. Not so bad?)

There's Guy Watson, who's the head, his kindly looking dad, who does the announcing and introducing, and his saintly appearing mother, who collects watches, pocketbooks, gold toothpicks—and what have they—from the crowds who gather to hear of the virtues of The Universal Medicine. There's Hula Kate, who dances for the gentlemen and ladies, and there's The Bozo—who makes up as the son of the great Indian chief who, in a moment of dying gratitude, whispered into the ear of the pioneer who had befriended him the secret of the Universal Remedy. Mr. Watson is introduced as the son of the worthy pioneer. Hula Kate and The Bozo help Ma help herself between stunts.

It happens one evening that, just as the crowd seems about to rush forward and buy Universal—a voice is heard crying aloud on another street corner. It is the voice of a street preacher—and no sooner do Universal's audience hear than the spell woven round them by Mr. Watson is broken. They pick up their feet and hurry over to the rival attraction.

"That's the THIRD time," says Mr. Watson, "that that fellow selling religion has beaten my time."

"Wonder how big his collections are?" wonders The Bozo. He eases out of his war paint and blankets and, in exceedingly modern getup, wanders over to where the fellow "sells religion."

And Then Sellers of Religion.

He returns with the collection to find Mr. Watson in the throes of a brilliant idea. He, too, will sell religion and his gang will help him.

"What'll I do in a religious outfit?" Hula Kate wants to know. She is told and congratulates her "Sweet Daddy" on being right there with the brain work. Mother and dad, a little dubious at first, are quickly converted to the scheme, and The Bozo, once he sees himself in character, is, in time, moderately enthusiastic.

Behold them then, a little later, as traveling evangelists—their two houselike wagons heavily covered with solemn advertising, causing a great flurry in the small towns in which they appear.

In practically the first of these visited, a lovely girl—for reasons I shall let the picture tell you—joins their show. This goes hard with Hula Kate, who loves her sweet daddy good and true, bad little egg though she is.

Great success attends the revivals held by the Universal evangelists. Mr. Watson, after the manner of Billy Sunday, has his crowds with him ALL the time. He goes at them hammer and tong fashion, using some of the good stuff that's helped him sell medicine to help him "sell religion." He knows intuitively what to say, and when to say it, and is wise to the value of a timely laugh.

A Wise Guy, all right. Witness the fact that police of several states are looking for him and haven't caught up with him yet. Nor do they till the end of the film that flashes a most surprising finale.

Peppered with Suspense.

The plot is peppered with considerable suspense that has to do with the presence of the lovely Mary. There's something on Mary's mind from the minute she joins the show, but what it is you don't discover till the last reel—nor have you any idea as to what it is. And it's plenty!

The picture has been exceedingly well cast with everybody doing crackerjack work. Especially memorable are some bits enacted by Mr. Kirkwood and George Cooper. Miss Compson's hula dancing is agile and sophisticated, and Mary Astor is, as usual, charming as the feminine lead. Mary Carr has a decidedly "different" mother rôle this time, but plays it to good effect.

Support is splendid. Crowds are realistic, and individuals in them, because of the director's art, stand out in your memory.

I guess that's about all that need be said about "The Wise Guy." It will, without doubt, be a boxoffice winner, for it has in it those things that unfailingly attract the masses. And its players are known and liked by most movie fans.

Bits aBOUTem.

GEORGE COOPER in "The Wise Guy" made his first western film. He's been in pictures for ten years, but has always worked in New York.

RALPH GRAVES, who has just finished "Woman Power," is to make another picture for Fox. He will play opposite Olive Borden in "The Country Beyond," from the novel by James Oliver Curwood.

HELENE COSTELLO has bobbed her hair preparatory to playing a leading rôle in a coming Warner picture. She's to have a chance at becoming as famous as Sister Dolores.

See you tomorrow!

Yet More Hints for Novelists

By H. L. Mencken.

ON the purely technical side the American novel has obviously made immense progress. As ordinarily encountered, it is very adeptly constructed and not infrequently it is also well written. The old time amorphous novel, rambling all over the place and ending with pious platitudes, has pretty well gone out. The American novelists of today, and especially the younger ones, have given earnest study to form—perhaps, indeed, too much. For in concentrating their powerful intellects upon it they have lost sight of something that is far more important. I allude, of course, to the observation of character. Thus the average contemporary American novel, though it is workmanlike and well mannered, fails to achieve its first business. It does not evoke memorable images of human beings. One enjoys reading it, perhaps, but one seldom remembers it.

I have said this before, and in the present place, but it will bear saying two or three hundred times more. Our fiction, it seems to me, tends more and more to waste itself upon trivialities of technique and manner. The human transactions that it depicts are, in the main, trivial and tedious, and its people are odd fish who might be transported to Norway or Arcadia without suffering any appreciable change. It is only in an occasional "Babbitt" that one encounters an authentic and unmistakable Americano, corn fed and glorious. It is only now and then that one gets away from the drug store smell of Anatole France and George Meredith and sniffs the honest reek of Homo cooligensis.

Why this should be so I don't know. The republic swarms with creatures who are intimately national and immensely amusing, and they cry plaintively for the services of the novelist. Yet our current fictioneers neglect all of them, from the university president to the police captain, and from the go-getting pastor to the realtor. Worst and most incredible of all, they neglect the American of Americans, the very Ur-Amerikaner—to wit: the malignant moralist, the Christian turned cannibal, the snouting and preposterous Puritan.

I know of no American novel in which this most typical and gorgeous of all Americanos is even half limned. There are glimpses of him in "The Song of the Lark," by Willa Cather, and in "Babbitt," and there is a more elaborate but still incomplete sketch in E. W. Howe's "The Story of a Country Town," a book published forty years ago, but still well worth reading. Howe, unfortunately, had other fish to fry: he slapped in his bucolic wowser brilliantly and then passed on to melodrama and the agonies of young love. So, too, with Lewis and Miss Cather. The Puritan father lies embalmed in the pages of Hawthorne, but his heir and assign of the present day, the high powered uplifter, the prophet of harsh and unenforceable laws, the incurable reformer and nuisance—this sweet fellow yet awaits his anatomist.

What a great novel is in him! Indeed, what a shelf of novels! For he has as many forms as there are varieties of human delusion. Sometimes he is a tin-pot evangelist, sweating to transform Oklahoma City or Altoona, Pa., into the New Jerusalem. Sometimes he is a hireling of the Anti-Saloon league, sworn to Law Enforcement. Sometimes he is a strict Sabbatarian, bawling for the police whenever he detects his neighbor washing bottles or varnishing the Ford on Sunday morning. Again he is a vice crusader, chasing the scarlet lady with fierce Christian shouts. Yet again he is a Comstock, wearing out his eyes in the quest for smut. He may even be female—a lady Ph. D. in a linoleum hat, patrolling the cow towns and the city slums, handing out edifying literature, teaching poor Polish women how to have babies.

Whatever his form, he is tremendously grotesque and tremendously amusing—and always he drips with national juices, always he is as thoroughly American as a bootlegger or a college yell. If he exists at all in other lands it is only in rudimentary and aberrant forms. Try to imagine a French Wayne B. Wheeler, or a Spanish Billy Sunday, or a German William Jennings Bryan. It is as impossible as imagining a Coolidge in the Greece of Pericles.

Since the earliest days, as every one knows, American jurisprudence has been founded upon the axiom that it is the first duty of every citizen to police his neighbors, and especially those he envies or otherwise dislikes. There is no such thing in this grand and puissant nation as privacy. The yokels out in Iowa, neglecting their horned cattle, have a right, it appears—nay, a sacred duty!—to peek into my home in Baltimore and tell me what I may and may not drink with my meals. A Methodist preacher in Boston decides what I may read. An obscure job holder in Washington, inspired by God, determines what I may receive in the mails. I must not buy lottery tickets because it offends the moral sentiment of Kansas. I must keep Sunday as the Sabbath, which is in conflict with Genesis, because it is ordered by persons who believe that Genesis can't be wrong.

Such are the laws of the greatest free nation ever seen on earth. We are all governed by them. But a government of laws, of course, is a mere phantasm of political theorists: the thing is always found, on inspection, to be really a government of men. In the United States, it seems to me, the tendency is for such men to come increasingly from the class of professional uplifters. It is not the bankers who run the ostensible heads of the state, as the liberals believe, nor the so-called bosses, as the bosses themselves believe, but the wowsers. One Wayne B. Wheeler is now as powerful among us as two J. Pierpont Morgans or a dozen Brennans. I submit the Hon. Andrew W. Mellon as exhibit A. Dr. Mellon is himself a banker of the highest tone—perhaps the richest practitioner of that art and mystery in the country. Moreover, he is a political boss of the first caliber, albeit temporarily somewhat disabled in that department. Finally, he is a public official so near the top of the heap that the deaths of but three men would hoist him automatically into the White House. But when the Anti-Saloon league speaks he listens.

Thus we are run by wowsers—and wowser is an Australian word that I hereby formally nominate for inclusion in the American language, that resilient and incomparable tongue. What does it mean? It means precisely what you think of inevitably when you hear it. A wowser is a wowser. He bears a divine commission to regulate and improve the rest of us. He knows exactly what is best for us. He is what E. W. Howe calls a Good Man. So long as you and I are sinful he can't sleep. So long as we are happy he is after us.

I throw off the guess that there are at least forty novels in the wowser—that is, forty good ones. He has as many forms as the demons who ride him, and every one of them should make a competent novelist, authentically called to the vocation, leap in air with loud hosannahs and spit upon his hands. His psychology remains mysterious. The Freudians, I believe, have misunderstood him, and the psychiatrists have avoided him. What are the springs of his peculiar frenzy to harass and punish his fellow men? By what process of malign eugenics is he hatched? And what is his typical life history? Here is work for the novelist, which is to say for the professional anatomist of character.

I believe that Frank Norris, had he lived, would have tackled it with enthusiasm and made a great success of its execution. Norris had a romantic and even a mystical inclination, but at bottom he was a satirist—and the American Puritan was made for satirists as catnip was made for cats. It is easy to laugh at him, but it is hard to hate him. He is eternally in the position of a man trying to empty the ocean with a tin dipper. He will be mauled, and the chance he offers thrown away, if the novelist who attempts him in the end forgets the tragedy under his comedy. I have known many American wowsers in my time, some of them intimately. They were all intensely unhappy men. They suffered as vastly as Prometheus chained to his rock, with the buzzards pecking his eyes. A novelist blind to that capital fact will never comprehend the type. It needs irony—but above all it needs pity.

NOT EVEN NOTORIETY COULD SAVE "BUNK"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—You have heard more or less about the abortive attempts of our local guardians to clean up the Broadway stage for us. To clean it up to the extent, at least, of ridding it of vulgar anecdotes and too nude ladies. In which connection you doubtless have read a good deal, too, about a revue called "Bunk of 1926," which was ordered closed by a play jury and the district attorney, but allowed to continue playing temporarily under the protection of an injunction.

BURNS MANTLE believes Equity can reform the stage.

This "Bunk" affair was a simple enough entertainment at first. Half amateur, wholly clean, it was brought down from a neighborhood theater and offered as competitive fare on Broadway. The reviewers dismissed if with a few healthy slams and one or two faint compliments.

Then the management, which had been spending eight or ten thousand dollars a week to keep the piece running, decided to coarsen and sensationalize it in the hope of getting back their original investment, which by this time had mounted to something like $30,000. They first hired a burlesque comedian whose reputation rests largely upon the questionable stories he tells, and a lady who has been posing at one of the night clubs as Eve.

The result of this activity did not bring the expected returns in business, so it was decided to have Eve arrested and ordered to double the number of golden fig leaves which constituted her costume. This would give her a total of two leaves and probably get her picture in the papers. The report of the play jury, the district attorney's order to close the show, the suing out of an injunction, and the further exploitation of "Bunk" followed quickly after. But with all this, though the receipts did increase appreciably, they did not increase sufficiently to cover the added expense of new stars and the greater advertising. As a result the original investment of "Bunk's" promoters ran up from $30,000 to $60,000, and last Saturday night the show closed. Neither gold leafed Eves, nor vulgar songs, nor leering comedians could save it. A healthy common sense can usually be depended upon to assert itself, even in New York, if it is not too imperiously defied.

They Knew What They Wanted!

It is amazingly human, this curiosity that is the despair of play juries and district attorneys. I was one in a line of people buying railroad tickets the other evening. In front of me a young man with a published list of forty or fifty Broadway theaters was trying to make up his mind, and the mind of the young woman sidling along with him, where they should go. I restrained my interest for four or five minutes, and then, as a gentleman at the head of the line was apparently negotiating for a full trip and return ticket around the world, with stopover privileges in most of the European countries, I concluded the time would pass more quickly with a little conversation.

The young man with the theater list at the moment turned helplessly to the young woman and announced that he was darned if he knew what to see, if anything.

"Perhaps," I ventured, "I could help you. I happen to know something about those shows."

He hesitated, then passed me over the list, explaining that he had come on from California for the exposition in Philadelphia, was taking side trips to New York, Atlantic City, and other reachable points of interest, and wanted to see something good in the theater before he went back.

I went over the play list with them, checking the six, or eight, or a dozen decent, clean, entertaining, successful plays that they probably could see without going to the speculators for their tickets; told them about Mr. Leblang's cut rate brokerage, where they probably could save something more on most of the plays indicated, and finally asked them if there was any particular play in which they were interested. There was the Pulitzer prize winner, "Craig's Wife," and the new O'Neill play, and a fine Barrie revival, and several good comedies, with music and without.

Well, he said, he did not care much, but he would like to see either "The Great Temptations" or "The Shanghai Gesture," or, as a third choice, he would like to see "Lulu Belle." And she thought she would like to see "Cradle Snatchers."

One Reason Why They Pay $50.

A few nights later I was early at the opening of Mr. White's "Scandals." Waiting for the other $55 fellow who was to sit with me, I stood back against the wall at the head of an aisle. There was eight feet of space between the wall and the railing at the back of the orchestra, and this was rapidly filling with standees.

A good looking man of middle years took the wall space next to me. "I think," he said, "we will be able to see all right from here because they won't let them stand in the aisles and we'll have a clear view."

"Yes," I answered, interested in the reaction of one who was willing to pay to stand up through a four hour revue. "This is as good a place as any. What did you pay for your ticket?"

"Three-thirty," said he, "but I know a gentleman who paid a hundred."

"I've been wondering," I said, "whether it's worth it—this standing up just to be in on a first night. There is a kick, I know, but we probably could come tomorrow, see the same show, and be comfortable."

"O," he said, "I always come first nights. I don't mind standing. Otherwise, you never know what you miss. Remember that Winter Garden show? Remember that dancing team—Roseray and Capella? They had a complaint the next night and they're all dressed up now, compared with what they wore before. Remember that other sketch—that bad one about Veranda? That's out. A lot of the first night stuff is always cut. O, I wouldn't miss 'em."

No wonder it is easy to get fancy prices for first night seats if the impression is becoming general that the piece never may be as shocking again as then. I felt a little guilty moving down to the $50 seats, but my friend went dumb the moment he caught me speaking to Percy Hammond. He knew I was a sophisticate of some sort, and probably suspected the worst.

Actors Can Clean Up the Stage.

I have great hopes for the human race, even, as intimated, in New York. We are a fairly healthy minded mass, with an ideal or two to share among us. Fifty-five thousand of us went out to the baseball park the other night to watch Mr. Berlenbach punch Mr. Stribling over the kidneys until he had the youthful Georgian bruised and flustered, but it doesn't follow we are lacking in other and higher impulses toward art in the theater.

I have a theory, however, that the actor is really the only fellow who can effectively clean up the stage—the actor as represented by his organization, the Equity, which includes in its membership 99 per cent of all the legitimate performers in musical and dramatic productions on the stage.

Paul Dulzell, acting executive secretary of Equity, and I have been exchanging letters recently. I wrote him the other day expressing my regret that Equity has not held to its original agreement to abide by the decision of the play jury and close the show, even in the face of the injunction. Once proved effective, the play jury scheme will work as well and as fairly as anything can. And Equity can make it effective without obligating itself to do anything more than stand back of the citizens who are polled to decide what is decent and what is not, in the theater.

Mr. Dulzell replied that Equity was opposed to censorship of any kind, but to the play jury censorship least of all, because it seemed the only means of escaping political censorship. He feared that any such action on the part of the organization would have the effect of putting Equity's in-

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

THOMAS BEER touches the theater lightly in "The Mauve Decade," which after two months is being read by most persons I know. That he gives so little attention to the stage in this engaging and at times witty book of the ten years from 1890 to 1900 surprises me because the only other matter of his I've read, a novel named "The Fair Rewards," was wholly about the theater—wholly about it, and amusingly: it gave to me the belief that Mr. Beer had written about his scene and his people with no other foundation than an acquaintance with intimate friends of very good friends of particular friends of Frohman. . . .

Yet, the Mauve Decade took some of its warmer color and a large measure of its social interest from the stage: as much at least of both as the ensuing decade, which took a lot. What Mr. Beer seems to believe is that the principal phenomenon of the American stage in the Eighteen-Nineties was the late Anna Held. He mentions "Zaza," Wilde as a dramatist, Carmencita (who, it seems, once provoked some insufferable women to protest against her being allowed to dance), and Miss Olga Nethersole's having been arrested for acting in "Sappho." He has her acting in the New York Casino, which had ever been a song-and-dance theater; her well-advertised engagement in New York was in Wallack's; and I recall that her being in "Sappho" in that theater, with associations that were sacred in the eyes of William Winter, drove that queer old man into frenzies of vituperation in the New York Tribune.

MISS AILEEN STANLEY

Stage-Somebodies of the Mauve Decade.

Booth and Barrett, as co-stars, carried over into the Eighteen-Nineties, and, in their partnership, had a fair share in keeping alive the popular love for Shakspere. Irving and Miss Terry came hither three times in that decade, and in each visit made of the American stage a better institution. Beerbohm Tree came twice, and starved. Mounet-Sully was among the eminences of the Continental theater who invited us to inspect them. Bernhardt came over whenever she needed money, and took it away with her, although what she took did not pass to her in the sale of tickets. Duse was here, was held by the critics to be great, and was neglected by the public. . . . Weber and Fields set up their little shop in New York, were flabbergasted when they became vogue, and proceeded to give to the public the best performances of topical burlesque in the annals of the stage. . . .

What remained of the famous stock companies disintegrated as the so-called "star-system" was found to offer better returns at the box office: Daly's, Palmer's, and Daniel Frohman's. Richard Mansfield's bold ambition carried him far in popular esteem, and was a factor in making the stage a more interesting pastime. The Theatrical Syndicate was organized and made to function, and, in functioning, it created the legend that Mrs. Fiske was a great artist of the drama who was being throttled by horrific monsters named Klaw and Erlanger. She was still gasping for breath, their rivals and enemies assured us, when the decade reached its end; but she survives, and owes her income to the device still referred to as the Syndicate, although of its founders only Mr. Erlanger remains a factor. . . .

Men of letters took to writing for the theater instead of about it; and native plays grew in number and, as such things rate, in importance. A quarrel with Mansfield made Clyde Fitch conspicuous; and then his native wit made him prominent and, in a way, eminent. Although he died without having written a first-class play, his third-class output gave diversity, piquancy, and much interest to the stage in the 'Nineties, and greatly added to the number of playgoers.

Operetta and the literary type of burlesque went out of favor, and were succeeded by the farce with songs and dances—what is still called "musical comedy." Lillian Russell made a second reëmergence from lost favor, and found a third period in her long career as the diva of the Weber-fields, with whom Fay Templeton made an alliance that resulted in our discovering that she was the most talented actress of burlesque in all the world. . . . The most popular play of the Mauve Decade was "A Trip to Chinatown." It was trash; but the drama-critics kept telling us that its author, Hoyt, would one day write a great comedy of manners. He didn't; but he wrote more trash, and outlasted the decade less than a year. . . . In light music, we preferred "Robin Hood" to all other pieces in the form of operetta. Victor Herbert came along with a new idiom, and clicked with a good piece called "The Serenade," thereby setting himself up in successful rivalry to Reginald De Koven. . . . The jazz of today had its beginnings in the ragtime songs about mercenary wenches that were sung by Miss Templeton, May Irwin, Marie Dressler, and Marie Cahill. Burnt-cork minstrelsy went out of fashion as the actual Negro became more and more of a factor in the life of the larger cities; and only in the Metropolitan Opera as the decade neared its end could one be sure of a ballet-girl on her toes in tarlatan and pink tights.

Other Phases in Mr. Beer's Book.

So much for what of the theater Mr. Beer hasn't put into "The Mauve Decade." The book has immense variety; and he manages to justify the point of his title as based on Whistler's saying that "Mauve is just pink trying to be purple." The chapter headed "The Titaness" gave a kick to me that has sent me back to it three times; and I swear I've read the chapter called "Dear Harp" six times. . . . He gives credit to an unnamed courtesan for the location "stuffed shirt" as a descriptive of the respectable pretenders to social importance one usually finds mixed up in reform movements; whereas I'm certain that the expression was put into effective circulation by a Philadelphia politician in the bold, glad days of Matthew Stanley Quay. And Quay as a somebody of the 'Nineties isn't even mentioned by Mr. Beer, who has much to say about Mark Hanna, although the two men saw eye-to-eye and walked pas-à-pas. . . .

Indeed, the immense importance of Philadelphia in the decade appears to have evaded Mr. Beer. Yerkes, who afterward left his mark on Chicago, isn't mentioned. I doubt if Mr. Beer ever heard the true tale of why the Neronian Boies Penrose changed over from the field of silk-stocking reform to that of out-and-out gang-politics; and it is a wondrous and a comical narrative. John Wanamaker isn't mentioned; and a survey of the 'Nineties is not complete unless he be in it. 'Twas the Philadelphia traction-men who taught William C. Whitney all about how to handle public-utility matters. No small division of the Republican newspapers throughout the United States took their tone in the 'Nineties from the Philadelphia Press, whose editor, Charles Emory Smith, was for one administration Postmaster-General, as Wanamaker had been. (And as to newspapers, Mr. Adolph S. Ochs' coming out of Tennessee to buy and revivify the dying New-York Times was surely an important noise of the decade in tune with those sounds which most delight Mr. Beer's ear.) . . .

But he finds in Philadelphia certain somebodies in other fields: the fine S. Weir Mitchell, the unselfish and serving Edward Drinker Cope, the valiant and varied Richard Harding Davis (who achieved true greatness as a newspaper-reporter), and his witty, sane, on-the-level mother, Rebecca Harding Davis. . . . I don't know what Chicago in the decade was like: Mr. Beer seems to think that the city lived its ten years in the months of the World's Fair, and that it breathed again only in the time used up by Bryan while he bellowed his chitter about the cross of gold and the crown of thorns.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

MISS ROSAMOND WHITESIDE goes tonight into the rôle in "Castles in the Air" which Miss Vivienne Segal has been singing since the piece opened in the Olympic, November 22. And Roy Cropper, who was in "The Student Prince" through most of its run in the Great Northern, replaces J. Harold Murray in the former piece. . . . Miss Whiteside's father will end his engagement in the Studebaker next Saturday night, when the theater will be closed for the Summer, if one may judge from present indications. . . .

"Song of the Flame," an operetta on view in New-York since January, is expected to be the next attraction in the Apollo, starting September 5. Miss Tessa Kosta will be in it. . . . The Blackstone is bulletined to open a week earlier with "The Poor Nut," whereof Elliott Nugent is the star. He and his father, J. C., wrote the play, which has to do with football in college. (This piece has been tentatively announced for at least two other Chicago theaters.) . . .

A sign on the façade of the Illinois indicates that the theater will be reopened "in August," but doesn't say with what. . . . The Garrick is to be vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Hulbert and their amusing associates of "By the Way" at the end of the week. It is not certain that the theater will be reopened July 18 with something from California named "Patsy," whose owners seem eager to bring the piece to this city. . . . Present plans for the Great Northern have to do with reopening the theater in September with "The Vagabond King," which has been running in New-York since last season was young. . . .

"Conscience," "Treat 'Em Rough!" and "The Shanghai Gesture" make up the program for the immediate future of the Adelphi. . . . Mr. Cohan's human and sprightly comedy of "The Home-Towners" is to be taken to New-York late in August; and its successor in his handsome theater here is not announced. . . . "Twelve Miles Out" is looked for as a late-August or early-September attraction in one of the Messrs. Shubert's theaters. . . .

And, when the contractors finish the theater in Randolph Street ordered by the Orpheum Circuit, Mr. Erlanger will take charge of the Palace, rename it for himself, and put the comic Marx Brothers into it in "The Cocoanuts."

Miscellany

"The Wisdom Tooth," "Bride of the Lamb," and "The Importance of Being Earnest" were removed last night from the New-York stage. . . . The last-named was revived in desperation some weeks ago by the Actors' Theater, and proved to be more popular than any of the new plays staged by the organization since last Summer. The "group," an off-shoot of the actors' union, is merging with another "group"; and that, I take it, is the last of the Actors' Theater.

Miss Anna Nichols, who is believed to have made at least a million dollars from "Abie's Irish Rose," is said to have taken for American production a piece named "Sam Abramovitch," written by le Monsieur and la Madame François Porche. La Madame Porche is known to theater-goers as Madame Simone; she came back to the United States in 1924 under Miss Nichols' management, and was successful in the course of a few weeks in New-York in losing some of the latter's "Abie" money.

Dennis King, who has had the title rôle of "The Vagabond King" in all the months it has been in New-York, is taking a vacation, and is succeeded by Robert Craik.

Miss Nydia Westman and Wallace Ford, who were in the Cort for many weeks in "Pigs," are to be vis-à-vis again in "Help Wanted—Female," a piece by Miss Gladys Unger. Frank Monroe and Miss Beverly Sitgreaves also will be in it.

"Number 11," by J. Jefferson Farjean, is among the new plays listed for the Autumn. An earlier title was "In the Fog."

Matheson Lang, in Chicago in 1910 as a member of the company brought to the Great Northern (then the Lyric) by the New Theater of New-York, is to try a Canadian tour in the Autumn. He was for a time an actor-manager in London; but he appears to have lost the trick of picking new plays that please. . . . Mr. Lang is a brother of Miss Edith Wynne Matheson, most easily remembered by the after-goers in this country as the player of the title-part in "Everyman."

Cecil Lean and Miss Cleo Mayfield [Mrs. Lean], who have been at the head of a touring cast in "No! No, Nanette!" are to appear as the stars of a song-and-dance version of "Brewster's Millions." . . . This play made over as a music-farce was mentioned some years ago as a vehicle for Harry Fox, then believed by managers to have in him the makings of a star; whether the venture was undertaken I do not know.

Changing Playbills

"Conscience," with Miss Lillian Foster, in the Adelphi.—A play by Don Mullally which won a measure of attention two years ago in New-York, where Miss Foster was described as clever. The author will be with her in the Chicago performances. . . . Opens tonight.

SUNDAY, JULY 4:

"Betsy Nobody," with Miss Flora Le Breton, in the Cort.—A play by David K. Higgins, author of "Piney Ridge," "His Last Dollar," and numerous other works. Miss Le Breton will be new in Chicago and with her in the cast will be Stanley Riggs. . . . "Out of the Night" will be continued in the Cort this week.

SUNDAY, JULY 11:

"Le Maire's Affairs," with Miss Sophie Tucker, in the Woods.—A show prepared by Jack Lait and others to enclose the respective talents of Miss Tucker, Lester Allen, and Ted Lewis, each a somebody. . . . "The City Chap" will remain on view in the Woods until July 10.

MONDAY, JULY 5:

"Black Velvet," with Frank Keenan, in the Playhouse.—A play by Willard Robertson, who has had other plays of his acted, although they are not known hereabout. Mr. Keenan, absent from the Chicago stage since early in 1923, will have with him in the cast Miss Leona Hogarth, Claude Cooper, and Frank Sylvester. . . . The Playhouse has been closed since early last month, the lease was taken by default from Lester L. Bryant and his associates.

SEEMS TO BE NEW IN CHICAGO

MISS LILLIAN FOSTER

SHE is the star of "Conscience," which will be made known tonight in the Adelphi; and none of the persons with a memory for matters in kind is of the belief that she has ever acted in this city. . . . Miss Foster was the subject of a great deal of printed praise when, nearly two years ago, she acted in "Conscience" in New-York, where the critics said that she had plenty of definite talent, and the most fantastic of the lot referred to her as "another Duse," although he probably didn't know what he was writing about.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

Nasty!

Handsome young boss to pretty steno: "Got anything doing for Sunday evening, Miss Brown?"

Steno [hopefully]: "No, not a thing!"

H. Y. B.: "Then try to be at the office earlier Monday morning, please!" J. C. W.

That Settles It.

Scene—A shoe store. The owner sees a Swedish clerk throw a pair of brand new shoes in the waste basket.

Boss—What's the idea of throwing those shoes away?

Clerk—They bane no gude. I try them on six fellers already and they don't fit no one. M. B.

In Public.

Girl [taking singing lessons]: "Do you think I might use my voice in public now?"

Disheartened Musician: "O, I suppose so. You might cheer when the king goes by!" MRS. E. J.

According to Rule.

Visitor—"Well, my little man, and what are you called?"

First Boy—"Julie, sir."

Visitor—"You should say Julius."

Visitor [turning to another boy]—"Well, my little fellow, what is your name?"

Second Boy—"Billious, sir." M. P. C.

Making Change.

Hay and Feed Dealer—"You owe me $3 for oats, Mose, and if you don't pay me I'll have to take your horse."

Uncle Mose—"All right, Mista Gugenheimer, an' Ah'll pay you de balance o' de $3 just as soon as Ah kin." M. L. M.

When, Not How.

The ticket agent replied: "2:02."

The Chinaman answered: "I ask when he go, not how he go." A. S.

Sure Proof.

"Come, Willie," said his mother, "don't be selfish. Let your brother play with your marbles a while."

"But," protested Willie, "he means to keep them always."

"Oh, I guess not."

"I guess yes, 'cause he's swallowed two of them already." E. K.

Why?

Porter (to lady): "Miss, your train is in."

Lady: "My man, why do you say 'my train,' when you know it belongs to the Pullman company?"

Porter: "Why do you say 'my man,' when you know I belong to my wife?" B. B.

Anxious to Please.

It was their first target practice. The officer had worn his army patience thin over these guardsmen. They just would not fire volleys.

In disgust, he finally bellowed, "Fire at random."

A rookie from Duck Hill yelled: "Which one is he?" S. G. H.

dorsement upon censorship as such and cited its obligation to observe any and every court order.

A fair argument, but one that does not alter the facts. If Equity really wants a clean stage, as its executives are fond of saying, it can have it tomorrow, or tonight. We will never get it through producers. A sensation hungry public will not help. But let Equity say "Our people cannot play in an indecent entertainment," and indecent entertainment stops. Mary Blair, all by herself, closed "Beyond Evil" so quickly, simply by walking out on it, that the owners are still stunned.

"Grand Street Follies" Flops.

Meantime we have a new "Grand Street Follies" at the Neighborhood playhouse that is the first disappointing entertainment these folk have staged this season—and the only disappointing "Follies" they have staged in four years. It probably is a good thing for them, however. They have been so much more intelligent and so much more entertaining than their Broadway competitors that they have been drawing the smart crowd in such numbers they had no room left for their Neighborhood clientele.

This particular "Follies" will not draw so well from uptown, but it may go big with the home folks, and that will help reëstablish the theater with the people I assume it was built and subsidized to serve.

This "Follies" is one of those collegiate entertainments that begins when the investigating leading man is lowered from a parachute in the neighborhood of the recently discovered north pole, followed by Toto, the clown. They establish a real estate development and move rapidly into a second act which includes an auction sale to an audience made up of all the principal characters in Broadway plays.

They burlesque the Little theater movement and the general uplift, and many of the lines are bright and the impersonations photographic. But still the entertainment doesn't jell.

Raquel Meller Signs with Mr. Chaplin

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Charles Spencer Chaplin seems to be the name Charlie intends using again. For a while he had dropped his dignity and returned to Charlie Chaplin, but now he has announced signing Raquel Meller to play Josephine to his Napoleon in 1927, it begins to look as if the old highbrow triplicate name would be dusted off and furbished for use.

Charlie, who is a born enthusiast, be on the subject of babies or art, was completely captivated by the famous toreador on her opening night here. He was one of a party of bachelors occupying a box near the stage and applauded enthusiastically.

After one of Raquel's songs, in which she used an armful of roses and violets, she distributed her bouquet in foreign fashion to the notables in the audience whom she recognized. Tom Mix walked down several rows to receive a bunch of violets, as did Mr. Sol Wurtzel of Fox's and several others.

Chaplin was so eager to receive a red, red rose from the hands of the charming Castilienne that he had a friend in the box hold one foot while he hung low over the side of the box to grasp the posies.

Señorita Meller was offended at his too eager manner and passed him up cold for Harry D'Arrast, his friend, who also was in the bachelor box party. Harry got the red, red rose, but seemingly Charlie took it good naturedly, for he gave a party in the señorita's honor a night or two later. It has announced that his first departure from his famous comedy rôles will be made by him in the rôle of Napoleon with Raquel Meller as Josephine, beginning in January, 1927.

Charlie's classic leanings have long been well known here, no less a person than H. B. Warner being authority for the story that Chaplin played through whole scenes of Hamlet with Warner from memory at a private affair where theatricals were the order of the evening. Charlie appeared at last February's costume party of the Sixty club here, garbed as Napoleon.

Charlie arranged for an elaborate special farewell performance of Miss Meller at Hollywood's own theater, the El Capitan, on Friday night and gave an elaborate dinner party for her preceding the performance. His guests included Marion Davies, Norma Talmadge, Joseph M. Schenck, Beatrice Lillie, Jack Buchanan, and Gertrude Lawrence—the latter three of the English company of Charlot's Revue—William Randolph Hearst, Frances Howard Goldwyn, Samuel Goldwyn, and Harry Crocker.

Stealing Her Thunder.

Members of the Writers' club were given a taste of Donald Ogden Stewart's after dinner humor recently. Lois Weber, producer and director of motion pictures for some years, gave a serious speech in which she called the attention of the dinner guests to several problems in the industry.

Following her speech Stewart rose and with the air of a Sunday school teacher addressing his class began: "There is a serious problem which I wish to place before you for your serious consideration. It is about birds. 'Our feathered friends,' I call them. Do you realize that fully ninety per cent [and I have these figures on unimpeachable authority] of all worms who see the light of day in this pleasant world of ours find their final resting place in the tuneful throats of our feathered friends?'" By the time Stewart had finished his speech Miss Weber was looking most flushed, either from suppressed merriment or annoyance at the parody.

Rudolph Valentino is much given to the idea that man's most faithful friend is the dog and has a large collection of pups of all breeds and tendencies at his kennels outside the big Beverly Hills estate. His favorite has been a large and ritzy Dobermann Pinscher, the original German police dog and before the war, which brought the sheep dog, now popular under that name, into prominence.

Rudy has been accustomed to take his Pinscher with him and when he was calling at the home of a friend to attend a party he left his dog in the car, which he drove himself, to watch it.

Some time later a policeman came to the door with an urchin who had been attempting to make off with Rudy's large solid silver radiator cap, made in the form of a cobra ready to strike. The cobra is Rudy's adopted emblem and he has it on all his things.

Rudy dashed out excited and hollered, "That's all right about the silver cobra, but where was my dog?"

"The dog? O, yes," said the policeman, "he's asleep in the car."

Incidentally, Jack Holt and Francis X. Bushman are the moving spirits in a local dog club which meets Sunday nights in the basement of the Hollywood Plaza hotel to swap dog yarns and exhibit prize pups. The dog club is getting to be quite a rendezvous for sportsmen of the picture world.

Charlot's Revue Entertained.

George K. Arthur entertained sixty guests at his home in Carthay Circle, guests of honor being members of the Charlot Revue company. Arthur is an Englishman, also, and the English actors found many of Hollywood's celebrities present when they arrived. These included the Talmadge sisters, Norma Shearer, Bess Meredith, Claire Windsor, Monta Bell, Zasu Pitts, Evelyn Brent, Ed Goulding, Edwin Carew, Carl Mary Akin, Lew Cody and many more. Irene Bordoni, who is here in Sidney, also was present. Arthur told his guests confidentially that it was a celebration of making the last payment on the house.

The movie industries' raids upon the legitimate actors and actresses who come to Hollywood in shows are terrific. Besides Raquel Meller, the three principals from the Charlot Revue—Beatrice Lillie, Gertrude Lawrence and Jack Buchanan—and the Duncan sisters, Rosetta and Vivian, from "Topsy and Eva," are all announced as now under contract to make films here. Dennie has the Charlot folk and Al Christie the Duncan sisters, with Meller under contract to Chaplin.

Norman Kerry is to have an opportunity to swirl a mean plaid and skirl a cruel bagpipe soon, for he is to be Lillian Gish's leading man in "Annie Laurie." The costume department is having a terrible time getting together the plaids that go with the different clans represented in the cast. Some of the ancient Scotch family plaids are not being woven any more, they say, and special orders are being placed with a woolen mill so that each man will appear in the plaid belonging to the name he bears in the story.

Hard Day for Orphans.

The 200 little orphan girls who have been working in the picture, "The Fire Brigade," at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio have been having a great time playing orphans before the camera, but one day this work was tough. They were brought to the studio first thing in the morning and then put to bed, where they stayed all day, with only noon off for lunch.

The scenes being made were of the early morning in the dormitory of an orphanage, and stay in bed it was. To make the insult worse for the youngsters, their school teachers got in their required lessons between shots, and the poor children had to take their mental daily dozen lying down. It was a hard day's work, they all agreed at quitting time.

Alice Day wore an impenetrable disguise at the Sennett studios, where she was working in a new comedy with Eddie Quillan and Danny O'Shea. Alice was done up as a plumber's assistant and looked quite efficient in overalls, a raveled sweater, and a derby two sizes too large. A good old-fashioned blonde coffee strainer was pasted on her upper lip—where all mustaches ought to be—and a blow torch made the thing business-like until she inadvertently turned it on Eddie, who was declaring his undying love for the fair plumber apprentice.

Larry Semon has taken time out from being a comedian, himself, to direct at Sennett's and is now directing Alice Day. Danny O'Shea, as the sheik, all dressed up in a plaid vest, cutaway coat and striped trousers, was talking wistfully of making a trip to Ireland if he could only arrange it with Marshal Neilan, who soon is to take Blanche Sweet and a company of players over there to make some pictures.

Gossip on the lot says Ben Turpin will be married in four or five months. He met his prospective wife, Babette Dietz, while she was helping Ben make the first Mrs. Turpin comfortable in her last illness. Ben was so devoted to his wife that he has been quite lost without her, but seems to be finding comfort now in the society of his wife's old friend.

NAPOLEON AND JOSEPHINE

Raquel Meller, the famous Spanish diseuse, and Charlie Chaplin. Charlie announces he will give up his slapstick role and play Napoleon to Raquel's Josephine in 1927.

Big Pictures for Little Towns.

Dear Miss Tinee! As a resident of one of those small towns which cause C. M. M. such consternation by showing pictures before they appear at Chicago theaters, may I say that the few cases he cited are not exceptional ones. The Mecca theater here in Saginaw, Mich., none of whose theaters can stand comparison with even the lesser of the magnificent movie palaces in Chicago, is usually a week or two ahead of the exhibits at the Chicago theater. Last summer in Kansas City I saw several pictures which did not appear in Chicago till three or four weeks later. Why it is so I have no idea, but, after all, what does it matter? If a picture is good, the fact that a smaller town has seen it first should not lessen the enjoyment of it.

Furthermore, may I add that the Shuberts staged a more gorgeous production of "The Student Prince" here for two nights than the one which ran in Chicago for over a year, for I saw them both. I am a former Chicagoan and read THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE regularly. If it is any consolation to C. M. M., however, I can tell him we are still waiting to see "Ben Hur," "The Big Parade," and "Stella Dallas"—and waiting eagerly!

But why should it hurt Chicago to feel it is not first in everything, when Chicago is first in so much?

This is my second letter to you, Mae, for though you "NEVER disappoint," my first one about six months ago failed to appear. Better luck this time, I hope?

I always enjoy your column Sunday and have missed the daily review ever since I left Chicago. Good luck!

HELEN R. H., Saginaw.

Try to Understand It!

To Miss Mae Tinée:

JUST FINE!

I thought, at first, you sang of spring,
Not dreaming then of wedding ding,
But now, of thy eternal lay,
I get the "ring," that "give away."

W. S.

Editor's note: Lovely! But what's it about?

Movie Versus Stage.

Dear Miss Tinée: As a frequenter of motion pictures (I do not care to call myself a fan), perhaps my opinion of them would not be lost in the volume of other voices.

There is no doubt that the movies are a wonderful thing commercially and technically, but in its artistic aspects I think the cinema is far behind the drama of the legitimate stage. This is partly due to the handicap placed upon movie artists by the absence of their aural faculties, but mostly to the blunderous manner in which producers have drawn upon the classics of literature for their material. They were not written to be absorbed in an hour and a half, from a pantomime of voiceless puppets. Since motion pictures must be content with those elements of drama which can be photographed, let them cultivate a field of their own, where they can use these puppets, as puppets, and give us a film of ideals.

What opportunity there is on the screen for an actor is not allowed him. Suspense—and they think that alone is necessary—is created by some physical phenomena, a buffalo stampede, football game, or a forest fire; in the face of this the actors act, and upon its outcome rest their final disposition—ninety-nine times out of a hundred "they lived happily ever after." It is no small wonder that the successful actors of the screen have become monsters in the mind of the public.

GEORGE R. S.

Editor's Note: Your letter should bring some answers, sir.

Concerning a Film Comer.

Dear Miss Tinée: I perused your column this a. m. and thoroughly agree with you that William Haines is not only the coming, but is now cat's meow. I don't remember reading your criticism on "Memory Lane," but I was broken hearted because poor Billiam didn't get the girl—this from me, who for years, and years, and years have been a stanch and true blue friend to Conrad Nagel—can you beat that?

And I'm neither susceptible, fickle, or light headed. It's just that where William Haines has been hiding all these years I don't know—but I am glad that he has decided to let the public share his bee-ootiful acting—ain't chu?

A devoted slave to your column,
R. M. S.

Editor's Note—Chu-bet!

General Strike Causes a Wireless Boom.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 26.—A group of six men who have been cherishing the idea that broadcasting was only a craze are extended by the publication of figures a few days ago showing that on the last day of May the number of licenses issued was 2,012,000. Many new licenses were taken out as a direct result of the strike and there is no doubt that the general walkout created a boom in wireless hitherto unknown in this country. Broadcasting has proved itself a national institution.

The Church of England mission at Dalgle Point on the Arctic coast, about sixty miles east of Hershel island, which, in turn, is about fifty miles west of the Alaska-Yukon boundary line, has recently had its first experience of listening to London.

The Rev. W. A. Geddes writes that while tuning in on his receiving set he was surprised to hear the words "Lon don calling," and when the announcer proceeded to give the weather forecast for England, Wales, and Scotland he realized he was listening to the motherland. The news items were also appreciated, as Shingle Point was cut in the throes of the Arctic night and the sun had not been seen for a period of nearly two months.

May Change Censorship.

As a result of the outcry which has been raised against what has been called the British Broadcasting company's editorials, there is likely to be a complete overhauling of the present system of official censorship on broadcast news items, it was learned this week. A writer in one of the weekly British wireless journals discusses the situation as follows:

"The B. B. C. criticism of the strike should never have been passed by a censor who understood the true nature of his work, and I think the apparent laxity in the present arrangements will very soon altered. The progress of the B. B. C. must necessarily always be over very thin ice and any new regime they introduce is fraught with the danger of causing offense to a section of the public, or, what is perhaps almost as bad, being generally condemned as dull."

Patients Listen In.

Eminent doctors in charge of hospitals throughout the country report that listening in by patients is proving to be of the greatest assistance in making the convalescent period as short as possible.

"It gives them something to look forward to each day," one well known doctor at a big hospital said, "and it keeps them in touch with the outside world and its activities. Patients cannot always be put in a position sufficiently comfortable to read, but there are few who are unable to listen.

"The programs? They seem to be admirably balanced and to give all patients a considerable measure of what they like."

Sell Many Loud Speakers.

A feature of the last two or three weeks has been a striking increase in the sales of loud speakers. The dealers put it down to two reasons. One was, of course, the strike, when many people found that all members of the family seemed to want to hear the news bulletins, and the other is the fact that headphones become irksome after evenings.

German egineers are making extensive experiments to prevent interference between one wavelength and another. They hope to solve part of the problem by putting relay stations on the same wavelength as main stations and keeping these waves exactly the same by a new system of control.

RADIO FANS NO LONGER TWIST THEIR DIALS

Those who twist their radio dials incessantly might be compared to a movie fan who entered and left fifteen or twenty different motion picture theaters in a night, according to the press review of broadcast station operations. Such an evening's entertainment would result in a haphazard jumble of impressions that would be anything to the credit of motion pictures.

Leading stations are now building their programs in consecutive units that are cumulative in effect. Many listeners report that listeners now tune in for the supper program and stay with the station right through to sign-off. This type of radio reception results in fuller enjoyment, as it involves relaxed restful listeners.

Radio Developments Throughout the World

The erection of broadcasting stations at Kalmar, Karlskrona, and Helsingborg, to work in conjunction with the present station at Malmo, has stimulated Swedish interest in radio development. The sale of expensive sets has increased in Sweden and the license fee for receiving sets has been reduced to 10 crowns ($2.70). There are about 182,000 licensed receiving sets in Sweden on March 31 last, an increase of about 63,000 during the previous 6 months.

A radio club recently formed in Panama has started broadcasting. Interest in radio has increased greatly throughout the country.

A recent Egyptian decree regulates the sale and use of all radio apparatus in the country. The decree includes many features of the British law, particularly the matter of patent infringements by builders of home made sets. An English organization is to be granted broadcasting concession in Egypt, according to reports in Alexandria.

Plans are being made for the installation of a broadcasting station in Australia. Local associations and citizens subscribe toward the cost. Broadcasting will increase the demands for radio equipment, as reception of the American and Canadian stations is weak and unreliable in Hawaii.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, June 27.) (Chicago Daylight Saving Time.)

THE Harvester Choral society of the International Harvester company will present an hour's program today at 3 o'clock from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The director of the society is Richard B. De Young and the accompanist Helen Leefelt. The program to be given by this organization will be one of the most interesting of the day because of the high musical caliber of the society and the varied group of selections to be presented. Following is the program:

Viking Sons.....Coleridge-Taylor
O Hush Thee My Baby.....Sullivan
Trees.....Rasbach
Song of the Marching Men (The New Earth).....Henry Hadley
Come to the Fair.....Easthope Martin
Allah's Holiday (Kasinka).....Friml
Song of the Vikings.....Eaton Faning
The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise.....Ernest Seitz
America Triumphant.....Demarest

His Eminence Cardinal John Bonzano will speak on W-G-N this afternoon at 4 o'clock. This talk will be especially interesting because of the leading part Cardinal Bonzano took in the Eucharistic congress.

Topping the array of features on tonight schedule is the program to be offered in "Our Music Room," from 9 to 10 o'clock. The composers who will be discussed are Chopin and Debussy. The selections of Chopin to be played tonight are "Polonaise Militaire," "The Raindrop," and "Nocturne in E Flat." The Debussy compositions to be given are "Reverie," "Menuet," "The Girl With the Flaxen Hair," and "Arabesque." Also, several songs written by these composers will be presented by Kathleen Ryan, contralto, and Bryce Talbot, baritone.

The regular Sunday night program brought by wire from New York will be given tonight by Allen McQuhae, tenor, and Betsy Lane Shepherd, soprano. Mr. McQuhae is well known to listeners and Miss Shepherd is a lyric soprano of rare ability.

The program tonight will start at 8:15 o'clock.

The Westfall-Morand duo will present the Lyon & Healy program this afternoon from 2 to 3 o'clock. This consists of Helen Westfall, soprano, and Doris Morand, contralto. Among the solos which Miss Westfall will offer are: "Life's Paradise," by Brown, "The Last Hour," by Kramer. Miss Morand will include in her group of solos "Thou Art the Night Wind," by Gaul, and "Little Pickaninny Kid," by Guion. Several duets will be presented, among them the following: "Shrieks of Sea Gulls," by Grodski; "Sweetest Story Ever Told," by Stults, and "Love Like the Dawn," by Cadman.

Ambrose Larsen will give his Sunday recital at the Wurlitzer organ this afternoon at 1 o'clock. An unusual program, interesting because of the wide range of selections included, will be presented by Mr. Larsen.

RADIO PICTURES NOW SPEED OVER ATLANTIC DAILY

Their Transmission No Longer Mystery.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—No longer a seven day wonder, the flashing of pictures and Paris fashion designs back and forth by wireless across the Atlantic ocean is rapidly becoming a routine business. Apparatus is constantly being perfected with the result that between 50 and 75 pictoradiograms are being transmitted between New York and London every day.

The transmission in London is in the hands of Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited. In New York it is done by the Radio Corporation of America. Pictures received in New York destined for some other city are forwarded by special delivery, registered mail and air mail where possible.

Size of Pictures Limited.

Conversely, pictures destined to some part of Europe outside of London are mailed by plane from the receiving office in London. As an example, pictures originated in Paris and destined to Chicago are air mailed to London and upon their receipt in New York are promptly forwarded by air mail to the addressee in Chicago. Pictoradiograms intended for London or Europe must be forwarded to or filed in New York for transmission.

The maximum dimensions of a picture which can be sent are 4¼ by 11¼ inches. These measurements are determined and limited by the size of the glass cylinder on the transmitter. Matter exceeding these dimensions may be suitably divided into strips or section and sent. The 4¼ inch dimension is fixed and the rate per inch based upon this as the standard width.

$16 a Square Inch.

The rate is $4 per linear quarter inch or fraction thereof, $16 per inch, with a minimum price of $50. Thus a 4¼ by 5 inches would cost $80. An additional quarter of an inch is necessary for the transmission of the address, and this is charged for at the prevailing rate.

Matter for transmission as pictoradiograms may be filed in the form of photographs, either prints or negatives or postive films, line drawings or sketches, printed matter, advertising layouts, or documents written by hand or printed. It printed matter is to be transmitted, it should be set up in type not less than 10 point in size.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan

TRAFFIC is becoming so heavy around the north pole and real estate developing so rapidly that we think it is a high time or a high place to build a new radio station.

What with the delays of the airplanes, the dispatch boats, the cables, the walruses, and these hydro-electropolo photos that are sent by telegraph, news is pretty slow in getting down from the pole, and a radio would pep it up. There are too many excursions to the pole nowadays to lose sight of it.

With a radio station, the north pole would be made, as far as publicity is concerned. Look what radio did for Davenport, Ia.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Hastings, Neb., and Shenandoah, Ia. It might be called WEBF, with a tricky slogan like "Where Everybody's Freezing"; or, like WTAS' old motto—"Willie, Tommy, Annie, Sammy"—it could be "Walrus, Eskimo, Blubber, Fish." "The Voice of the Chattering Teeth—the Farthest North in Radio."

Let's start one. We'll have bedtime stories six months long!

Our orchestra, "The Midnight Sons of Guns," will open the program with "I'm Sitting on Top of the World."

A lot of good advertising programs can be arranged for the land boomers, the mitten manufacturers, the earlap makers, and the gumdrop concessions.

The daylight programs will consist of road map instruction on the neighborhood, health hints on the fresh air afforded, stock quotations on furs, and talks on frappés.

Santa Claus will be heard nightly in stories—and old Doc Cook will tell a few (more).

Lectures will be offered every year on daylight saving. The Igloo quartet will sing "When It's Night Time in Italy It's a Long Time between Breakfast and Lunch up Here."

Added features will be: No telegrams will be read, because they'll never get there; long-winded speakers will freeze to death before they finish; and when we sign off we'll sign off for six months.

Let's each nominate a radio singer we'd like to have sent to the north pole!

U. S. HAS MORE THAN HALF THE WORLD STATIONS

We Have 536; Canada Is Second with 45.

The United States, operating 536 commercial broadcasting stations and endeavoring to find wave bands for 637 applicants ready to go on the air, leads all the rest of the world in radio broadcasting. This is shown in a report just issued by the department of commerce which reveals the fact that in the other countries combined there are a total of but 351 stations. The list includes, in part:

United States	536	Finland	11
France	18	Germany	20
Spain	20	Sweden	20
United Kingdom	20	Canada	45
Cuba	18	Mexico	21
Argentina	10	Brazil	14
India	16	Australia	23

Canada Is Second.

Curiously enough our neighbor Canada has the second largest number of broadcasting stations, over twice as many as the United Kingdom.

Likewise the United States gives a good account of itself in the tremendous amount of power used. We have about fourteen 5,000 watt stations, one 10,000 watt, and two great 50,000 watt stations, one at Bound Brook and the other at Schenectady. The rest of the world has eight 5,000 watt stations, two 10,000 watt, and one 16,000 watt station.

Mysterious Red Station.

The Rugby and Daventry stations are credited with something approaching 50,000 watts. Likewise, although not mentioned in the current government list, the mysterious Russian soviet station at Nijni-Novgorod is supposed to have something of the same power. A new station which appears in the current governmental list is at Polski Ericsson in Warsaw, now listed as having 8,000 watt input, but to be replaced by a 50,000 watt input.

RADIO CAUSING BAD WEATHER, SAYS SCIENTIST

French Minister Has a New Theory.

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, June 26.—Paul Painleve, minister of war, who is one of the foremost scientists of France, in an interview in Le Matin discusses the possibility of radio telephonic waves causing the present rainy, wintry weather which has persisted in the greater part of western Europe for nearly a month. The war minister recently suggested in an article that the intense radio activity in Europe has had a strong effect upon the weather generally.

"I do not wish to accuse anything in particular; I merely wish to call attention to a hypothesis which appears to me to be logical," he said. "For example, if you introduce radio telephonic emissions into a tightly enclosed room where the air is absolutely transparent, in a moment little drops of water will begin to form on your face. What has happened?

Makes Rain in Home.

"The Hertzian fog has become ionionized and electricized, and the invisible fog, found even in every home, has turned into water. You have made rain in your own house.

"One, therefore, can conclude that the multitude of radio telephonic waves existing in the ether just now produces the same effect upon the atmosphere, the result being the very beautiful month of June with rain each day."

M. Painleve then went on to say that it was not at all beyond the bounds of possibility that future generations would be able to control rain at will, once the fundamental mechanism of these radio waves or tides becomes known.

Control Weather by Radio.

"Practical experiments have already been begun," he continued. "In America, for example, if they have not actually begun to attack rain, they have started the war on fog.

"Control of the weather is a possibility of the future, one of the problems of tomorrow. Humanity, which has harnessed the waters of the earth, utilized the sun and flown over the mountains, has as yet done nothing to vanquish rain and cold."

EDUCATIONAL CONVENTION TO BE BROADCAST

A comprehensive plan is being worked out by stations WFI and WLIT for broadcasting certain portions of the program of the 64th Annual Convention of the National Education association to be held in the sesquicentennial auditorium in Philadelphia, June 29 to July 1.

From the former station there will be two fifteen-minute speeches each day running from 2:30 to 3 o'clock, eastern standard time, excepting Wednesday, and from the latter two addresses of the same length, running from 4:20 to 4:50 o'clock. The addresses will be made by a past president of the association or by a present president of a leading department.

There will be a general session on Tuesday morning, June 29, which will include the discussion of radio, at which time W. E. Harkness, vice president of the Broadcasting Company of America, of New York City, will address the convention, taking as his subject, "Radio and the Child."

Engineering Body Votes to Support White Radio Bill

The American Engineering Council has voted to support the White Bill, which places the control of radio broadcasting in the Department of Commerce, it is announced by the president of the council, Dean Dexter S. Kimball of Cornell University.

The council, acting through its administrative board, adopted a report of its committee on broadcasting headed by Lawrence W. Wallace of Washington, which opposed the Dill Bill because it "appears to be of questionable desirability."

The White Bill, which has passed the House, provides for a commission of five and grants a final appeal to the courts. The Dill Bill, which has passed the Senate, vests control of broadcasting in a special Commission without appeal of any sort.

Chaos Is Threatened.

The Engineering Council conducted an inquiry into the broadcasting situation, investigating the legal status, pending legislation, the means by which the radio industry has thus far been guided, and its unsolved problems.

"Chaos is threatened, and congress must act," according to the council's investigation committee, which in its report made public by Dean Kimball said:

"There are now about 540 broadcasting stations, of which number at least 200 give regular programs of considerable interest, commanding substantial audiences. There are approximately 600 additional applicants to whom broadcasting licenses have not been granted by the department of commerce.

Wave Bands Limited.

"For numerous reasons broadcasting is limited to the range 550 kilocycles (545 meters) to 1,500 kilocycles (200 meters). The most important reasons for the limitation are the inability of the millions of receiving sets in the homes of the country to receive signals outside this frequency range, and the active use of the remainder of the radio frequency spectrum by other applications of radio.

"In the broadcasting range the spacing is 10 kilocycles apart. It is impractical to place stations closer together than this, and there would be even advantages in a spacing of 15 to 20 kilocycles. With the present 10 kilocycles spacing there are 95 broadcasting channels.

"This means very few more than 100 broadcasting stations can be accommodated on the air at one time without potential interference. Much of this potential interference is actual at the present time, inasmuch as 540 stations are crowded into these channels.

Public Interest to Govern.

"Division of time on the air between stations has been tried as a remedy, but with this and all other expedients which have been adopted there still remains a serious situation demanding thorough technical study.

"The only point on which there seems to be general agreement is that the public interest, convenience, and necessity must govern all decisions."

Unwillingness to observe either the recommendations of the conferences called by Secretary Hoover or the findings of the department of commerce is developing, according to the engineering report, which continued:

"In one case a federal court has determined that the secretary of commerce may not decline to grant a license, although he may determine in the license what wave length, power and other conditions must be observed. In another case a broadcaster who used a different wave length than that assigned to him by the department was not enjoined from this practice by the court.

Urge Congress to Act.

"A third departure from the practice of the department seems imminent because the Chicago Federation of Labor has announced that it intends to assume the privilege of radio broadcasting without a license as soon as its station is completed.

"If this should become a practice, or if the practice of choosing their own wave lengths becomes general among broadcasters a radio chaos of inestimable complexity would soon follow.

"It is because of this threatened chaos that many interests have urged congress to pass some form of radio legislation during the present session.

"It is evident from these facts that the scheme of self-regulation through annual conferences, although remarkably successful in the past, can no longer be regarded as adequate alone."

W-G-N PLANS LESSONS FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN UNTIL CLASSES OPEN

Elementary students who feel the need of more training in either grammar or mathematics will be given an opportunity to make up for work they missed during the school year by tuning in W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, each day during the summer months. Under the direction of Miss Colletta Deignan, a graduate of Chicago Normal college and an experienced teacher in the Chicago schools, W-G-N is to present special tutoring in the subjects mentioned above.

Miss Deignan begins this intensive training tomorrow morning at 10:15 o'clock. Her tutorship will deal with correct English and mathematics. Considerable attention will be devoted to general conversation, in which, it has been found, most errors are made, and she will strive to teach students to work mainly for correctness. Though the course is designed primarily for young students, adult listeners will also find it worth their while to listen in as well.

Each week during the course printed texts, containing outlines of the lessons to be taken up for that particular week, will be sent to all the students. And every morning at the beginning of the class in mathematics a problem in one of the four fundamentals of arithmetic will be given with the idea of teaching students to do speedy and dependable work.

At the present time the class has a large enrollment. The idea of radio tutoring has appealed to a large number of listeners and they have already sent in for the first lessons. Others who wish to join should tune in W-G-N at 10:15 o'clock tomorrow morning for instructions.

L. B. Landry, Baritone, on WJAZ Program Thursday

Leo B. Landry, baritone, a well-known radio artist, whose work has gained him a wide reputation in fraternal, concert and church work, will give a recital of song classics at WJAZ Thursday evening, July 1, beginning at 8 o'clock.

RADIO VIOLATORS BEWARE, RADIO TEST CAR READY

Hope to Have One Soon in Each District.

Just fitted out with a Kolster direction finder, similar to a radio compass aboard a ship, the department of commerce test car, with headquarters at Detroit, is all ready to spot unlicensed broadcasting stations. By means of the direction finder S. W. Edwards, radio supervisor in charge, will be able to take bearings and readily locate any offender operating a station without a permit.

This test car, the only one in the United States, is at present in Washington having its field strength apparatus calibrated at the bureau of standards. It is soon hoped to have a similar car in each radio district. Although the territory of Supervisor Edwards covers Ohio, Michigan, practically all of New York state excepting New York city, and parts of Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, since he has had the test car he has hardly used the railroad trains in traveling. Not only has he been able to reach the broadcasting stations quicker, but he has been able to get to places where trains do not run.

During that time the car has covered 12,500 miles and saved $1,500 in railroad fare, according to Mr. Edwards, which is quite an item in view of the fact that the car only cost $4,500. In addition to inspection of radio stations and other rountine work, he has received something like 7,000 interference complaints in less than five months. Notwithstanding this fact and that he must cover the better part of five states, he has but two radio inspectors assisting him.

3 Applications Bring Radio License Seekers to 637

Three new applications, bringing the number of applicants seeking to broadcast up to 637, were filed last week. They came from Austin Klein, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Southwestern university, Georgetown, Tex., and First Unitarian church, Los Angeles, Cal.

JUNE IN RADIO HISTORY

1838—June 3.—The first paid radiogram was transmitted from the Needles (Isle of Wight) station.

1902—June 25.—The first moving wire magnetic detector actuated by clockwork was installed on the Italian cruiser Carlo Alberto.

1910—June 24.—Act approved by the United States government requiring radio equipment and operators on certain passenger carrying vessels.

1913—June 18.—A wireless telegraph bill was presented to the Ottawa parliament and passed under the title "Radiotelegraph act of Canada."

1917—June 2.—Marked the coming of age of wireless telegraphy in England; that is, that 21 years had elapsed since the registration of patent 12039 in 1896.

1919—June 30.—There were 2,312 ship stations of the United States. At this time new ship stations were increasing at the rate of 100 a month. This increase was due to the great number of vessels built during the war period.

PEPPER PARTIES ALL SUMMER ON TRIBUNE STATION

"Pepper Parties," which are presented by W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake Hotel, every Wednesday evening, are to be continued through the summer, station officials announced yesterday. This will doubtless be pleasing news to jazz lovers, since the parties consist mainly of the cream of the jazz music in Chicago territory.

The policy of rotating orchestras, which has been followed in the past, will also be continued during June, July and August. At the present time, Bobby Meeker's Drake hotel orchestra, Fred Hamm's Purple Crackle orchestra, and Johnny Mullaney's Blue Jackets are furnishing the jazz that greets listeners.

New Radio Station to Aid Ships on California Coast

Better protection for vessels on the southern California coast is assured by the radio beacon just established at Los Angeles harbor light station. It sounds every two minutes. The signal will be sounded through thick or foggy weather on a 1,000 meter wave length and will be available for vessels equipped with radio compasses.

FINDS DAUGHTER BY RADIO.

By means of radio a New York man located his daughter, last seen when but a year old. She is now grown and married.

Henry Field, KFNF Boss, Will Be Heard on WLS

Henry Field, owner, operator, announcer and general factotum of station KFNF, Shenandoah, Ia., and runner-up in the 1925 Radio Digest gold cup contest for announcers, will be heard twice from WLS, Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation station, on Wednesday night, June 30, first at 8:30 in the evening when he and his entertainers will do their stuff before the banqueters of the American Seed Trade association to be held in the Louis XVI. room of Hotel Sherman and again at midnight when the troupe will return to the WLS studio and put on another program.

Touring the World Via Grand Opera

By Edward Moore.

Seville.' 'is in America the Russian opera enjoys unique popularity with the musical elect, but that popularity is premised upon such rôles as 'Boris Godunoff,' which the Covent Garden organization was not prepared adequately to present. Boito's "Mefistofele' was accepted with stoicism, but when 'The Barber' was brought forth as a vehicle for the high priced idol after having been sung by gifted Italians throughout more than a century, a leading critic summed up public sentiment thus:

"'He was not even the hero of the opera, was not even on the stage for any considerable period of time. Chaliapin as a low comedian! What a waste of two guineas, my dear!'

"The mystery of the serious attack which has incapacitated Georges Baklanoff and caused him to lose forty-eight pounds in three weeks, setting on foot rumors that he was suffering all manner of maladies from ptomaine poisoning to cancer, has been clarified as entirely due to faulty diagnosis. The Russian artist was stricken in France, removed to a hospital in Budapest and now is convalescing at his French seaside home. An abscess between the stomach and the liver, which caused his suffering and the apprehension of his many friends and admirers, has been successfully curbed.

Melba Gives Farewell Concert.

"We left London on the night of Dame Nellie Melba's farewell performance, which readily sold out at the equivalent of $16 per seat. In the course of conversation she spoke of revisiting the United States next year, stating specifically that she would sing a farewell concert in Chicago. This doubtless means an American tour, although I do not believe any arrangements have as yet been made.

"From London we proceeded to Antwerp and to Brussels to hear John Charles Thomas, an American musical comedy star, now undergoing a ripening process in grand opera at the Royal Théâtre La Monnaie. He has been attracting wide and favorable attention there in important baritone rôles. And there we had a lesson driven home as never before. It positively is dangerous to accept European verdicts concerning opera voices for the reason that the 'finds' are, as a general thing, surrounded by such mediocrity that only distorted estimate can be made.

"We heard Mr. Thomas in the worst performance of 'The Pearl Fishers' that it has ever been my misfortune to attend. The American baritone infinitely overshadowed the entire organization and is a fine singer, but the latter's performance would never be accepted in America. The conductor dragged, the orchestra wasn't in the mood and the chorus was simply awful—and this in an old established temple of art that boasts the most beautiful proscenium I have seen anywhere. It is all of gold in a simple effective design. The opera season lasts almost through the entire year and is well supported, although the prices are less than those usually encountered.

"The condition that I criticize here is encountered all over Europe. Few operas attempt to approximate the standard of uniform excellence that has become arbitrary at home, so the little that they have that can truthfully be called good stands out in spectacular contrast. The artists regarded on this side as 'great' are not, as a rule, timber that would be acceptable in secondary rôles in either of the two great American opera companies, for we have long since absorbed the cream of European artistry. That is why European managements find no difficulty in getting advanced prices when they are able to offer Claudia Muzio or Rosa Raisa, Mary Garden, Charles Hackett and other popular American artists by birth or adoption—a practice that frequently has been practiced this year.

"As an instance, following his success at Covent Garden Mr. Hackett has booked a number of private concerts throughout England. Such private affairs are more frequently given on this side than at home and large fees are paid."

A BIT DRAMATIC

INA BOURSKAYA.
[Copyright: Mishkin.]

SHE is not only one of the "useful" members of the Ravinia organization, but, given proper opportunity, she can flare forth with the flame of drama. She assisted at the opening of the season last night, and she will appear several times during the week. Later in the season she may be seen and heard in the part pictured here. In case you are curious, it is Delilah in "Samson and Delilah."

Notes of Music and Musicians

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, who have done about ten times more with music for two pianos than any pair in memory, plan some extensive additions to their concert list for the coming season. Mr. Maier has made arrangements of Saint-Saëns' "Carnival des Animaux" and "Turkey in the Straw"; Mr. Pattison has written a new foxtrot; there will also be Bach's "Goldberg" Variations and the Siciliano from the sonata in E flat for flute, a berceuse by Florent Schmitt, and a prelude and pastorale by Richard Platt. Leo Sowerby has revised his "Syncopata" from the Paul Whiteman orchestration to two pianos. Finally, in their orchestral appearances, the heavenly twins of the adjoining keyboards will play Ernest Hutcheson's Concerto for two pianos.

Rachel Busey Kinsolving is first under the wire with the announcement of musical events under her management for the 1926-'27 season. Her "musical mornings" at the Blackstone hotel, extending from Nov. 9 to Jan. 11, will include these pairs: Lucrezia Bori, soprano, and Nikolai Orloff, pianist; Albert Spalding, violinist, and Karin Branzell, contralto; Lauritz Melchior, tenor, and Alfred Blumen, pianist; Wanda Landowski, harpsichordist, and Edward Johnson, tenor; Florence Austral, soprano, and Carl Flesch, violinist. She also tells of five evening concerts at Orchestra hall, where, between Nov. 10 and Feb. 23, there will be appearances of Sophie Braslau, contralto, and Alfred Cortot, pianist; Claire Dux, soprano [Editor's note: this would seem to be doubtful], and Efrem Zimbalist, violinist; Guiomar Novaes, pianist, and John Charles Thomas, baritone; Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and the Denishawn dancers, and the Philadelphia orchestra. Likewise she announces that she has taken the Goodman theater for Sunday afternoons. Among the attractions to be presented there are the London String quartet in two concerts, Guiomar Novaes, pianist; Ashley Pettis, pianist; Leola Turner, soprano; Carl Friedberg, pianist; Stella Trane, soprano, and many others. The "Princess Pat's Band," the famous band of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry from Winnipeg, will be presented in a concert early in the fall.

The choir of St. Paul's on the Midway will sing "Faust" in concert form at the Hotels Windermere tonight. The soloists will be Elizabeth Schwitzer, Enid Dickinson, Frank Leech, and Carl Craven, who will sing the leading rôle and direct the chorus.

The St. Louis Municipal Opera company, which purveys operetta in the open air, points with pride to an attendance of 129,000 for the first three weeks of the present season. The attractions were Victor Herbert's "Eileen" and "The Red Mill" and Oscar Straus' "The Chocolate Soldier," which was quite a bit the most popular.

The palace of Fontainebleau, near Paris, is now open for its sixth annual summer music school. Of the 150 American students there, half are pianists, thirty singers, eighteen violinists, fifteen organists, and the rest harpists, cellists, and composition students.

ON THE WAY

MRS. MARGARET KEENAN

She's in "Black Velvet," wherewith the Playhouse is to be reopened July 5. . . . Mrs. Keenan, so far as is known, has not acted in Chicago. She is the wife of Frank Keenan, star of the play.

It's the killingest stuff you ever used!

YOUR HOUSE can be swarming with flies and mosquitoes and roaches and BLACK FLAG will kill every doggone one of 'em! Not a single one escapes this deadliest of insect-killers.

It's the secret ingredient does it! A vegetable ingredient which is the surest death to insects ever discovered. Bugs breathe it and die. They strangle to death—all of them! Yet this ingredient in BLACK FLAG which is so deadly to bugs is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

Give this surer, quicker, better insect-killer a trial. It rids a house of fleas! Roaches, ants and bed-bugs, too! Kills every bug and every kind of bug that ventures into the home. BLACK FLAG comes in two forms—liquid and powder—equally deadly. At drug, grocery, hardware and department stores. Powder is 15c up. Powder Gun, 10c. And let the low liquid prices given below tell their own story of economy. Just compare them.

Like a trip abroad

..at the cost of a vacation at "Home"

14-day Scenic Tour, with 1000 Mile Ocean Cruise Takes You to Rest and Recreation in New Settings of Colorful Scenes—Every Convenience and Comfort, Transportation, Sleeping Quarters for Train, Steamship and Hotel—Meals on Boat and at Hotel, All Cared for Before You Start Through One Low Special Rate.

WHEN we dream of vacations and forget expense, we always set sail on a ship. That's the way our dreams begin vacation. That's the way they travel, till the cost snaps us back to reality.

But here's a vacation that lets your dreams travel as they like, and the cost doesn't stop them. A vacation like a trip abroad at the price of a vacation at home. A tour to a new land of dream and romance with utmost variety. Change in scene, change of climate, change of outlook on life, all merged in a marvelous fortnight organized this year by the Hollywood Tours.

1,000 Mile Ocean Cruise

You set forth on a scenic pilgrimage to New York on a luxurious train. You pay a visit to Niagara Falls which every American feels he should see. You ride by day along the picturesque Hudson River, the Rhine of the Western Hemisphere. You visit the great metropolis, New York, and circle it in a special boat, viewing the famous skyline Gotham. Then off on the 1,000 mile cruise down New York Bay past the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island—unless you choose to remain longer in New York.

Yes, it's just like going abroad, this delightful cruise down the coast to Hollywood, aboard the finest steamship of the Clyde Line, the new Seminole. Staterooms and suites worthy of a trans-Atlantic liner afford you sleeping quarters equal to the best of ocean travel; spacious, beautifully furnished saloons and lounges; broad, wide promenade decks enhance your comfort and intensify your enjoyment of the voyage.

The boat trip itself is a vacation. With newly met friends, you luxuriate in the amusement and entertainment of a great floating club or hotel. For three days you leave the working world behind, you quit everything except enjoyment and companionship with those making the tour.

You promenade the deck, delighting in the ocean air that whets your appetite for the fine table below. You listen to concerts at tiffin, and dance on the covered deck at night. Or you just idle, lounging in a deck chair with the ozone-laden air blowing clean and fresh across your face.

Fine as the trip is, bearing you away from the humdrum of the year, it but trains you, so to speak, for the vacation at Hollywood. First, you are comfortably settled in your room at the Park View Hotel; and then begins a round of sightseeing and entertainment as busy and varied as you choose to make it. Specially planned trips motor you to Palm Beach, Miami, and other beautiful spots along Florida's most famous coast, treating you to new scenes, and introducing you to new amusements, characteristic of this unique section of the country.

Every Day a Day In June

Summer is the real season at Hollywood. Many in the North learned it last year. The average temperature in June, July and August is 80.5. Moreover, the air is always in motion. Refreshing breezes always blow off the Atlantic, freeing Hollywood from the scorching days and depressing nights of northern cities. This paradox of climate is the miracle worked by the famous Gulf Stream.

Imagination cannot exaggerate the allurement held forth by a vacation spent in this delightful region; cannot exaggerate the multifold pleasures—cannot outpicture the carefree charm of the silvery sands, the coral beach, the golden moon, and the white surf rolling in gentle combers.

Every waking hour of your stay in Hollywood is filled with wholesome amusement and entertainment. Here for eight days you live right on the shore of the great Atlantic. Always near you every recreation—golfing at the Country Club, bathing in the surf, aquatic sports at the Bathing Casino, band concerts on the beach, and dancing at the hotel.

Where Can Dollars Equal It?

The cost of this magnificent cycle of sightseeing, of this tour of pleasure and entertainment and rest is amazingly low, all necessary expenses included. A special price covers all transportation and living expenses there and back again. It includes sleeping quarters and meals on the boat and at The Park View Hotel at Hollywood. It covers the specially conducted sightseeing trips to Palm Beach, Miami, the Everglades, and other show spots of Florida.

Compare the Hollywood tour with any vacation offered. Compare it in allurement; compare it in cost. It is equal to a trip abroad and costs much less. Fill out the coupon, mail it, and we will forward details to you, including a chart of the palatial Clyde Liner, Seminole.

ATTENTION . .

New York Visitors

If you are planning to go to New York on business or a visit, here is a chance to save money, and net a vacation. You can take advantage of the low transportation rates of the Hollywood Tour; spend all the time you need or wish in New York—you may even visit the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia—and round out the trip with a matchless vacation at Hollywood.

You may go to New York with a regular Hollywood Tour, or precede it, and by a special stop-over remain in New York till you are ready to resume the tour to Florida. The stop-over curtails none of the special features of the tour nor curtails the vacation. It costs nothing extra. The only plus expense is what you spend while you are in New York.

Let business help you on your way to a vacation or your vacation aid you in your business by joining the Hollywood Tour.

One of the most famous fishing grounds in the world is just off shore at Hollywood. Here, on the edge of the Gulf Stream, tarpon and sailfish abound. This big game of the sea attracts sportsmen from all over the world. Now is the very height of the season for tarpon and sailfish.

There is a paradox of climate at Hollywood. Right on the edge of the tropics it is cooler in summer than many a Northern city. The average temperature in June, July and August is 80.5 degrees. Nights are 10 degrees cooler. The Gulf Stream, about two miles off shore, produces air currents which make Hollywood cooler in summer and warmer in winter than elsewhere in Florida.

CONSUMERS SANITARY COFFEE & BUTTER STORES

THERE ARE NOW 200 CONSUMERS STORES

We are going to celebrate the opening of our 200th store with a remarkable 6-day sale

Naturally we are proud of our ten year record; having only six stores in 1916 and reaching the 200th mark in ten short years.

We have been cranks about certain things, especially butter, eggs, coffee and bakery goods and have guarded the reputation of these important foods with a rigid and vigorous inspection of every shipment that has come into our refrigerators, roasters and bakery.

We have been insistent in our demand for immaculate store cleanliness. Consumers stores are kept clean and every employe who comes in contact with food must meet a standard that is high.

Prices have always been fair, but we have never compromised with quality to meet a price. We handle only nationally advertised products with a definite standard of value, because we know that you think of good foods ahead of the few pennies that might be saved on foods of inferior quality.

If you are not now trading with the Consumers store in your neighborhood, we urge you to come in and get acquainted. You will appreciate the excellent quality of our foods, the reasonable prices and our cordial store service.

CONSUMERS STORES ARE NOW READY TO SERVE YOU IN THE FOLLOWING CITIES AND TOWNS:

HART BRAND CANNED GOODS

Hart Brand canned goods are the very finest that are packed in this country. The late Luther Burbank wrote, "We have tested the Bantam Corn, Succotash, Lima Beans, Peas, Black Raspberries, Red Raspberries and Strawberries. In some cases in our opinion the products are superior to those freshly gathered from fields and gardens." Hart Brand goods are heavily packed. You will get more in a Hart can than any other we know. Fortunately Consumers stores control this excellent line of goods for the Chicago territory and we can offer them at prices which make them by far the most economical purchases you can make. Our order for this year's pack of Hart Brand goods alone totals 133,000 cases, 133 carloads, or more than three ordinary train loads.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

French Methods of Handling Crowds

By Mme. X.

YOU know that day-after-the-party feeling? We Chicagoites have it this morning. We're glad we had the party. It was a grand and glorious occasion. And now we'll tidy up the rooms, set the furniture straight, put back the bird cage and sit down to rest.

Having pulled off quite a stunt in the way of handling huge crowds it is rather interesting to learn how other nations and other communities tackle similar problems. A well known Chicago woman, who was at Cannes, France, during the famous tennis tournament when the French amateur woman champion, Suzanne Lenglen, beat our young compatriot, Helen Wills, gives a hitherto unpublished account of the way the people of Cannes handled the extra large gathering of on-lookers. It was not realized that the match would draw so many thousands of spectators until a day or two before the event, when the hordes began pouring in.

The managers of the club courts, where the tournament was to take place, hastily erected a grand stand capable of holding only a small percentage of the on-lookers. Then, fearing that this structure was too sketchily and lightly built to stand much strain and that it might collapse under the weight of the eager crowds, what do you think they did? Reinforce it? No; they sent to Paris for forty nurses and a lot of splints so that immediate care could be given any person who might be injured in a possible crash of the none too strong scaffolding.

House Owners Turn Thrifty.

This temporary set of seats was far from filling the need, so nearby householders overlooking the field in which the tennis courts lay, saw a chance to make a little money by selling seats in their windows. The houses were old and roofed with quaint and ancient tiles. When all the window seats were sold and the clamor for places for on-lookers was still unsated, the thrifty house owners put chairs in their attics and knocked the tiles off their roofs just where the sitters' heads could poke through and watch the now historic contest. It was worth the fare from Paris and return to see those roofs blossoming with heads of every nationality, style, age and set. We may be more practical than the French, but we're not half so picturesque.

Still another mode of profitably accommodating on-lookers was on the roofs of automobiles. Chauffeurs of big cars, whose owners were occupying seats on or near the tennis courts, sold footroom on the roofs of their vehicles and every limousine top was packed with standing humanity. People had to cling to each other to keep from falling off. A well dressed woman tried to climb up onto the top of a handsome car. Those already standing there told her in no mild terms that she couldn't come up. She protested that she couldn't see the match from her seat on the edge of the courts, and then added:

"And, you see, this is my car; I own it, so I think you ought to make room for me."

They did.

Chicago Notables in Paris.

Before we leave France let us take a look at some of our Chicago notabilities who seem to be making the charming French capital their abode for the present. There's that striking personality, Mme. Ganna Walska McCormick. She is reported as wearing many wonderful new jewels, especially a pair of sapphire earrings, formerly owned by some dethroned and dead royalty and for which $100,000 was asked a few months ago. She is frequently seen in gay, smart restaurants and in the Bois, and also entertains a great deal in her handsome residence.

She gathers around her a throng of many nationalities but with Poles predominating. She is studying three new operas with the idea of getting up a company and going to her native land, Poland, to present them. I wonder if the Pilsudski upheaval will change her plans. Grand opera just now in Warsaw would meet a serious rival in the revolution and counter revolution which seem to be providing all the emotional diversion that even so temperamental a people as the Poles can take in.

Another Chicagoite, one who is occasionally seen in Madame Ganna's company, is Miss Elsie McCormick. She is living in a small Paris hotel and devoting her time, attention, and purse to collecting rare and wonderful curios. What the garden is to the gardener, the chisel to the sculptor, the typewriter to the born journalist, the dice to the gambler, the rum bottle to the sot, the curiosity shop, the dealer in antiquities is to the true collector. Miss McCormick admits she doesn't know what she is going to do with these treasures she is gathering unto herself.

Her Chicago apartment on East Walton place is stocked so full of mid-Victorian, early Elizabethan, medieval Italian, and other choice objects that her friends, when they go to see her, walk warily and sit down cautiously for fear of knocking some priceless art object to perdition. Alas! she has no present intention of coming home. Chicago lacks dealers in old treasures, real antiquarians, virtuosi in this great business of accumulating the chef d'oeuvres and choice handiwork of other days and of men and women long dead, so she couldn't appease her hunger here.

Like Her Father.

Miss McCormick inherits this irresistible passion from her father, the late R. Hall McCormick, but if one may use a vulgar expression—she goes him several better. Where he delighted to pick up a choice object at a bargain, she will deprive herself of some necessity to be able to purchase some rare and desirable treasure. And she is an expert in her line. She has trained herself into a remarkable knowledge which, mated to a native instinct, makes her one of the best known, most sapient collectors in Europe today. All the professional dealers recognize her for what she is and inform her when desirable things come their way.

Personally, I'm sorry that Chicago is no longer big enough to hold her. She was one of our most unusual, marked and distinct personalities. She was universally liked and no one gave gayer, more delightful parties or was a more appreciative and attractive guest. It's a pity to lose her.

Variety Is Needed.

Interesting society is not made up only of conventional, all-cut-on-one-pattern people, but by definite, perhaps bizarre, and certainly original folk. God bless the man who has strange views of life and talks about them, or the woman who wears a dress cut on different lines and has tastes for unusual and interesting pursuits! We Americans need variety and we are still too young to have confidence in our own phases of originality.

Intense conservatism is a characteristic of the very, very young. A little boy would rather endure torture than wear a collar of a peculiar cut or a cap of a strange shape. I knew a little girl who during one whole long cold winter wore to school a woolen scarf, called a cloud, over her head instead of a neat felt hat, because that hat wasn't like the hats worn by the other little girls. With maturity come truth and freedom and the courage born of both. With years and experience we Americans may escape from the bondage of conventionality and the desire to be like our neighbors.

Opera Begins.

The Ravinia opera, which opened last night, with every seat for the first three nights sold weeks ago, starts this year with a vigor and promise exceeding even its remarkable work of last year and preceding seasons. The artists have been arriving by every train and the great organization, under Louis Eckstein's masterly guidance, with all its numerous and intricate machinery fitted into place, is already running as smoothly as if it had been going for weeks.

Mrs. Ralph Poole, who met Mlle. Bori at the train last Tuesday and took her out to the house in Highland Park that the diva is to occupy this summer, says that the fair Lucrezia is more pulchritudinous than ever. As if that were possible!

Aldis Playhouse Opens.

In the midst of princes and pageants and opera stars, that interesting band of Thespians, the Aldis players, has been working hard to prepare the three playlets to be presented three evenings

Supply All Your Needs for Vacation Apparel from these Marvelous Bargains in the Sports Section

There are many tempting model dresses greatly reduced—a $250 original Drecoll model of Beige Balbriggan, $95; while odd Coats, Dresses and Sweaters are priced astoundingly low.

Blouses, Sweaters, Ensembles —Vacation Apparel at Savings

Just the sort of Sweater, Blouse, Scarf or one of those colorful ensembles in Crepe de Chine may now be picked for about half their original prices. Many $16.50 Jersey and Silk Ensembles are now $7.50.

Women's and Misses' Suits, the Smart Vogue this Season

Never have suits been so good as they are this summer—and you may still have a season's wear from one of these suits that are so sharply reduced. There are some $95 Two and Three-piece suits as low as $55.

Apparel for the Larger Woman

It's a rare pleasure for the larger woman to find suitable styles—but when she finds them at tremendous savings, it's a greater pleasure. There are many Bargains for her in this sale.

You can get a $35 Coat today for $15; and Children's and Juniors' $16 Dresses for $7.50. Think of it! Buy the children's summer dresses and coats at these savings.

Silks Offer Marvelous Values

One of the greatest values in the Silk Section now is a $4 value for $1.85, including Crepes de Chine, Radiums, Georgettes, and Chiffons in a fine assortment of colors and styles—and remnants and all broken lines are just ½ their former price.

A Bit of Jewelry Helps the Summer Costume

And you can buy it during the Clearance Sale for almost a song. There's one reduced group, including Necklets, Necklaces, Bracelets, Rings and Pins, at 50c, $1.95, $2.95, $3.95 and $5.

Negligees Offer Rare Values

If you like pretty Breakfast Coats or elaborate Tea Gowns and Negligees, you will be delighted to find that some of them have been reduced from ⅓ to ½ their original prices.

Corsets at Great Savings

Original prices on these corsets have almost been disregarded. The reduced prices of $5, $7.50, and $10 give little indication of the exceptional values.

Lingerie Priced Ridiculously Low

Gloves, Handkerchiefs, Hosiery, Knit Underwear, Umbrellas and Handbags

You should buy a year's supply of these important accessories—the prices have been so radically reduced in these various sections. Handbags for instance, that were formerly $13.50 are now $7.50, and Glove Silk Underwear is ⅓ less than regular prices—while the bargain seeker will be well repaid if she gives a glimpse to the Handkerchief counter, the glove, the neckwear, and the hosiery sections.

Think of Buying Model Gowns for Half Price

If you appreciate exquisite styles and extraordinary values—you will find hundreds of them in this sale. Think of buying a $650 Vionnet model, a White Crepe Romaine Evening Gown for $250. Then there is a $300 Chanel Afternoon Frock for $175. Every offering is a tempting one. See them today!

News of CHICAGO SOCIETY

beginning tomorrow in that quaint, vine covered shrine of drama, the Aldis Playhouse in Lake Forest, just off Deerpath avenue. Two of the pieces are by Mrs. Arthur Aldis and one by Mrs. Graham Aldis. They are said to be clever and spirited in quality and the actors we know of old as being of the best amateur outfit ever seen in these parts.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Atkinson and Aimée Millet appear in the first play and Mrs. Laird Bell and the two Ayer sisters, Mrs. S. T. Chase and Mrs. Cecil Barnes, in the other two. The plays are "The Last Flame" and "Baubles and Beans," by Mrs. Arthur Aldis, and "Meeting," by Mrs. Graham Aldis.

Lake Forest has changed a good deal since the last Aldis play was given—was it eight years ago? New people are to the fore there. Many of the old-timers have either moved to other places or passed over to that country from whose bourne no traveler returneth. There are two of the old guard, devoted friends and admirers of the Aldis players, who will be sorely missed among the onlookers, as they are in everything connected with the friendly, united community that is Lake Forest—Hugh McBirney and Howard Shaw. At every turn we think of them. On the station platform in the morning at the eight o'clock train; on the Aldis-Atkinson-McCutcheon tennis courts of a Sunday; at the annual horse show and golf tournaments; on every occasion that brings the community together their absence is acutely felt by all who knew them. Kindly, gentle, steadfast, genial Hugh McBirney will never be forgotten; nor will Howard Shaw, graver in manner, but quietly friendly and of amazing courage (daily he overcame physical disability and bodily weariness).

It is safe to say that their places never will be filled but will be kept green by all who knew them.

The great procession keeps on moving to what goal we know not. Those who have marched shoulder to shoulder with us drop out. Others loom up alongside. On we go. One of these days we, too, will mysteriously disappear, but that knowledge sits lightly on us; in fact only a few ever think of it, so strong is the impulse to go on with the throng. But we do not forget those who were our comrades.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Mrs. Marshall Field Invades the Jungles

By Howard White.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is a far cry from one of the most palatial homes in the New York areas to the jungles of South America, but such is the course which has been selected by Mrs. Marshall Field III. A few days ago she departed with an expedition into the wilds of the southern hemisphere, where the luxury of modern society is unknown and many hardships confront those who follow dimly outlined trails through forest and swamp. She is not expected to return until September and may even then extend her visit to the land of adventure.

Members of the smart set, and especially those who are identified with the colony at Oyster Bay, near where the Fields have a magnificent estate at Lloyd's Neck, will miss the splendid entertainments given at the home when the owners are occupying it. It was only a short time ago that Mr. and Mrs. Field were hosts to the crown prince and princess of Sweden during part of their stay on Long island. Other fêtes may be held there in the fall.

Mrs. Field will take part in the explorations to be made in the little known sections of South America for the Field Museum of Chicago. The party will include Miss Grace Thompson Seton and Mr. Cherrie, who accompanied Theodore Roosevelt and Kermit Roosevelt on their trip to Turkestan.

Resorts Are Filling.

After completing the most brilliant calendar of winter and spring entertainments ever known in this city of glittering affairs, the members of the smart set are departing to the various summer resorts. Although many are going abroad, the lure of the fashionable centers in the east is stronger than ever and predictions are heard at Newport, Bar Harbor, the Adirondacks, the Berkshire hills, Southampton, Beverly, Narragansett Pier, and other spots where prominent New Yorkers enjoy recreation periods, that the influx will set new records.

At Newport the list of notables who have reopened their villas or leased accommodations is the longest since the war. There has been an enlargement/of facilities at the private bathing beaches, while the preparations for fêtes at the Clambake club and the Casino indicate that the colonists will not leave until well into September. The only shadow cast on the splendor is occasioned by the intimation that the annual horse show may not be held on the usual dates, Sept. 4, 5, and 6. This exhibition always was regarded as the climax to the Newport season.

In former years the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt and the late Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt were the prime movers in the arrangements for the horse show. Both were devotees of the tanbark and the event became one of the most attractive features for the colonists. Charles P. Williams has taken the initiative this month in seeking to prepare a program which will live up to the Newport tradition; but there are still many points to be decided upon.

Among those who have already gathered at Southampton, Long Island, are Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, who sailed into the harbor on his yacht Vagrant, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Thayer, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Mellon.

The first dinner dance and formal opening of the fashionable Maidstone club at Easthampton will take place on July 3. This is regarded as the première of the season and more than 200 dinner reservations have been made.

Bar Harbor Season Is On.

The Surf dance, which is the official welcome to summer at Bar Harbor, will take place in the Swimming club on July 3. This will be a prelude to the Fourth of July celebration and the yachting regattas for which this picturesque place on the coast of Maine is famous. Many private affairs are being held at the Pot and Kettle club, which is exclusively a men's organization. Plans under way by the Bar Harbor Yachting club call for racing twice a week, besides special contests on the ocean. Tentative plans for the annual regatta day were made last fall.

Beverly, that garden spot on the north shore of Massachusetts, was another resort to open earlier than usual to offer gala greetings to the crown prince and princess of Sweden. The rose show of the North Shore Horticultural society this week proved a colorful exhibition, and Mrs. William H. Moore, Mrs. J. Henry Lancashier, and Mrs. E. Palmer Gavit of the New York colony were among those offering trophies.

The social program in the various resorts in the Adirondacks will be influenced by the projected stay of the President and Mrs. Coolidge at Camp White Pine on Osgood lake. They will arrive early next month. Already there is a large camp and cottage colony assembling on the shores of the lakes in Paul Smith park, which is nearby.

Stokes-Holcombe Nuptials.

A picturesque wedding at the beginning of the early season at Newport was the recent one of Mrs. Margaret Fahnestock Stokes, daughter of Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock and the divorced wife of Sylvanius Stokes Jr., of Washington, to Lieut. Benjamin Holcombe, U. S. N. It was somewhat of a surprise, and there were no attendants. The ceremony was performed at Gull Rock, the Shaw villa, which has been leased by the bride, by Commander George H. Rentz, chaplain of the United States navy. The bridegroom, Lieut. Holcombe, is junior naval aid to President Coolidge.

Theodore Douglas Robinson, assistant secretary of the navy and uncle of the bridegroom, was best man. There were about twenty present at the wedding, and among them were Mrs. Herbert Shipman, Mrs. Anita De Braganza, Allan G. Wellman, Sidnay Ripley and Edgar Allan Poe.

A slight automobile crash marked the departure of Lieut. and Mrs. Holcombe on the wedding tour when the car in which they were riding was struck by an auto belonging to Mrs. Peter B. Widener of Philadelphia. Mrs. Widener was not in the car at the time. Outside of stirring a little dust, in place of rice, no damage occurred and the couple continued on their journey more joyous than before over their escape.

Anne Morgan's Cousin to Wed.

A prominent summer wedding will take place in a short time when Miss Anne Huntington Tracy, a cousin of Miss Anne Morgan and daughter of Mrs. Charles Edward Tracy of 21 Gramercy park, becomes the bride of Prince Simon Constantine Sidmon-Eristoff, former colonel of artillery in the imperial army of Russia. The ceremony will be at the summer house of Mrs. Tracy at Highland Falls, N. Y. The engagement of Miss Tracy and the prince was announced recently.

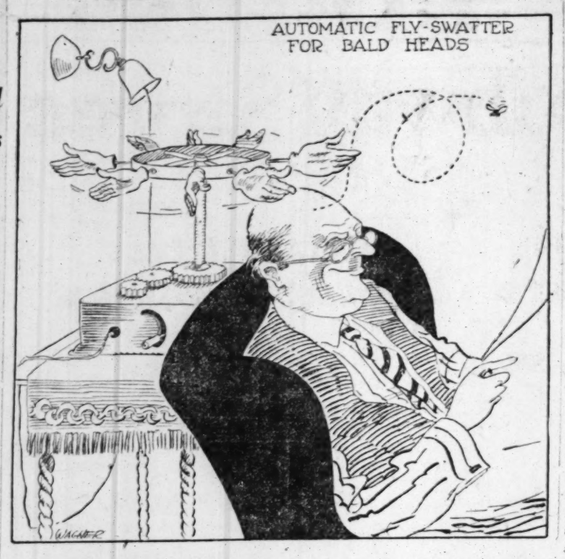
Prince Simon came to this country a revolutionary refugee, five years ago. His home was at Tiflis, Ga. After being here a year he took a degree at Johns Hopkins university, and since has been an engineer for an oil company.

He was graduated from the general staff war college, St. Petersburg, and entered the war in the service of the late czar. During the period when Georgia maintained its independence after the revolution, Prince Simon was attached to the staff of that country. Later he was taken to Constantinople aboard a United States destroyer and from there came to America. With him came his brothers, Princes Pierre and Dimitri.

Miss Tracy, a granddaughter of John Bigelow, went to France with the Red Cross in 1918, and later worked in the historical section of headquarters there, returning to New York in the summer of 1919. In 1921 she went to France again to work in the devastated regions with the American Committee for Devastated France, of which her cousin, Miss Morgan, was the head.

Miss Tracy is secretary of the Shepherd Dog club, and is an authority on police dogs.

NEEDED INVENTIONS



Notes of Art and Artists

The graduating exercises of the Art School of the Art institute were held Friday afternoon, June 18, in the Kenneth Sawyer Goodman Memorial theater. Dr. Charles W. Gilkey gave the address with the subject title: "The Influence of Atmosphere."

Hiram Powers Dilworth, the Art institute poet-guard, whose recently published booklet of memorial sonnets was a graceful acknowledgement to the beauty and loneliness of death, is a pianist as well. A notice of a recital by his pupils, given in Glen Ellyn some ten days or so ago, was a leaf of news left on my desk. It is not often that one man pursues three careers and finds success in each.

The Chicago Society of Artists is settled for the summer months with an exhibition gallery in the Food Crafts shops, room 908, 616 South Michigan avenue. The pictures will remain on view until the first of September and will undoubtedly attract many interested visitors. There is food for speculation in this exhibit, and, although it raises doubts, one or two minimized "pretty" paintings make up for a number of odd creations.

The Field museum, as well as the Art institute and the Municipal pier, arranged events in honor of the Eucharistic congress. The Field museum had an interesting display of items concerned and connected with Christianity in China. Among the objects exhibited are a group of wood cuts illustrating Chinese books on our religion, a Chinese madonna, and, more interesting from a historical standpoint, a rubbing of the Nestorian inscription in Si-an-fu, the capital of the Shensi province, dating back to 781 A. D. and affording the first record of the introduction of Christianity into China.

Anthony Angarela has engaged himself to the task of instructor in the school of the Kansas City Art institute for next winter. The school opens Oct. 1. During the summer this talented young painter, a modern who still retains the use of common-sense in excited moments, will continue his classes in his Chicago studio at 617 Rush street.

The Fort Dearborn Camera club announces an exhibit of photographs from the Seattle Camera club at Seattle, Wash.

More than eighty new paintings by Nicholas Roerich, completed and sent back from Asia, are hung in the new Helena Roerich wing of the Roerich museum in New York. Nicholas Roerich was best known to us here as a painter of opera stage settings, but since the founding of his New York institute, that and not his former career has become the significant feature of his artistic life.

In the Chicago public library there is at present a striking collection of travel posters on view.

ART AND ARTISTS

Institute Hopes to Own Buddhist Stele

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

ALL kinds of art make up the art of the world. Civilizations differ in their art as in their religion, though possibly the basic element in each and in all nations and at all times is the same—the hunger to worship. Art is worship made visible. Particularly is this true of elemental art, just as it is true of elemental nature. The Egyptians dealt in pyramids, the Chinese in stela, the Catholics in cathedrals—structure and worship, labor and reverence, that was the law.

The Art institute has been interested for some weeks in securing through purchase a remarkable Chinese Buddhist votive stele. It is dated 551 A. D. and to the uninformed eye looks like nothing in the world but a huge block of gray stone inscribed and decorated with raised figures and Chinese characters. It is something like a gigantic wedge, austere and cold, and eminently material. To those who understand the subtlety of oriental sculpture there is a story of religious devotion to be read into each division of the engraving.

Explaining It.

Osvald Siren, in the first volume of his work on Chinese art, gives an illuminating paragraph about this stele. It runs practically as follows: It (the stele) is divided, above the high inscribed plinth, into four horizontal sections of niches. The broad flat niche in the lowest section is framed by tasseled draperies and surmounted by a stupa. It contains a seated Buddha and on each side of him four figures, three standing and one seated, on lotus pedestals.

Then, dealing with another niche, this imaginative phrase is dropped like a pearl—"the seven Buddhas of the past." They, unfortunately, poor creatures, judged from their place in time, are put in the background. Two monumental coiling dragons form the top of the stele. The plinth is covered by a long inscription with the date: Ta Tung, 17th year; 7th month, 23d day. In our numerals, A. D. 551, Sept. 8.

The stele is of gray limestone and the height of it is eleven feet. It weighs some monstrous weight, running into tons. It was so heavy that the cost to the Art institute of lifting it over the wall and setting it in place was $200. It belongs to the collection of a noted Chinaman, C. T. Loo, and has, before this, been exhibited in the Musée Cernuschi in Paris.

Valued at $28,000.

The stele is valued at $28,000. The Boston museum, our earnest competitor, possesses two steles, neither of them more distinctive than this. It is urging our purchase of this one. It covers in a splendid and adequate way a period of art not as yet represented in the institute. It would be a lodestar to savants and students of the oriental. The curator of oriental art in the museum, Charles Fabens Kelly, is eager for its acquisition. Perhaps, hope beats strongly in breasts devoted to matters æsthetic, the institute will be helped towards the purchasing of this Chinese devotional pillar.

"Buddhist Votive Stele," on exhibition in the court galleries in Hutchinson wing of the Art institute. This mighty column weighs three tons, is eleven feet high, and is valued at $28,000. The oriental department of the museum is particularly anxious to add its interesting bulk to the permanent collections of the Art institute.

Some Hungarian Etchings.

In the print galleries of the Art institute there is at present a remarkable exhibition of etchings by contemporary Hungarian artists. The barren splendor of that war swept land is graphically revealed and the romance of its hills and plains, alive with gypsy wanderings and songs, is also revealed. There is an almost brutal strength in some of the prints, and others are as gentle and soothing and exquisitely lovely as the caress of a soft, warm hand.

There are two remarkable etchings from a series on the fates of Job that make as ghastly food for thought as one might well wish for. The torments of the poor man were legion and the artist has not spared one line of pain, nor one twitch of exasperated itching. The discomforts of the flesh have rarely been more convincingly shown. It makes one think life not worth living under some circumstances.

But, to refresh you, there are a few pastoral scenes. In particular there is a tranquil and contented moment stolen by a young shepherd lad from his duties. He sits on a hillside, his dog near him, and about the pair there is an atmosphere of absolute comradeship and sympathy. The clear air from the hills blows singing through the little print.

And there are others that take bucolic pleasures and leisures for their theme. Possibly these quiet pages from everyday life are more impressive and effective than the few grandiose, in part, etchings, such as "Ecco Homo." At all events it is with the little prints that we can live; the others are too restless company.

Among the artists represented in the exhibit are Janos Kmetty, Josef Sandor, Nandor Varga, Gyula Conrad, Istram Zador, Kafoly Patko, Victor Erdei, Jeno Sankovits, and Gara Arnold.

Notes of Art and Artists.

The Alumni association of the Art Institute gave a reception to the graduating class of 1926 in the Inness room of the Art institute Tuesday, June 8.

The attendance at the Art institute for the month of May was 67,089, which was an increase of 5,713 over April. In May of last year the attendance was 65,348. For the first five months of the current year the total attendance has been 332,399 as against 327,521 for the same period last year, a gain of 4,878. The number of visitors entering the museum is much greater during the months of July, August and September, due to the great number of excursionists and transients passing through the city.

The repertory company of the Goodman theater of the Art institute is planning to give dramatic performances for a month or six weeks at the Garden theater in St. Louis. The first play given will be "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Whitford Kane, who made such an ideal Bottom when that drama was given here, will play the part in St. Louis. Among the other members of the company are Carl Reid and Russell Collins of the Cleveland Playhouse and R. Ide Payne of the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moment, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Hardly.

A few years ago I was visiting a church in a small southern town and when the organ began to play I at once recognized my favorite hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers." I knew every word by memory and when the choir began to sing I started with them and sang every word to a grand finish!

All at once I noticed that everybody was looking at me and I realized I was the only one in the audience that had sung.

Can you imagine a more embarrassing moment? K. W.

Not So Funny.

I had a new Paris hat, a simple tailored thing that somehow is not imitated over here. And yet, sitting across from me at luncheon was one just like it.

I stood it as long as I could and then leaned across the table to share my surprise. "Isn't it funny?" I said.

The only response was a bewildered look. I tried again.

"Isn't it funny, our having the same kind of hat?" And only then I remembered I had worn another hat that day, an old one with large red cherries. M. C. W.

Making an Impression.

Several years ago there was a charming Miss Miller to whom I was attracted. After several attempts to meet her formally the important and successful occasion came. It was midsummer, and I was helping to direct a boys' camp. On visitors' day among others who came was Miss Miller. The camp director had been taken into my confidence and he was to properly introduce me to the one who had so completely won my affections.

When the visitors arrived I was in my tent putting on the final finishing touches so I might look my best. My best included a snow white outfit, including newly laundered white duck trousers.

I was called from my tent for the introduction. I duly met Miss Miller and by instinct I put my hands into my pockets and rather gracefully backed off a pace. In backing I struck a small stump hidden in the tall grass and, with both hands in my pockets, I fell helpless on my back.

The worst of it was I could scarcely get up, and poor Miss Miller, on whom I was anxious to make a good impression, stood there wondering what to do. The slight rain the evening before did not help my appearance.

In my embarrassment I hurried to the tent and could not face her again.

My friend, the camp director, later said, "You wanted to make an impression on Miss Miller, but I guess you made your impression on the ground, instead." J. E. H.

Surprised.

Mabel told me she and Sam were married, and as Sam was quite a celebrity, I thought her a lucky girl.

Two years later I met Sam and he introduced his wife. I extended my hand and said: "I've met your wife before," only to look into the eyes of a stranger, and not Mabel whom I'd expected to greet. I stammered my apologies, while I felt my face turn every color of the rainbow. But I'm still puzzled as to whether Mabel told me the truth, and whether Sam had visited the Paris divorce courts recently. L. N.

Intended for the Messenger.

My most embarrassing moment happened to me the other day. A customer of our company from out of town was here on business and had asked me if I would get a telegram off for him, which I did. After finishing writing the telegram I gave it to Mr. S. to read, who, in return, gave me a quarter with the telegram.

I, thinking he was handing it to me for getting the telegram out, said: "O, no; thank you just the same."

He in reply said: "Give it to the messenger, please."

Was I embarrassed, AND HOW.
A. L. S.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Lutherans Unite in Patriotic Meeting

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

LUTHERANS will celebrate the sesquicentennial of American independence today at 3 o'clock at the stadium in Soldiers' field. A mixed chorus of 1,200, directed by Prof. J. G. Schmid; a male chorus of 600, led by L. Luecker, and a children's chorus of 2,500, directed by Prof. M. Singer, will constitute musical features. A flag drill by 1,500 from the day schools of the church, under the direction of J. Zitzmann and E. L. Marquardt, will be given. "The Star Spangled Banner" will be pantomimed by 800 girls, led by A. Nottke.

Addresses will be given on "The Declaration of Independence and its Time" by Prof. Martin Graebner of Milwaukee and "Lutheran Patriotic Activities," by Paul T. Buszin. The Rev. H. C. Steinhoff will offer "A Prayer of Thanks for Past Protection, Liberty and Freedom." The Rev. O. A. Geismann will offer "A Prayer for Future Protection, Liberty and Freedom."

A united band, under the leadership of H. C. Landeck, conductor, will play. Among the selections to be rendered at times during the program will be "My Own United States," "Our Flag the Best of All," "O Land of Hope and Freedom," and "When the Flag Goes By." The celebration will be held under the auspices of the American Luther League of the Missouri Synod Lutheran church. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited. An estimated attendance of 50,000 Lutherans is expected.

The Katherine Kreigh Budd Memorial home near Libertyville, Ill., together with 200 acres of land for the Episcopal St. Mary's home for children under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary, will be dedicated today at 4 o'clock by Bishop S. M. Griswold assisted by Bishop Ivins and others. The memorial is given by Britton I. Budd in the name of his wife. There are 15 buildings on the grounds. It is one of the most valuable and important gifts ever presented to the Episcopal or any other church. The 100 children of St. Mary's home left Chicago yesterday to be present today at the dedication.

A concert broadcast by WENR will be given from 2 to 3 today by the choir of the Julia Gay Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, West Garfield boulevard and South Paulina street. The concert will be repeated at 7:45 p. m. at the church.

REV. WALTER A. MORGAN, D. D.

The Rev. Walter A. Morgan, D. D., is pastor of the New First Congregational church, Washington and Ashland boulevards. The honorary degree of doctor of divinity was conferred on him last Tuesday by his alma mater, Dartmouth college. The honor is regarded as of special significance as having been bestowed so soon after his graduation in the class of 1911. Dr. Morgan came to Chicago last March from the pastorate of Mount Pleasant Congregational church, Washington, D. C., where he served eight years. His only previous pastorate was in Dover, N. H., a church founded in 1633. The New First church has a commanding church property, and one of the most notable of a group of five choirs in Chicago. The erection of a new organ, one of the largest and most expensive in any church, has been announced. Dr. Morgan will preach in his home church today. He will be given a reception and testimonial by his congregation in recognition of his return with honors.

The Belden Avenue Baptist church, North Halsted street and Belden avenue, Dr. J. W. Hoyt, pastor, will dedicate today at 10:30 a. m. and 3 p. m. the former Wesley Methodist Episcopal church, 2229 North Halsted street, which has been purchased by the Belden avenue Baptist church and refitted for Sunday school and social purposes. The former Methodist church is now to be called the Belden Avenue Baptist Church Annex. It is located just a half block south of the Baptist church. The Methodist congregation merged with the Diversey Boulevard church which is now called the New Wesley. At the 3 o'clock service today Dr. P. W. Philpott, pastor of Moody Memorial church, will preach. Dr. Hoyt will preach in the morning in the annex and in the evening at the Belden Avenue Baptist church.

The Episcopal clergy's round table will hold its final session until fall tomorrow morning at St. Luke's church, Evanston. The Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot, rector of the Church of Our Saviour, and the Rev. Charles L. Street, Episcopal chaplain of the University of Chicago, will be the speakers. The subject of Chaplain Street's address will be "The Modern University and the Church's Faith."

A summer religious conference under Episcopal auspices will begin Tuesday and continue to July 9 at Racine college, Wis. Clergy and students from the middle west will attend. The Rev. G. G. Moore, rector of the Church of the Advent, Chicago, will be general chairman. Among other Chicago clergymen who will direct classes or lecture are: The Rev. Harold L. Bowen, St. Peter's; the Rev. Austin Pardue, Lawrence hall; the Rev. A. Haire Forster, Western Theological seminary; the Rev. D. A. McGregor, Glen Ellyn; the Rev. Howard R. Brinker, St. Bartholomew's; the Rev. Henry Neal Hyde, St. Paul's-by-the-Lake; Chaplain Charles L. Street and the Rev. E. J. Randall, diocesan secretary.

The Rev. C. C. Cox, pastor of the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and South Marshfield avenue, who has been granted a two months vacation in Europe with expenses paid by the church, will be given a farewell service today. Under his leadership the church has increased from 42 to 1,200 members and the property to a valuation from $25,000 to $150,000.

The schools of missions under the auspices of the interdenominational committee of the central west for missions will begin its sessions tomorrow at Lake Geneva, Wis., to continue to July 5. The central themes will be: "The Rural Church in America and the Moslem World." The school will be for women and young women and a kindergarten will be in session for the care of little children so mothers can attend the classes. All the special speakers and leaders are women except Bishop Spreng, Dr. Mathew F. Smith, Dr. Cleland B. McAfee and Dr. John Van Ess.

Presbyterian field workers from all sections of the country will attend a training conference at the Sheridan-Plaza hotel beginning Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and closing Thursday evening. Dr. James H. Speer, New York, associate secretary for the Presbyterian council, who issued the call, will be associated in conducting the conference with Dr. Henry C. Swearingen of St. Paul, chairman of the committee on program and field activities. Other leaders who will participate in the conference will be: Dr. John A. Marquis, New York, and Dr. J. A. Vance, Detroit, national missions, Dr. William Chalmers Covert, Philadelphia, Christian education, Dr. Robert E. Speer, foreign missions, and Dr. Lewis E. Mudge, stated clerk of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church.

The thirty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal church, Kenmore and Berwyn avenues, will be celebrated today in religious services and next Wednesday evening in a home coming social. The Rev. F. D. Sheets, a former pastor, will preach this morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. J. Hastie Odgers, district superintendent; the Rev. George MacAdam, the Rev. H. V. Holt, former pastors, and the Rev. G. K. Flack, under whose pastorate the church was built, will speak. The Rev. C. Claud Travis, the present pastor, will be in charge.

The Rev. A. F. Lopes, who came as a delegate to the Eucharistic congress from Madras, India, is remaining here to raise funds for the building of a young men's home or hostel in the city from which he comes. He is making headquarters at the Hotel La Salle and is furnished with many documents showing he has full episcopal authority to prosecute his mission. Madras, like all the cities of India, is woefully lacking in facilities for students and young men in employment. The Y. M. C. A. is an active agent in providing for the need, but Catholics are forbidden to room in Y. M. C. A. hotels.

The Rt. Rev. Irving P. Johnson, Episcopal bishop of Colorado, will ordain to the priesthood at 11 o'clock today in the Church of Our Saviour, 530 Fullerton parkway, the Rev. Charles Daniel Evans. Father Evans supervises the work of the church school and St. George's mission at the church. He is from Nashotah house.

Stop That Disease-carrying Fly

Headed toward Your Home

It menaces you and your loved ones

75c

For either the pint can or bottle as shown. Quart, $1.25. Gallon, $4.00.

Flies are dangerous. They live in dirt, garbage, sewage. From this distant filth they come to your dining-room table . . . And there deposit deadly germs of typhoid, diphtheria, tuberculosis and many other death-sicknesses. It is a disgrace to have flies in your home.

Great plagues and epidemics have been caused by disease-carrying flies and mosquitoes. Now modern science comes to the rescue. Venom—the most powerful insecticide known—will rid you of all flies, mosquitoes, moths, ants, roaches, their eggs and larvae.

VENOM-ize Today and Every Day

A recently Venom-ized room will keep flies and mosquitoes away. Therefore, it is imperative that the home be Venom-ized every day. You cannot start too soon. Two flies at the beginning of the season are capable of having 5,598,720,000,000 descendants by September. Think of it! Venom is powerful—yet it is absolutely harmless to children and household pets.

Your grocer, druggist or hardware store has Venom. Buy it from him in a pint bottle or can with a handy spray. You'll find it does not spot or stain the most delicate fabric.

FOUR SELLING POSITIONS

for College Trained Men.

A nationally known organization has four Illinois territories which will be filled by university men. They must be around thirty years of age. Previous sales experience will be an asset but is not as important as a real liking for sales work, belief in ability to sell, and willingness to pay for success by hard work.

One opening is in Chicago, one northern Illinois, outside Chicago, one central Illinois, and one which includes Evansville, southern Illinois, and southern Indiana.

The men we accept will be given preliminary training and field training. All co-operation will be extended in the way of leads, coaching, and field help to insure their success. Their earnings should range around $4,000 to $6,000 the first year, and every opportunity exists for growth in earnings and accomplishment. Compensation is on a commission basis, with a drawing account to aid in starting.

The organization is a national advertiser with seventeen years of good will built up. Sales are made only to business executives and their assistants, and the applicants must have no fear of facing the business men on his own ground. If you feel that you can qualify, write a full letter. It will be treated in strict confidence. Preliminary negotiations will be conducted by mail and a personal interview arranged for if your application indicates that you have the requisite qualifications. Address A B 549 Tribune.

MEN WANTED WITHOUT EXPERIENCE,

All we are attempting to do in this ad is to interest you sufficiently to investigate.

Now I'll tell you what I'll do when you come in. I don't promise that you'll make a fortune every week, but I do promise that if you follow my instructions you will work yourself into the best position you ever held in your life.

Remember, I am going to talk to you personally and show you what other men like yourself, who came to us without experience, are doing.

See me personally.

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR HOSIERY SALESMAN.

[NOT HOUSE-TO-HOUSE.]

One of the leading and fastest growing hosiery mills in this country, making a complete nationally advertised line for men, women, and children, wants an outstanding representative to work Illinois territory, selling to retailers only. They have a substantial business already established in this territory, with a normal yearly earning of from $8,000 to $10,000 for the salesman, which can be greatly increased by a salesman of vision, energy, and ability to co-operate with an unusual program of expansion. Interested only in a man of proven character and ability. Address A D 41, Tribune.

WANTED—AMBITIOUS INEXPERIENCED MEN.

One hesitates to enter a new calling because he lacks a thorough knowledge of that business. Naturally, where years of study and training are required, such a step would be unwarranted and probably disastrous.

Our business, however, is different. YOU DON'T NEED ANY INITIAL EXPERIENCE. Practically all of our sales persons came to us without experience. THEY ARE MAKING MONEY. YOU CAN DO AS WELL. We don't say that you can make a fortune at once but we can assure you that if you are ambitious, willing to hustle, and take your work seriously, you can easily double or treble your regular income.

We are selling choicely located low priced property in the newly built up Gold Coast residential district of Hammond, a safe, sound and profitable investment with a minimum of sales resistance.

Come in and talk it over with me. I can convince you that this is an extraordinary opportunity. Your success depends entirely upon yourself.

See Me Personally.

J. D. PHILLIPS, Director of Sales (SOUTH SIDE DIVISION). A. A. LEWIS REALTY ASSOCIATION, R. 816, 77 W. Washington-st.

Would probably show preference to man who has had experience as Secretary-Stenographer to a sales manager. Letter should state age, education, experience, if any, kind of work you have done and are doing, and character of business connection you have had, should give all such information as you believe will enable us to judge your capabilities. Names of references not necessary in application. All letters will be held confidential and rejected applications will be returned if stamped envelope is inclosed.

APRIL DAY

By FRANK R. ADAMS

"What she's worrying about is how many fans will write to her, telling her how devastating she is."

A Story of Hollywood; of Naomi Stanley, the Queen of the Screen, and of One Obscure Stella O'Dea, Who Was Simply Pitchforked Into the Movies

THE way April Day got into the movies was through Naomi Stanley. Lest this start a perfect avalanche of letters toward the beautiful and famous Miss Stanley asking her to do likewise for other ambitious, but as yet unknown, aspirants, it must be hastily said that Naomi had no intention of doing it, and certainly would never let it happen again, at least not in that way.

In the first place Miss Stanley had been disappointed in love. This was the seventh time since her marriage, so it was all the more poignant.

By naming the magic number seven we are only counting the major campaigns. There had been perhaps a hundred minor engagements, as was to be expected of a woman who had been voted the most popular exponent of cinema art in the world. (The vote had been taken by a fan magazine owned by Mr. Naomi Stanley, whose unmarried name, as you probably know, is Herman Glick.)

Lest there be any misapprehension, it is well to state right here that Naomi had not been disappointed in Mr. Glick's love, at least not this time. Nor for six or seven times back. Herman was her manager, her publicity director, and various and sundry things like that, but he had long since ceased to figure in her emotional adventures. He printed her portrait on the cover of Silversheet once a year and several of her photographs every month on the inside pages, managed and distributed her two or three annual productions, posed with her for an occasional group picture of one of the really happy families of Hollywood, but aside from that their lives were a couple of parallel lines that never did what parallel lines don't do, even at breakfast.

So that lets Herman out. Herman was bald, anyway, and his conversation ran to percentages, which made him practically a total loss on a moonlight night with an orchestra playing in the distance.

It isn't really material who it was that had reduced Naomi to tears, temperament and tantrums, but in order not to leave any loose ends lying about in this narrative it can be stated here that Herbert K. Noble, the millionaire extra, caused all the trouble by rushing Naomi off her feet for three consecutive Glyn weeks and then shifting without explanation to Allis Armand, recently Sennetter from Missouri and now playing flapper wives with Monte Blue, Lewis Stone and all the other safe and sane husbands of the screen. There isn't any way to account for the behavior of Herb Noble unless, perhaps, one carefully compares the ankles of Naomi and Allis. Allis has two of the above mentioned assets, either one of which would have been powerful enough medicine to restore the eyesight of Samson after Deliliah gave him the Ina Claire devitalizer, while Naomi could stand alongside of an old fashioned concert grand piano and you would think it had five legs.

The essential thing to this story is that Naomi's romance went sour, so to speak, and she had gone to bed with an attack of some kind of an "osis" that only a New York specialist could diagnose and which was a lot more expensive to cure than just plain consumption, or smallpox.

Herman surrounded her with every attention that money could buy. This may sound as if he were foolish, but maybe not so. It isn't every man who has a wife whose galloping photographs gross around a half million apiece. You can afford hand picked oats for a Derby winner.

She had two nurses, a night one who was appropriately brunette, and a day one who was unobtrusively bronze. This latter had been named by her parents Stella O'Dea and she was a nice capable young woman who had never had time to do much work in front of a mirror. For that reason she wore her hair straight back under her cap and advertised her ears, and everything. She had a nice clean look, but there was no romantic mystery about her. People loaded hard jobs on her and never asked if she could handle 'em. They knew she could.

In the sickroom Stella was a balloon tire among nurses. Everything smoothed out before her. Even Naomi Stanley liked her and goodness, and likewise Hollywood, knows it is difficult for any woman to please Naomi.

Stella O'Dea looked like the kind of a girl that men forget. But she could do tricks with rumpled pillows, hot water bottles, and non-beverage rubbing alcohol that, had she been there, would have been a great comfort to Job when he got through with his initiation into the Ancient and Honorable Order of Poison Oak and Ivy.

No matter how unreasonable her patient might be, and Naomi Stanley could be just as unreasonable as a Siberian wild cat just before lunch, Stella could always soothe her.

Naomi wasn't so sick but that she required to be amused, and what do you suppose she wanted in the way of entertainment? The answer is easy if you know what baseball players do on their days off, or how miners who live in the vicinity of Newcastle spend their holidays.

You have guessed it. Naomi Stanley had a motion picture projection machine installed in her bedroom with a sheet at a convenient angle so that she could look at it without craning her neck and then ran all the best photoplays that had come out during the last year. When she had seen the entire list of her own pictures she had to use some others not quite so good. Her choice of stars to fill second place in her private popularity contest lit unexpectedly upon Ernest Hamilton.

Strangely enough that young man, whose engaging smile and startled eyebrows are almost as familiar to the public as Whatsit Soap, was practically unknown to Naomi. For one thing she had always scorned comedies and for another, after having met him socially, which had happened recently, he had struck her as being insipid. So she was finding out for the first time what everybody in the United States knew already, that Ernest Hamilton's shy engaging manner was not stupidity, but rather the incarnation of boyish charm.

"My dear," she told the patient Stella, who was running the machine, "this boy has got IT."

"I don't think I know what you mean." Perhaps Stella did really know. Anyway, she was always asking prodding little questions that stimulated Naomi into thinking about something besides herself.

"Well, in the motion picture business IT is the word for a mysterious something that a performer has to have to be a big success. Just knowing how to act isn't enough. You've got to have this something else in order to break into the big money. Now I've got it myself," she illustrated modestly, "although I can't tell you what it is. I've heard people call it personality, and others say it is sex appeal. Someway, I don't think it's exactly either. Valentino and Zasu Pitts have it in about an equal degree, and they are the two most unlike personalities on the screen—unlike except for the possession of that curious quality we're talking about.

"Ernest Hamilton has the same kind of a kick that Zasu Pitts has—you can tell by looking at his smile that he is tuned in on what's going on in the heart of the world."

Whatever else may have been in Naomi Stanley's head, there certainly was an acute understanding of her business. When she got to talking shop she was fascinating, even to one of her own sex. Stella hung on her words.

"But this woman who is playing leads with him," continued Naomi, "she's an error in judgment on somebody's part. He shouldn't have a vamp like that working opposite him. What he needs is a woman who can look at him as if her heart was in her throat for fear he'd melt or something, not a bathing beauty constantly conscious that she would be all undressed if one button came off."

LATER in the evening when Herman came into the sickroom for orders she spoke of him again.

"Do you suppose you could get Ernest Hamilton to play the lead in my next picture?" she asked.

Herman was in the habit of being expected to do unordinary things. He ordinarily accomplished them. But this made him laugh. "Listen, dear; don't you know that Ernie is a comedian? You don't want people laughing at you."

"They wouldn't laugh," his wife opposed coldly, "not unless we wanted them to. That boy can play any kind of a part that anybody can."

"Well, he is out of the question anyway, dear. He has just organized his own company and you couldn't hire him to play leads for anybody else. Now, if you want to work with him you might get a job in his company and——"

"Don't be absurd."

But Naomi did not entirely give up thinking of the proposition. She thought how much good it would do young Ernest to be associated with an artist like herself for a while. At least she thought she thought that. At any rate, her mind kept recurring to the memory of his ingratiating smile.

"I wish," she said in dismissing her husband, a regal ceremonial performed every evening after they had meticulously gone over all the subjects in which they had a common interest, which took about twenty minutes, "I wish that you would have your secretary call up Ernest Hamilton tomorrow and ask him to come and see me."

"All right, I'll do that little thing." Herman was relieved that she had not told him to summon John D. Rockefeller.

Ernest Hamilton would probably come if he invited him, at that. Almost anybody in the motion picture world was glad to do a favor for a man of Herman Glick's displacement. He controlled too many printed pages, too many million feet of film, and too many first run theaters to be ignored by anybody in the industry. So Ernest Hamilton came the next afternoon to the great half timbered Beverly Hills home of the Glicks. Shakespeare might have lived there, or Mr. Johnson, or Dickens, or Fielding, or all of them, it was large enough, but instead it housed the most popular woman star in the world (see "Silversheet" for May 1924), who had never read any of the works of the above mentioned gentlemen.

Ernest was slightly puzzled and embarrassed at having been sent for by the queen of the principality in which he regarded himself as simply an industrious worker.

He sat uneasily at the bedside of the famous actress. If he had not left his hat in the hall downstairs he would have twisted it in his hands.

Naomi laughed at him slyly. "Why, you are not an actor at all. All you do in your pictures is to be natural."

Ernest grinned. "Gee, don't let anybody else know that, will you? If my manager should get wise to the fact that anybody could do my stuff, where would I be?"

Naomi wasn't sure whether or not he was teasing her. Such colossal lack of conceit was incredible in the motion picture business. But later in the course of their conversation, after the shyness wore off, Naomi became convinced that his modesty was not assumed. He was eager to take suggestions from her. She smiled to herself as she planted the seed that would nurture into a bloom that would refute her husband's conviction that Ernest Hamilton would not be the leading man in her next picture.

"I am not quite satisfied with the way your director casts your supporting company," she offered in all friendliness. "Or is Miss Rawlins your own choice for a leading lady? One never can——"

"O, no," Ernest hastened to interrupt. "Jerry Rawlins is just a good scout. She has only stayed with me so long because I was afraid to try it without her. There are half a dozen producers that want her for vamp parts, and I've promised to get some one to take her place as soon as possible."

"I should like to see you work with a girl of an entirely different type," Naomi suggested. "We were talking about it just the other day, weren't we, Stella?"

Stella, who had been sitting in rapt but unnoticed attention, started from her abstraction.

"Yes, ma'am."

"Stella is my nurse," Naomi explained.

"O, yeah," Ernest admitted to the introduction. "How do you do? It must be awfully interesting being a nurse. I was in a hospital once——"

But Naomi didn't let him stray from the subject she chose.

Next Sunday's Short Story

A Grain of Mustard Seed

He was a "worthless young hound," this Lorrison Gill, possessed with an inheritance of seven devils. Possessed, that is to say, until the miracle of a girl's faith moved mountains. From the first word to the last there's drama in this story

Lake Michigan's sands this summer. Let her cooling waters envelop and invigorate you. Dive . . . swim . . . bask in the sun to your heart's content. But for comfort's sake, do it in a Bradley. Let every member of your family do likewise.

A Bradley means body-joy the moment you slip into it. The comfort of wool; warm when dry, quick-drying when wet. The swimming and beach-play freedom of suits that fit, that are all-over snug, that give but do not stretch, bind, sag, nor shrink. Then, too, the wearing qualities and economy of suits reinforced where strain comes; that are durable, fast-colored—sun-proof and run-proof.

Such are a few of the multi-features which, with originality of design, advanced style and reasonable price, have been knitted into these premier water costumes by Bradley specialists.

So be ready for the lure of the lake. Blossom out in a Bradley. Never were styles for men, women and children more intriguing. Never were colors and color combinations more resplendent. And, as usual, Bradley leads. Go to your nearest Bradley dealer and see the stunning 1926 models. At once—before the stocks are depleted.

Another interesting Bradley group. The man's suit in a two-color vertical stripe Blazer design is distinctive to say the least. Trunks of plain color rib fabric. The next figure shown is in a sport model racing suit. Arm holes cut very low with two one-inch straps below arm pit. Seated, is a nymph in a Bradley Coast model with skirt and trunks in contrasting colors

Another view of Bradley's latest creation, the Leopard Spot Bathing Suit. Daringly different but in excellent taste. All-over polka dot jacquard design. Round neck and arm holes piped in contrasting colors. This Bradley creation has already found enthusiastic acceptance in Southern watering places

CROSSED WIRES BY John T. McCutcheon

THE STORY SO FAR:

A WEALTHY American family, the Craytons, meet a worthless Frenchman, Pierre de Barsac, in Paris. He tries to win Virginia, the daughter. The mother favors him because he calls himself a count, but Mr. Crayton is suspicious. He arranges to have a young American, Rasher, accompany them back to America. Virginia becomes interested in Rasher, but is shocked to learn he has been a truck driver. Her father hires him as a chauffeur. In New York Virginia invites de Barsac to accompany them on the motor trip home. Rasher's real name is Bacon, and he is extremely rich. The trip begins with Rasher driving. They are held up by three men. Rasher is wounded trying to protect Virginia. She visits him at a hospital and finds she loves him. Looking out the hospital window, she sees de Barsac walking with her maid, Celeste. Rasher tells her the pair are old friends. Mrs. Crayton wants to move on and leave Rasher in the hospital, but Virginia refuses to go until Rasher recovers. A chauffeur arrives by airplane, summoned by Rasher to take his place. But de Barsac urges against Mrs. Crayton's desire to go when he finds Virginia will not leave Rasher. In despair, Mrs. Crayton summons Mr. Crayton to the scene. Her husband, arriving, is delighted to learn that Virginia is slighting the count. One of his big business deals is threatened with disaster and, to drive the count away, he pretends to have lost his fortune

INSTALLMENT XXII.

Mr. Crayton Visits Rasher.

MR. CRAYTON, having dropped a bombshell at the feet of his wife and Count de Barsac, paused long enough to enjoy the effect and then, seizing Virginia's arm, he marched her briskly out of the hotel.

"Well, father, you certainly spilled a lot of beans that time," remarked Virginia. "I wish I could have stayed to hear mother try to laugh that off."

"Your mother," he observed cheerfully, "is a most estimable woman most of the time, Ginny, but just now she is obsessed with the dream of making you a countess. A very foolish notion, of course, but she isn't the first foolish mother to feel that way. I thought it was time to jar her loose from that idea."

"And so you invented the snappy idea of my being interested in our chauffeur?"

He looked sharply at her. There was a twinkle in his eyes.

"Wasn't it a pretty good guess? Now, just between us girls, Virginia, haven't you been working up a little romantic interest in this young man?"

Virginia squeezed his arm. "You're a nice old dear," she exclaimed. "And supposing I have?" The question was lightly put, but she awaited with real concern the answer to it. Perhaps he sensed the deeper significance that lay beneath her words, for he thought a moment before answering.

"Well, it's this way, Ginny," he said slowly. "I know this young man and I confess I rather like him. He's all right in his way, but I think you can do better than marry a chauffeur. There isn't much of a future ahead of him, you'll have to admit."

"But, father, supposing I did like him—a good deal—couldn't you help him along? You with all your influence and power?"

His face sobered. "To tell the truth, Virginia, just at this moment I don't know how long that influence and power may last. I've gotten myself pretty deeply involved in a big deal. It was going along fine while we were abroad and we expected to clean up this spring. Then along comes this big financial slump and now I've got my back to the wall. I think I'll weather it"—here his hands clenched aggressively—"but you never can tell. I've borrowed up to the limit and must have still more." Then he waved an impatient hand. "But let's not talk any more about that. Let's get at your affairs. They're really more important. How about the count?"

Virginia shrugged her shoulders.

"There are times when he's very likable," she said. "At other times I simply can't bear him. He's too suave; he doesn't ring true."

"Right you are, my dear. There's something wrong with that bird. I felt it from the very start."

Instead of going direct to the hospital they continued out to the edge of the town. They talked gayly, the father by indirection seeking to learn just how deeply his daughter's interest was enlisted in Rasher.

He came to the conclusion that her interest was a romantic one, fostered by the wound he had received in her defense. He also assumed, with less evidence, that Rasher had fallen in love with her and would endeavor in every possible way to delay the start home until he could safely leave the hospital and resume the driving of the car. Mr. Crayton resolved to defeat his purpose. Further association with his daughter must be avoided. Rasher had already fulfilled the function for which he had been employed. He had diverted Virginia's thoughts from Count de Barsac.

With this purpose in mind, they entered the hospital and were shown to Rasher's room. The invalid greeted Mr. Crayton pleasantly and, under the latter's persistent questions, related the story of the holdup and of his wound. In Mr. Crayton's mind arose the thought that the boy, even though with the best of intentions, had acted foolishly.

"I suppose it was rather foolish of me," Rasher startled him by saying, "but I had to do it. I couldn't stand by and see that miserable crook hurting your daughter."

"It was splendid," Mr. Crayton exclaimed, and in the real admiration he felt an awkward thought intruded. It was going to require real diplomacy to end this affair without terribly hurting the boy's feelings. However, it must be done. He cleared his throat to speak.

"I suppose, Mr. Crayton," continued Rasher, "you are annoyed by this delay, so I have arranged for a substitute to take my place. When I found I could not leave here for three or four days I sent for one. He is here. I can vouch for him. Your car can leave at once."

"And leave you here—after what you have done?" cried Virginia, so earnestly that Rasher averted his eyes.

"I should feel very badly if your trip were further delayed on my account—although I am deeply grateful."

MR. CRAYTON was mopping his brow. Perplexity showed in his face. It was as though Rasher had read his mind, and he was ashamed.

"I can come on later," added Rasher, "if you want me. But if the new man is satisfactory you may prefer to keep him."

Virginia had arisen and was looking out of the window.

"How about it, Virginia?" asked her father unsteadily. "Mr. Rasher has arranged everything." She was silent, and Mr. Crayton, very uncomfortable and feeling that some explanation was due, turned to Rasher. "I'm sorry we must go and I'm afraid we'll have to start at once. I happen to be involved in a business deal which is just now at a very critical stage."

Rasher nodded pleasantly. "Well, I hope it turns out all right," he said. "You helped me by giving me a job and I wish I could help you."

Crayton laughed dryly. "Thank you, my boy, but I guess it's a little beyond you, unless," he added ironically, "you could find time to stroll into 2300 Wall street and have them honor my check for a trifle of six hundred thousand." He arose, his face very sober. Rasher noted new lines of worry. Crayton swept his hand across his brow and then with a forced effort at gayety shook Rasher's hand. "I'll arrange about your expenses here and leave you a month's pay. Write when you are able to be up."

Turning to Virginia, "Come on, Ginny; say good-by. We've got to be starting." He then stalked briskly out of the room, leaving them alone. She turned swiftly to Rasher.

"Do you want me to go?" she asked.

"Yes, you'd better go," he answered. "Your father wants you to."

"But do you WANT me to?"

There was a long pause.

"Yes."

Virginia had arisen and was looking out of the window.

Without another word she left the room. Seeing her so soon surprised Mr. Crayton, who was expecting a more prolonged parting and who, with a wave of sympathetic consideration, had left her behind for that very purpose.

"Come on, father," she said wearily. "I'm ready to go."

Mr. Crayton, deeply mystified, withheld comment. He had achieved his purpose, and instead of feeling pleased he was conscious that his victory had left him wretchedly uncomfortable in his mind.

After they had parted the door to Rasher's room opened and a tall young man in the uniform of a chauffeur entered.

"So they're gone," he remarked cheerfully, sitting down on Rasher's bed.

"Yep, they're gone," responded Rasher, "and you're going with them."

"So be it, as Paris remarked to Helen the third afternoon of the siege of Troy. And what am I to do besides run their chariot for them?"

"That's all, Dick. Chauf them home, and when they speak to you touch your cap and say, 'Yes, madam,' or 'Yes, sir.'"

"Not 'aye, aye, sir'?"

"No; you're not on your yacht now. You're just a cringing worm who must take orders."

"Yes, sir; very good, sir; thank you, sir. I'll do this for you, Hank, but I've got to be back in New York in two weeks. I've got a date with the queen of the world, and not even for friendship for you shall I keep her waiting."

Rasher was writing on a scrap of paper.

"Send this wire, Dick, and try to delay leaving town until tomorrow morning."

Dick glanced at the written words, whistled, and rolled his eyes upward. "Absolutely looney," he murmured, and departed for the telegraph office.

By various devices Richard Wellborne, alias Dick Wells, the new chauffeur, succeeded in inventing mechanical reasons why the Crayton car could not leave until the following morning. When he reported thus to Mr. Crayton he was in an unspeakably dirty suit of dungarees, with oil and grease smeared over his face and hands.

It was natural that Mr. Crayton, under these circumstances, failed to note the physical qualities that had won for young Mr. Wellborne the distinction of being the best looking man in his class at Harvard.

"So they're gone," he remarked cheerfully.

APRIL DAY ---------- By Frank R. Adams

"You would be better off with a leading woman even of Stella's type than you are with so flamboyant a personality as Miss Rawlins."

That was all for that day. They talked of other things for a little while, then she let him go without his having discovered exactly why he had been sent for.

But Naomi had already adopted him. He had unquestionably cured her of Herbert Noble. Unless something happened to prevent it Ernest Hamilton was going to be number eight in the Stanley gallery of unhappy romances.

Naomi talked about him to Stella far into the night, planning what she could do for him, how she could improve his technique for him here and there. They ran one or two of his pictures again.

"Yes," Naomi declared in final verdict, "the boy has unusual charm. He could play 'The Prisoner of Zenda' as well as he could 'A Yankee in King Arthur's Court.'"

THERE being no particular point in mourning a suitor as permanently buried as Herb Noble, Naomi got up next day. She thought she could take a little air if sufficiently tempered by the plate glass of her limousine. Stella went along in case she might drop her handkerchief or develop an organic freckle or something.

Quite by accident Mike, her chauffeur (it was a whim of Naomi's to have a chauffeur named Mike), drove the big parlor car past the United Studios.

"Turn in here," Naomi ordered. "We'll stop for a minute and watch Mr. Hamilton on the set. I think he is shooting today."

Sure enough he was. The orders were that no one was to be allowed to penetrate the inclosure which had been blocked off for the use of his company. But rules were not made for Queen Elizabeth, Napoleon Bonaparte, or Naomi Stanley. Her bus drove right up the scenery street where the comedian was working and parked just in back of the cameras. The man who would have stopped the President of the United States if he had tried to do that same thing had almost let the car run over him in his desire to please and make things easy.

"Please go right on working," Naomi requested regally when Ernest came over to pay his respects.

That was easier said than done. Ernest had long since cut out visitors on his set for the very reason that he was always self-consciously unfunny when working before an audience of any kind. On the stage when he made a personal appearance he was an unqualified failure. So he never did that any more either.

But one couldn't treat the woman who was practically the head of one's profession as he would anyone else in the world. So, perspiring with nervousness, Ernest obeyed the royal behest.

The comedy was a burlesque on one of those cloak and sword melodramas. Ernest was playing the part of a prince. To lend realism to the characterization, he was filming a scene in which the prince was thrown from a mule.

The continuity of the scene ran like this:

367. Prince embraces Rita, the truck gardener's daughter, in farewell.
Title: "I GO TO ALARM THE COUNTRYSIDE."
368. Flash of Prince and Rita.
Title: "GOOD-BY, BIG BEN."
369. End of speech and embrace. Prince mounts his waiting mule, which, being an ex-circus ring performer, immediately begins to gallop around in a circle with Rita as the center.
370. Closeup of Prince. He feels himself slipping.
371. The trick mule begins to buck and finally throws the Prince over his head.

They shot scenes 367, 368, and 369 several times. Finally Ernest stopped to rest a few minutes and came over to get the queen's verdict.

"It would be funnier if Miss Rawlins played it as seriously as you do. The girl never forgets her legs, which for the sake of argument I'll admit are beautiful, nor her eyes. She isn't thinking enough about the Prince in this story. What she's worrying about is how many fans will write to her telling her how devastating she is."

"I don't know how to make her do it differently," Ernest replied modestly. "We've been working together so long that we've probably gotten used to each other's lack of technique."

"I should think your director——"

"O, he's Miss Rawlins' husband and——"

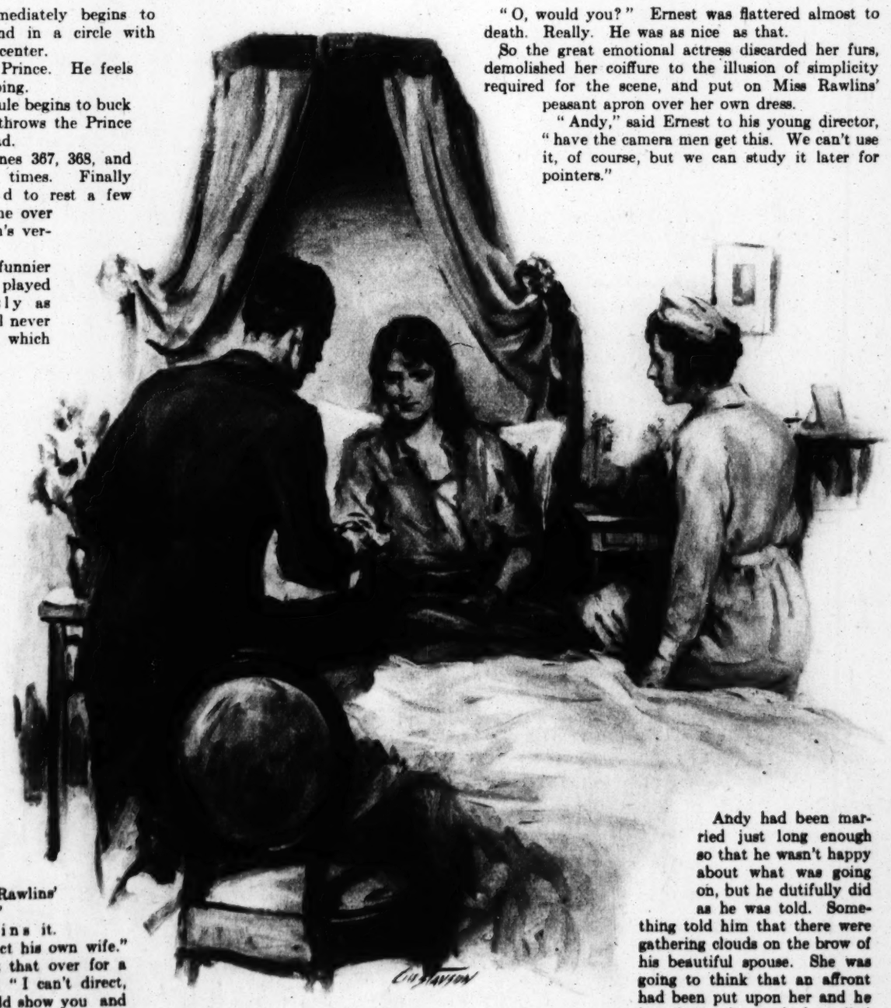
"That explains it. No man can direct his own wife."

Naomi thought that over for a minute. Finally: "I can't direct, but I think I could show you and Miss Rawlins a better way to play that scene."

"O, would you?" Ernest was flattered almost to death. Really. He was as nice as that.

So the great emotional actress discarded her furs, demolished her coiffure to the illusion of simplicity required for the scene, and put on Miss Rawlins' peasant apron over her own dress.

"Andy," said Ernest to his young director, "have the camera men get this. We can't use it, of course, but we can study it later for pointers."



Ernest was slightly puzzled and embarrassed.

Andy had been married just long enough so that he wasn't happy about what was going on, but he dutifully did as he was told. Something told him that there were gathering clouds on the brow of his beautiful spouse. She was going to think that an affront had been put upon her and he hoped that he would be called away suddenly about the time she made up her mind whom she thought to blame for it.

They did the scene. It is impossible to say how well. One of the witnesses, Stella O'Dea, declares that it was marvelous, while another, Miss Jerry Rawlins, has to have smelling salts whenever the subject is mentioned.

They did it twice. Subconsciously Naomi must have recognized the fact that Ernest was not like other Hollywood Arabs and that he would never have touched her except under the influence of a bank of Kliegs, three clicking cameras, and a studio orchestra. So she didn't do it quite right the first time and had to show him all over again.

Then they went on with the opera. Naomi and Stella were still there when they shot Scene 371, where the trick mule throws the prince over his head. Something did go wrong there. Ernest didn't get up as he should have done. Instead, he lay there very much as a real prince, or anyone else, would have done after having been jolted severely upon the back of the neck.

For a minute nobody knew whether it was acting or not. The director and the cameramen thought that Ernest was improvising, as he sometimes did. So they ground on.

But it didn't look right to Stella. She was trained to recognize the symptoms of physical pain and to gallop to its relief. In her business seconds meant lives. So she didn't wait.

She rushed to Ernest's side, lifted his head into her lap and began to undo his collar.

"Get water, bandages, absorbent cotton, cheesecloth, and telephone for a doctor," she ordered crisply.

The cameramen, still uncertain, cranked on. Nobody had thought to tell them to stop.

ERNEST really was hurt quite a little. He had suffered enough of a jar to his spinal column to lay him up for several days.

Stella offered to nurse him, but Naomi, who was nobody's fool, refused to relinquish her. Instead, she kept Stella on in her own household until the end of the week and then dismissed her. She had straight hair and a good, practical sort of face, but she was awfully young, and men do like to be petted. Just as well to let her slip back into the bog of obscurity.

Subsequent events, in a way, proved her wisdom. She, herself, called every day at the hospital with orchids, which were her own favorite flower, and kept in touch with his recovery.

He was duly appreciative and made her his confidante in a professional difficulty which had arisen while he was still laid up. Jerry Rawlins wanted to be released from her contract. The chance to play the adventuress in one of C. B. De Mille's optical delusions had been offered to her and the opportunity could not wait. There were other reasons why Jerry wanted to leave the new Ernest Hamilton production flat, but she didn't tell them. She didn't need to. Naomi knew what they were. But she didn't tell Ernest, either.

Naomi advised him to let her go. "It will be a great chance for her." Naomi knew which side of his nature to appeal to. "You haven't gone so very far in your own picture yet. If you put someone else in it will only mean retaking a few scenes and, according to my opinion, the result will be eminently better if you have a different type of woman playing opposite you anyway."

Ernest accepted her advice and regretfully parted with Jerry

Rawlins, who had come up with him out of the ooze of the custard pie period.

As soon as he was well enough he appeared on the lot. Naomi was with him, naturally. It was her car that had called for him on the plea that he was not well enough to go out in his own roadster, yet.

"We'll look at the 'rushes' that were taken the day of my accident," he suggested.

"Won't it excite you?" Naomi was solicitous.

"No. Why? I'm crazy to get to work again and will be as soon as I can get a new leading woman."

An operator had the stuff right handy in the projection room. "I think we've got a surprise for you, boss," suggested Andy Moore, the director.

"What is it?" demanded Ernest, as always, eager and boyish.

"You wait and see."

Ernest scanned every foot of the film as they reeled it off without finding anything to warrant any enthusiasm. On the contrary, he was fearfully disappointed in the scenes which had been taken between himself and Miss Stanley. He knew why they were so bad. It was because he was so seli-conscious, so cognizant of the fact that he was only a clown, while she was the greatest emotional actress in the business. The mere fact that he had tried so hard made him more than usually wooden.

Then came the shot of himself riding the mule. That was a little better. His facial expression meant something there, probably because he really had been uncertain what was going to happen. And where the mule threw him over his head there was a good comedy climax. Ernest had to smile at his own awkward fall. It was good for a laugh with any audience. A few days in the hospital was not too high a price to pay for the roar which would go up from several million throats all over the world when that particular clumsy sprawl was flashed on the screen.

ERNEST thought that was all. It was all he remembered, anyway. He was about to get up to go out. But the projection room stayed dark and the film ran on.

What was this?

A girl ran into the scene, a girl in nurse's uniform. She lifted the head of the unconscious comedian from the ground, held it in her lap and began deftly to unfasten his collar, her face, all the time, registering extreme concern and womanly pity.

The fool strip of film held you. You felt that it was real amidst a mess of footage that was only hokum.

The girl was a pretty girl. She wore her hair severely and she had no conscious charm devices, but her eyes were marvelous and her expression was one of ineffable sweetness. Her movements were lovely, deft with unstudied grace and sureness. And she had nice hands—and feet and ankles.

And there was just one more thing which the camera had caught and which no one else had ever noticed. She apparently thought that one Ernest Hamilton was one of the finest men that ever drew the breath of life on this or any other planet.

The lights came on.

"What do you say, boss?" demanded the director.

"I'm a darn good actor when I'm unconscious."

"But what do you think of the girl?"

"The girl is a wow."

"I thought you'd say so. What do you think of getting hold of her and rewriting the story so we can use that one scene and make her the lead all the way through?"

"I believe it can be done. In the first part, where I first meet the peasant girl, she can just as well be a nurse in the——"

"Don't forget that I am here," Naomi reminded him with just enough ice in her tones so that any married man and a good many others would have put up a counter-barrage.

"Pardon me." Ernest had forgotten. "I'll have you taken home. I'm going to stay here with Andy and work out this new sequence. George, will you hunt up a studio car and——"

"I came in my own car," said Naomi, and then added, as she swept away, "and so did you."

"She acts as if she were sore," deduced the famous comedian, perplexedly. "I wonder why. Well, as I was saying, we'll take out all the stuff about the peasant girl vamp and——"

By dinner time they had it all threshed out.

And Ernest Hamilton's casting director called up Naomi Stanley on the telephone to find out the address of her ex-nurse.

Naomi had been expecting that call, so she was all prepared.

"I don't know her address, but it just happens that she telephoned me this very evening and I have her number. She said she was out on a case."

"The telephone number will do quite as well, thank you."

She gave it to him. Ernest, himself, called her up.

When he got her on the wire: "Could you come around to the studio tomorrow morning, Miss O'Dea?"

She laughed. "I'm sorry, but I cannot."

Ernest was not in the habit of being turned down like that. Still, he was not a bit egotistical. "Then can I come where you are?"

"That can't be done, either. I'm terribly sorry."

Ernest was slightly nettled. But his voice did not show it. "I wanted to offer you a part in my new picture and—what's the matter? Are you there?"

She wasn't there for almost a minute. "Pardon me, did I hear you correctly?" she finally inquired faintly.

"If you heard that I was offering you a part—just a sort of a tryout—in my new picture, your hearing is quite perfect. Did you hear that?"

"Yes. What is it? A clown's part?"

"No, it's kind of a leading lady. Of course in my pictures the woman part isn't anything wonderful, but it would give you a chance to break in and——"

"I have to support my mother," Stella suggested. "I'd have to have my regular salary."

"How much is that?"

"Seven dollars a day and food."

"All right. I'll pay you that and enough more so that you can find yourself. Report at the studio in the morning."

"But I can't do that. I told you I was on a case."

"Get released. This is more important. It costs me a thousand dollars a day to hold up this picture."

"O, dear!"

"Why?"

"The case is a scarlet fever case and the entire household is quarantined for three weeks. That's twenty-one thousand dollars' worth of time. So, you see, I'll have to thank you and——"

"Wait a minute. How did you come to get this case?"

"Miss Stanley fixed it up for me. The people here are friends of hers and she told them about me. It was awfully sweet of her."

Ernest thought so himself, especially if she had done it since afternoon.

It was just that little touch which aroused his stubbornness. Otherwise he probably would have given up the idea, hired some well-known professional to play the part, and continued shooting. As it was, the opposition only made him the more eager to carry out his plan as originally conceived.

Time was the essence of his necessity. You can't keep a cast and crew hanging around a lot indefinitely, waiting for one unknown quantity, who may be disappointing, after all, to be let out of a three weeks' quarantine.

Ernest went to the health authorities about it. The administration did not particularly like motion picture people, anyway, and wouldn't do a thing. Then he asked his own private physician. The latter assured him that with proper disinfection there was no reason why a nurse on a case should not leave a quarantined house, just as a physician did. But it could not be done with the cognizance of the authorities.

Ernie put his gag men to working on the situation. A "gag" man, if you don't happen to know it already, is the chap on a motion picture comedy lot who thinks up the funny finish to the idea which is vaguely suggested in the scenario. He puts on the unexpected flourish which makes a skyrocket out of a dud.

The gag men worked all night.

The next day a director, three gag men, a location hound, two cameramen, several alleged actors, and a few extras piled into the studio bus and cruised the streets of Los Angeles. The location they were looking for was a certain house with a scarlet fever card on it.

They found it. There was a special health officer on guard outside.

That made it more difficult. But not impossible. Not with the three best gag men in pictures on the spot.

"We want to use a shot of this house with the quarantine sign on it," the location hound told the officer. "Will it be all right?"

"It will be O. K. so long as you don't go inside."

"Good. If you'll stay right on duty in full view we'd be glad to have you in the picture, and will pay you ten dollars for a few minutes' work."

THE ten dollars was superfluous. That health officer had been dreaming of himself on celluloid for seven years and he would have paid for the privilege. He even wanted a make-up put on and everything.

The director spent some time in gravely instructing him in his part. "This jane in the nurse's uniform wants to get into the house, but you won't let her. The first time she comes up you stop her and give her a warning. The next time you don't see her, on account of chinning with the lady next door, until she has already rapped on the door. Then you turn, see her, go up and grab her and drag her down to the gate and put her outside."

Then they rehearsed it. Several times. The girl who played the lady next door was a considerable pippin, so it was no hardship to go through with it again and again.

"Now, we'll shoot it. Ready. Action. Turn 'em over, boys. Go in through the gate, nurse. Leave your veil down. Stop her, officer. Shake your finger in her face and lay down the law. Very good. Turn away, nurse, and walk out of the scene. Officer, stroll over to the fence. Meet Phyllis. You're glad to see her. That's it. Sneak back, nurse. Don't see her, officer—not yet. Ask Phyllis if you can see her when you are off duty. Take her hand and—this is new—Phyllis, pull him toward you a little. Officer, kiss her. Do it again. Attaboy. Nurse, rap on the door. Officer, turn and see her. Go and grab her. Make it snappy! Push her out of the gate. Fast. That's good. Cut. Somebody pay this gentleman his ten dollars and we'll move on to the next location. Thanks ever so much, old man."

The gag had seemed good enough so that they had actually shot it. Subsequently it was used in the picture, "The Loose Nut." It wasn't till that feature came out several months later that the health officer saw what really had happened, namely and to wit, that while he was talking to and even kissing Phyllis, the nurse had entered the house and another one from inside had taken her place at the door in time to rap on it and be escorted by himself out of the gate.

What didn't show on the film was that Stella stepped into an automobile all by herself and was immediately hustled to an improvised fumigating station nearby and sprayed with formaldehyde solution.

It wasn't only the scarlet fever germs that she lost that day. Before the sun set she had parted from her natal name and had become April Day for all advertising purposes and had promised not to bob her hair nor alter her nose (as is so fashionable in Hollywood) without first obtaining permission from the party of the first part, the hereinbefore mentioned Ernest Hamilton.

That, then, is how April Day got into the movies.

You, yourself, saw her in "The Loose Nut," "Why Hurry?" "Three Speeds Ahead," and "The Boob."

You recollect how she looked at Ernest in "The Loose Nut," how she seemed to break her heart while waiting for him to get there in "Why Hurry?," how she held his old burnt out pipe against her cheek in "Three Speeds Ahead" when she thought he had been killed in the racing accident, and how her eyes filled with tears when she and his dog both tried to kiss him good-by at the same time there at the finish of "The Boob."

Of course you noticed that with every picture she got prettier and prettier until it just seemed as if she was too lovely to live.

And then all of a sudden she wasn't in Ernest's last picture, "Skid Chains," at all. There was just a woman where you expected to see her and her lovely smile.

But she'll be back again pretty soon. Ernest needs her and so does the public.

But just now Ernest Hamilton II. needs her most of all.

It all centers about the discovery of what starch does to teeth—made by one of the greatest dental scientists. See his startling statement, given here.

The Starch Menace

The substance most dangerous to teeth is starch in foods. It forms the acid that eats through hardest tooth-enamel. This is why:

There is too much of it, in modern diet, for even normal healthy saliva to change into harmless form [by digesting it]. Simply an overload of starch—so that it is only part-changed [digested].

Now—note the danger. Starch in this part-digested form is a glue and a dirty, brownish stain, combined. Chemically like gum arabic! Nothing can remove it from your teeth—not brushing, scrubbing, rinsing—while in this form.

It cements the staining matter between teeth—on teeth; fills the tiny grooves [500 to an inch], which furrows all tooth-surfaces, with it.

This tells—on high dental authority—why teeth remain dull, dingy despite regular care. Why they decay too soon. And a guaranteed way to make them more attractive than ever before.

No wonder teeth, although regularly brushed, grow dingier and dingier—and decay too soon despite your care.

THE BLACK ABBOT By Edgar Wallace

The echo came back, queerly distorted, yet distinct. "Marry her."

THE STORY THUS FAR:

HARRY, LORD CHELFORD, occupies Fossaway Manor with his half brother, Dick. The ruins of an old abbey are supposed to be haunted by the Black Abbot. Lord Chelford is engaged to Leslie Gwyn, whose brother, Arthur, acts as his solicitor. Fabrian Gilder, Gwyn's clerk, discovers his employer is in financial trouble. Gilder overhears Mary Wenner, Chelford's former secretary telling Gwyn she has discovered where the Chelford treasure is hidden. Gilder tells Gwyn that if he will consent to his marriage with Leslie he'll clear off some of his debts. Gilder proposes and is refused. Dick learns Arthur has dissipated much of Chelford's inheritance and that Gilder is using his knowledge to force Arthur's consent to his marriage with Leslie. Dick promises to see Arthur through his troubles.

DICK engages a detective, Puttler, to investigate the rumored appearance of the Black Abbot. Puttler discovers the footman is an ex-convict. While Leslie, Dick, and Puttler are walking in the grounds some one fires several shots at Leslie. Puttler is wounded slightly. Gilder and Gwyn engage in a fist fight at the abbey when they meet at night while looking for the treasure. Gwyn discharges Gilder, and the latter then promises Mary Wenner he will marry her if she will lead him to the treasure. She does so, but a masked figure frightens them away from the treasure room hidden in the abbey. Gilder visits Mary home and returns to find the supposed cylinders of gold have been removed in his absence. Outside the abbey he finds one cylinder, but it contains not gold, but a priceless missal, an art treasure. At his cottage Gilder finds Thomas, the butler, who has been discharged. Thomas promises tentatively to tell a story "worth a million" at a later day. Mary calls on Gilder and reveals that she has restored to legibility his promises of marriage, written in invisible ink. She discloses her intention to visit the Gwyns.

INSTALLMENT XI.

Lord Chelford Is Piqued.

THE groom who brought Dick Alford's hat to the door had a report to make.

"That fellow was seen last night, sir."

"Which fellow is this?" asked Dick as he swung into the saddle.

"The Black Abbot, sir. Gill, the gamekeeper up at Long Meadow cottage, saw him at four o'clock this morning walking through the long meadow. By the time Gill got his gun he'd vanished."

"And what was the Black Abbot doing in the long meadow?" asked Dick sardonically. "Picking buttercups?"

"It's rather late for buttercups, sir," said the unimaginative groom. "But Gill says that if he'd had his gun he'd have taken a pot at him."

"And there would have been an inquest, and the best Gill could hope for would be a verdict of justifiable homicide. You can tell Gill from me that the Black Abbot is to be tackled—by hand! A live ghost will tell us a lot, but a dead ghost is practically useless as an information bureau."

He cantered through the home meadows, behind the house, and avoiding the abbey ruins, rejoined the winding Ravensrill. Setting his horse at a walk, he followed the bank of the stream, his mind so completely occupied by the events of the last twenty-four hours that he would have passed unnoticed the girl who was lying face downward on the opposite bank.

It was a glorious morning, warm and sunny. The sky was an unblemished blue, the world was bathed in yellow radiance. Overhead a flight of migratory birds was moving southward, and the faint chatter of them came down to him.

"Good morning, Sir Galahad!"

He reined up his horse and looked round in bewilderment. Presently he saw her.

"Good morning, Guinevere!" he said, and, turning his horse's head to the stream, he came gingerly down the slope and sent the reluctant hack into the water.

"Be careful!"

"There's a ford here," he said. "In fact," as he emerged with his horse's girth dripping, "this is the original Chel ford. Knights in armor and probably Britons in feathers and woad have crossed Ravensrill at this spot. What on earth are you doing?"

He slipped to the ground, dropping the reins, and allowed his mount to forage at will. She was lying now at full length, but resting on her elbows. Immediately beneath her face was a slab of rock, in the center of which a hole some eighteen inches in diameter had been worn. When he saw this he laughed softly.

"Leslie, what questions have you to ask the Wishing Well?"

Why it was called the Wishing Well he had never learned—no water had ever risen from that deep cavity, which, by some freak of nature, extended to unplumbed depths. Yet here generations of country swains had come to prostrate themselves and bellow into the cavity the burden of their hearts' desire. And tradition had it that the well answered them clearly and intelligibly.

"I'm asking about me." Her face was pink, probably from her unusual posture.

"And what said the well?" he mocked.

She scrambled to her knees and pushed back the hair from her forehead.

"I'll not tell you—ask something!"

With a growl and a groan he stretched himself on the warm grass and, hollowing his hands, roared into the crevice:

"What is going to happen to Leslie?"

They waited, and then the echo came back, queerly distorted, yet distinct.

"Marry her!"

They laughed together. It was the trick of some hollow place below that through the ages had sent back the same reply to every question.

He got up to his feet.

"I wish you wouldn't wander around without my escort," he said seriously, and she laughed.

Never had he seen her looking more beautiful than that morning. She was a thing of air and sunlight, a baffling unreality that did not belong to the sordid world in which he was living.

"I got up early and was bored, so I went walking, and then I thought of the well and wondered whether it had learned any new tricks. Arthur's very conscious of his eye and he won't go out until his face is normal. Poor Arthur!" She hesitated, looking at him. "You haven't found——" She did not finish the sentence.

"The gentleman who did the shooting? No, but we have a pretty shrewd idea. By the way, I have fired Thomas. You remember that hangdog footman who was always near at hand when he shouldn't have been."

"What has he done?" she asked.

"Nothing particular. He is an ex-convict. Puttler recognized him as soon as he arrived, and I found him at three o'clock this morning coming out of the library and made him turn out his pockets. He had no very considerable sum of money in his possession, but the chances are that he had cached it. Poor old Harry is such a slacker in the matter of keeping accounts that it will be almost impossible to secure a conviction. Of course, Thomas swore the money we found—not a large amount—was his, and as it meant a fuss in waking up Harry, who I am perfectly sure could have given us no information, we allowed the brute to get away with it."

"Where is he now?"

"Thomas? I expect he caught the first train for London. I don't suppose he'll be applying for a job in the neighborhood, but to be on the safe side you had better tell your brother."

There was a moment of silence, then she asked:

"Did you find the rifle?"

He shook his head.

"It was an army rifle, but there isn't such a thing at Fossaway Manor, though there are plenty in the village. In fact, nearly a dozen of our people working on the estate are territorials. Puttler says that a poacher's gang was responsible."

Dick was a poor liar, but Leslie suspected nothing and did not question this theory. If she had, she might have pointed out that poachers use shotguns and snares and that the rifle as an instrument for the destruction of game was about as valuable as a steam hammer for tacking down carpets.

They walked across the field toward Willow House, Dick leading his horse.

"I want you to make me a promise, Leslie," he said.

"What is it?" she asked, knowing before he spoke what it would be.

"I want you to promise me not to take these early morning walks, to use your car, and to keep to the roads."

Her eyebrows rose.

"Why? Surely there is no danger. You're not afraid of the Black Abbot?"

But he did not answer her smile.

"No," he said, "I'm not afraid especially of the Black Abbot, but I'm very much afraid of the something that is behind the Black Abbot."

She knew that he did not wish to be questioned further and changed the subject. She had a visitor coming, she told him, and only when she told him who it was did his eyes twinkle.

"Good Lord! That lady? I suppose you realise you're harboring a dangerous rival?"

"Don't be horrid, Dick. The poor girl was very fond of Harry, and in the letter she wrote to me she told me that she hoped I wouldn't be embarrassed by her coming——"

"She would say that," said Dick grimly.

"——and that she had almost forgotten Harry's stupid infatuation."

Dick stopped to laugh.

"Can you beat that?" he asked, with tears in his eyes. "Jumping snakes! 'Harry's stupid infatuation!' Well, I won't be ungenerous."

"Don't," she warned him. "I'm rather sorry for the girl."

"Don't," he mimicked. "You need never be sorry for Mary. If you keep her off the subject of me you'll have a very pleasant week-end. But in the matter of Richard Alford she is a fanatic. I won't tell you the horrid things she says of me, because it would prejudice you against her."

"How do you know?" she challenged. "Quite a number of people say horrid things about Richard Alford."

"Not to you," he said quietly, and she flushed and again changed the subject.

"I don't know why I'm up so early; I didn't go to bed till two."

"It was ten minutes past two when your light went out," he said promptly, and she stared at him.

"How do you know?"

"I happened to be passing your house."

He was in such a hurry to explain that she was suspicious.

"The Black Abbot was about last night. Puttler and I did a little ghost hunting."

"Did you see him?"

He shook his head.

"Nobody saw him except a terrified gamekeeper."

Suddenly she turned to him with a little gasp of surprise.

"It was you!" she accused.

"What was me?"

"I am sure I saw somebody at the lower end of the drive. You were smoking a cigar; I could see the little red glow; and at first I thought it was Harry, and this morning I found the end of the cigar near the lodge gates. Richard Alford, do you ever sleep?"

"Frequently," he said with a smile, and put his arm around her shoulder. "I'm being brotherly; take no alarm," he mocked her. "Leslie, dear, will you promise?"

"What?" she asked.

"Not to wander through the fields at odd hours. I don't want to alarm you—I feel a brute as it is—but there may be real danger for the next day or two. Please don't ask me what it is, because I can't tell you; I'm not so sure that I know."

She turned this over in her mind for a long time.

"Has it to do with the Chelford treasure?" she asked, and, to her surprise, he nodded.

In sight of her house he left her, and, remounting his horse, cantered away. She watched him until a bend of the road hid him from view, and then with a little sigh she walked slowly toward her home.

What was the mystery? She had never taken the Black Abbot very seriously, believing that the apparition had its origin in a stupid practical joke carried out by a villager with a histrionic bent. The legend she knew. Dick had told her, and Harry, who kept alive all the legends of the family, had described in detail the eight hundred year old murder. But how was the Black Abbot affecting her? And what was the meaning of this close guard that Dick Alford was keeping on her? She had no doubt that it was he who was watching the house in the early hours of the morning.

In the night she had reached a momentous decision. It had been made after long thought and heart searching, and she would have given everything to have had the courage to have told Dick that morning. But in that bright, sunlit world she was averse to hurting him. But would he be hurt? Her life's future hung on that question.

She had been dimly conscious that a man was standing before the gate of Willow House. She had seen him when she was some distance away, and now, as she drew near, she had a feeling that he was waiting to speak to her. He was tall and wearing an ill fitting gray suit and a golf cap; from his lips drooped a limp cigaret. He took his hands out of his pocket as she came near and touched his cap, and then she recognized the ill favored Thomas, the ex-footman.

"Good morning, miss," he said.

"Good morning, Thomas."

She viewed with more interest than she had done heretofore the lank, awkwardly made man.

"I wonder if I can have a word with you, miss?"

She hesitated.

"I am afraid I can do nothing for you, Thomas," she said. "Mr. Alford tells me he has discharged you."

He forced a grin.

"Mr. Alford never did like me, miss," he said. "I've been falsely accused, and I'm going to see my lawyer when I get to town. One minute, miss," he said hastily as she was opening the gate. "I could tell you something that would be worth a lot to you."

HER gray eyes fixed him in a steady stare.

"You can tell me nothing that would be of the slightest value, Thomas," she began.

"O, couldn't I!" His head went up and down in a succession of nods. He was ludicrously like a nodding mandarin she had on her writing table. "Your don't know what I know. I could tell you something, and I could tell Mr. Gwyn something, that nobody don't know. People talk about the Chelford treasure——"

"I don't want to hear any more," she said, and, turning, walked up the drive.

For a moment he glared after her as though he contemplated following, but thought better of it, and, lighting the cigaret, which had gone out, he slouched back to his borrowed home. And then an idea occurred to him. Beyond the low wooden fence was a thick belt of laurels. If one of his plans were carried out and he had to make a quick exit from Chelfordbury it might be worth while to reconnoiter this house. He jumped over the fence and made a cautious progress through the bushes.

"Who's that you were speaking to, Leslie?" Arthur Gwyn was lying in a deck chair on the lawn, his eye covered with a piece of white lint.

"Thomas," she said.

"The footman from Fossaway? What did he bring—a message?"

"No; he's been discharged," she said as she passed him. "Dick suspects him of stealing, and he sent him about his business this morning."

"Have you seen Dick then?" he asked in surprise.

"Yes, I met him; he was riding over to see the miller." She lingered at the back of the chair.

"You always seem to be meeting that fellow," he mused, with a frown. "It is 'Dick this' and 'Dick that.' Do you think it's wise, Leslie, playing with fire and all that sort of thing? You never tell me you meet Harry——"

"Harry never comes out of his library," she said with a smile, "and it's difficult to miss Dick if you're out of doors. Not that I've ever tried to miss him."

He took out a cigaret and looked at it thoughtfully, his lips pursed.

"Dick's a good fellow," he said again, "and it is unnecessary for me to remind you that he is a second son and as poor as a church mouse. Yes, Leslie, I'm going to insist on that poverty. After all, you're not marrying a pauper in Harry. And I tell you frankly that it is necessary that you should marry a rich man!"

The truth was coming—she braced herself to meet it.

"Who will also take my fortune on trust," she said quietly. "If I married Dick, who is a business man, he might ask to see my bonds and shares——"

A tense moment of silence, then:

"There are no bonds nor shares!"

He had to set his teeth to make his confession. He could not see her face; he dared not look round or meet her eyes.

"There are no bonds or shares?" she repeated slowly. "Then what I said in the car was right. I am penniless!"

The truth was out. Leslie stood rigidly behind her brother, looking down on him.

"I am penniless?" she asked.

He had to wet his dry lips before he could speak.

"I've been trying to work up courage to tell you this for a long time," he said. "I'm a coward—a cur! You have a few thousand pounds that I couldn't handle, but every other penny of your fortune I have spent." His voice was hoarse, scarcely recognizable. "You'll have to know this sooner or later; you might as well know it now. I don't know what you'll think of me. I'd like to say that I didn't care, but that wouldn't be the truth. I've gambled away a quarter of a million, and I'm as near to bankruptcy and ruin as makes no difference."

He pulled the lint bandage from his eye and got up and faced her. Save for the discoloration of his cheek, he was white as chalk.

"I'd no intention of telling you," he said in a low voice, "but you piqued me into it, and I'm glad it's over."

Raising his eyes to hers, he did not see the look of condemnation he expected. There was neither contempt nor consternation in her face. The red lips were curved in a half smile, and in her eyes there was nothing but kindliness and pity.

"Thank God!" she said in a low voice, and he could not understand her.

"This means, of course, that Chelford will have to take you without a fortune," he said.

She shook her head.

"I have already written to Harry, breaking off my engagement," she answered him. And then her arm slipped into his. "Let us go into breakfast," she said. "This is one of the happiest days of my life."

The letter came to Harry Alford, Earl of Chelford, with two or three other personal letters; his main correspondence was with London book sellers, for he was a restless collector of ancient tomes. He looked at the letter, recognizing the handwriting, frowned, and turned it over. Then, with some evidence of annoyance, he slit the flap.

"DEAR HARRY: I have thought for a long time that we have so little in common that a marriage between us could not possibly lead to happiness for either of us. I suppose the correct thing to do would be to send back my engagement ring, but, fortunately or unfortunately, you forgot to present me with this token! I wish you every happiness, and I hope that we shall still be good friends."

Harry read the letter, rubbed his forehead in perplexity, then, rising from his chair, almost ran from the library.

The FIRST STEP on the ROAD to HEALTH

Defects that may be lowering your vitality revealed by physical examination

During the war an Australian private, convicted of a crime for which the punishment was death, was brought before the court martial to hear sentence passed. The presiding officer, a colonel known for his clemency, informed him that in recognition of his excellent military record he was to be permitted to say how he should die.

"I will give you twenty-four hours to make up your mind," the colonel told him.

The next day the private was again brought before the court.

"Have you decided how you wish to die?" he was asked.

"Yes," replied the Australian, "... of old age."

Whether or not the Australian got his wish is not recorded, but the story illustrates the desire which all of us have to postpone the inevitable as long as possible. While we are young the idea of prolonging our life makes but little impression. Death is something remote, something which comes to others but is not yet for us.

It is only as the years slip by and we see our friends cut off when they still should have many years ahead of them, that we fully appreciate the value of good health and a sound constitution. But often it is then too late, or the process of physical deterioration is already too far advanced.

Why wait until it is too late? Why risk years of sickness and suffering? Why not permanently insure your health now by the common-sense procedure of getting yourself thoroughly examined at regular intervals? A thorough examination is the first step on the road to health and happiness.

The Life Extension Institute has been specializing in periodic health examinations for twelve years. During this period, in nearly one-half million people examined, close to two million defects were found that could lower vitality and shorten life. More than 60% of these defects were preventable or curable.

Because of this experience the Institute has developed highly efficient methods for detecting and interpreting important impairments which most people do not know they have.

The Institute has reason to believe that fifteen to twenty years can be added to the average life by following the system which it advocates. No medical treatment is given by the Institute. All examinations are absolutely confidential.

About 9,000 examiners, all physicians of unquestioned standing in their profession, are co-operating with the Institute in its health services in the leading cities and towns of the United States and Canada. Those who find it inconvenient to come to the Chicago Office may be examined in their own locality.

Write, telephone or visit the Chicago office for complete information about the Institute's examination and for free booklets on the prevention of disease and the prolongation of life.

Dick was on the lawn playing with his dog when his brother burst from the little study.

"I say, look at this! What do you think of it?"

Dick read the letter with a troubled face.

"I'm sorry," he said.

"Sorry!" said Harry shrilly. "It's disgraceful! I shall look a perfect fool! Leslie's treated me very badly indeed—but that reference to the engagement ring is in shocking bad taste."

"I thought you'd given her one," said the patient Dick. "Didn't you?"

"It is a barbarous and stupid practice. I never dreamed of giving her a ring. Why should I? She had a ring, a beautiful one. You must have seen it—a diamond that she always wears. What is the sense of it? The reference is in very bad taste—shocking!"

And yet, in spite of his agitation and anger, Dick thought he detected relief in his brother's voice. But his vanity had been hurt, and that is a sore place with many men of greater caliber than Lord Chelford.

"I could tell you something that would be worth a lot to you."

"Without any warning. She was here yesterday, but said not a word about it!"

"You hardly gave her a chance," said Dick. "You scarcely spoke to her, and really, Harry, you took no trouble to entertain her. Be reasonable."

HARRY fondled his chin and glared through the thick lenses of his horn-rimmed spectacles.

"I suppose not," he said, with sudden mildness. "But really, I'm not a marrying man. I want no more than my books and my mission. But I'm going to look a fool over this business, Dick." His anger was rising again. "Everybody in the country knows we're engaged, and they'll come prying around to discover what is wrong. We shall have those beastly newspaper men sitting on the front step, and that is more than I can endure!"

"Then let them come to me," said Dick. "I'll give them all the explanation they need, and they'll be sorry they asked. As for newspaper men—I eat 'em alive!"

Still his brother was not wholly mollified.

"What made her do it? Do you think she's found somebody else she likes better?" He peered at Dick in his short-sighted way. "That would make it even worse. I'm very annoyed with Arthur Gwyn. He threw this girl at me——"

"Don't let us talk about it," said Dick, sharply. "It isn't a very dignified attitude to take."

His brother looked at the letter dubiously.

"What am I to do?"

"Write a charming letter, freeing her," said Dick. "You can do no less."

"But do you think she's got another man in her eye?" demanded Harry.

"She has probably a dozen," said the other, brutally. "Do as I tell you, Harry."

And Harry Chelford went grumbling back to the library.

So she had done it! Dick hardly knew whether to be elated or depressed. A week ago he would have been the happiest man in England; today . . . he shrugged his broad shoulders, pulled his pipe from his pocket and savagely stuffed tobacco into the bowl. This would mean a break, for a time at any rate, between the Gwyns and Harry, and there arose an alarming thought. Suppose Harry transferred his legal business to another firm. That would mean ruin for Arthur Gwyn. Dick had so far been able to cover up the defalcations of Leslie Gwyn's brother, and in a few months he could have obliterated all trace without hurt to the estate. But at this stage, if Harry insisted——

"His lordship would like to see you, sir." The second footman had come up unnoticed behind him.

Dick steeled himself for the interview and went in. His brother was sitting at his desk, his head in his hands, his hair rumpled and an angry frown puckering the white skin of his forehead.

"Dick, I'm going to cut out these Gwyns," he said. "I want you to ask your lawyers to take over from Arthur, and tell them to be deuced careful and check every item. That fellow handles my mother's estate and, roughly, I think he must have nearly fifty thousand pounds in securities. If there's a penny missing, Dick, I'll jail the fellow—I will, by God! He's made a fool of me before all the county, and if I get half a chance I'm going to get back at him."

Dick's heart sank.

"What lawyers do you suggest?"

"Sampson & Howard. They're good people and they're not too friendly with Arthur. Will you take that in hand, Dick?"

Dick Alford nodded. As soon as he could escape from his brother's presence he went round to the garage and, taking out his car, drove to Willow house. Arthur was still on the lawn, walking up and down, and from his attitude of depression Dick gathered that something unusual had happened. Possibly he had been told about the breaking off of the engagement. But here he attributed the wrong cause.

"I want to see you, Gwyn."

Arthur Gwyn started and turned at the sound of the voice.

"Hullo!" he said awkwardly. "Does Harry know?"

Dick nodded.

"And he's very angry, I suppose?"

"He is rather furious. That's what I've come to see you about. Where is Leslie?"

"She's in the house. Do you want her?"

"No," said Dick, quietly. "I want to talk with you. Come for a walk with me."

They strolled out of all possibility of earshot from the house, and then:

"Harry has decided to take the legal management of the estate out of your hands, Gwyn," he said. "He spoke to me this morning of some funds that you're handling—about fifty thousand pounds' worth of stock from the late Lady Chelford's estate. Is that money intact?"

Arthur did not answer.

"Is that money intact?" asked Dick again.

"No," said the other, huskily, "not a penny of it."

Dick stared at the man in horror.

"You mean the money is lost?"

"Yes. I was persuaded to put it into an oil field in Texas. The shares are not worth two cents a thousand."

Dick groaned.

"O, you fool, you cussed fool," he muttered. "Don't you realize what this means? I can't cover you up now, not even for Leslie's sake. You madman!"

Arthur Gwyn passed his hand wearily over his eyes.

"What is the use of ragging me?" he asked, plaintively. "I've been expecting this trouble, and have lived under the shadow of it for years. I'll have to take my medicine."

"And Leslie?" asked Dick, sternly. "What of her? Has she to take your medicine, too?"

The man's pallid face was distorted painfully.

"Don't talk about Leslie, for God's sake!" he said. "That's the worst of it. I'm not scared of Dartmoor or bankruptcy or anything. Leslie's the only fear I have."

"Can you raise the money?"

Arthur gave a harsh little laugh.

"Raise it? How do you think I can raise fifty thousand?"

"You have no friends?"

The lawyer's lips curled.

"Not fifty thousand pounds' worth," he said, curtly. "No, I'm afraid, Alford, I've got to go through with it. I've been a blackguard, a vain, stupid fool—I've asked for all that is coming to me, and I shall not squeal."

"THERE is one thing I want you to promise me," Dick began, as he foresaw one possible solution which might present itself to Arthur's mind.

The lawyer smiled and nodded.

"You can trust me," he said. "I've got some sort of religion tucked away inside my system. Self-destruction is not my idea of a gentleman's solution. I tell you I'll stand up to anything that comes, and I'm not going to blow my brains out and leave a coroner's jury of yokels and carpenters to discuss my private affairs and probe into my iniquities. When will the transfer take place?"

"We've got a week yet," said Dick. "I can hold it up for that long; but once the papers are in the hands of the other lawyers, nothing can save you."

A week! Arthur Gwyn pinched his lower lip in meditation. Seven days. So far as he was concerned, if he had seven years to make reparation he could not see daylight.

"And get out of your mind that you're going to find the Chelford treasure," said Dick, and the shock made the man jump.

"Why, how do you know?" he stammered.

"I know all about that. I tell you that you can cut it out. That isn't a solution. It's robbing Peter to pay Peter; for if there is any gold—and heaven knows I don't it—it belongs to Harry, and must go to Harry. What about Leslie's fortune? Of course that is nonexistent. Does she know?

"I told her this morning," said the man, and now Dick understood his depression. "She took it like a brick; in fact, she seemed almost happy about it. And why, I can't for the life of me understand. Women are queer things."

"I know one woman who is the most wonderful thing in the world," said Dick softly.

He did not wait to see Leslie, but left as hurriedly as he could, and the man who had been lying at full length beneath the bushes waited till the two men had disappeared, and then crawled painfully and carefully back to the road, mounted the wall and stepped out for the nearest telegraph office to send his news.

made Mazola famous!

TO you who may be accustomed to pay high prices for imported oils, the invitation is extended to try Mazola in the French Dressing Recipe printed on the right—taste it—compare it—have your guests pass judgment.

Settle in your own mind and to the entire satisfaction of your palate that the world affords no finer oil—no more delicious oil—regardless of price—than Mazola.

Isn't it quite logical that Mazola is America's most popular salad oil? A wholesome, clear, pure vegetable oil—pressed from the hearts of full-ripened corn kernels—in itself as delicious to eat as the corn from which it comes.

The most popular recipe in America . . . . . .

MAZOLA-MADE FRENCH DRESSING

3 tablespoons Mazola	½ teaspoon Salt
3 tablespoons Lemon Juice or Vinegar	1 teaspoon Sugar
	½ teaspoon Paprika

MIX dry ingredients. Add Mazola and lemon juice or vinegar and beat until creamy. This dressing may be made in larger quantities and kept in a bottle and shaken as used.

This is the regulation recipe for French Dressing, but the proportions of oil and acid may be reversed to make it a little more tart for those desiring a sharper dressing.

A little Chili Sauce or Catsup also gives added piquancy.

How the rumors start. Mrs. McWarty and Miss Eglett are discussing flaming youth and the drink question. Mrs. McWarty has it on the best authority that when the high school girls' basketball team played the out-of-town girls not one of them could shoot a goal because they were so intoxicated. "And," Miss Eglett adds, "I heard at the ladies' aid that little Elinor Mallet was caught in the primary boys' coatroom with a bottle of applejack, in a frightful condition!"

"O, daddy! let's get married, and you can buy me a big car and some nice pearls and we'll be just like Cinderella and the prince!" Flaming youth is just so eager for romance and adventure in these ultra-modern days as in the olden times—say nothing of flaming age.

WE MODERNS

Flaming Youth

By W. E. HILL

The co-eds. "For heaven's sake, Betty, what have you done to your lovely curly bob?" "I simply had to give it up. Nearsighted profs in the classroom were forever mistaking me for a boy!"

Flaming second childhood. This is none other than Mrs. O. O. Whee, the millionairess, with her fourth—or is it her fifth?—matrimonial venture. The flaming youth is a very modern version of the Cinderella story, with Mrs. Whee as the prince.

For and against flaming youth. Miss Ghoul, the magazine writer, is very much pro. She does those articles on "What Modern Civilization Owes to the Flapper." The Rev. Mr. Bemper, arch reformer, denounces the terrible condition of the younger generation. Gets all stirred up over short skirts and legs and boyish bobs. We have with us also Miss Maybe, the old-fashioned girl, who seems to have missed her generation and writes long letters assuring editors she would rather die than powder her nose, or show her ankles.

Flaming youth and sober age. "I came home from the party at 6 in the morning and my aunt met me at the door and asked what I meant by staying out all night! I'd like to know what she calls all night! I was so ashamed for fear my boy friend would hear her!"

Smoldering flames. Eloise is one of those sheltered young girls. No flaming youth for her unless she elopes with papa's chauffeur. Her finishing school is so select there were only two girls registered last term. Eloise is slated to carry on in the Victorian manner.

Flaming youth of today is not so very different from the youth of yesterday and the day before, although the flames seem to crackle in odd ways. Here are several of what the old folks call horrible examples. Twenty years hence the horrible examples will be saying, "What are young people coming to?"

The boy in the picture was gilded to represent the Age of Gold for a 15th Century pageant in which he was to triumph over the Age of Iron, represented by the mailed figure. At the end of the pageant, the child died as a result of clogged pores.

Out of a Gilded Boy's Fate Came a Lasting Beauty Truth

Pores Must Be Kept Clean— And a Clear Soap Does It Best

When DeVinci gilded a boy from head to foot, he little knew that the boy would die —or that his death would reveal the real truth about skin care.

But the boy did die—because his pores were clogged with paint.

Even today some women do not realize how vital to beauty and health it is to keep pores thoroughly clean, and how few soaps there are that can perform this delicate task.

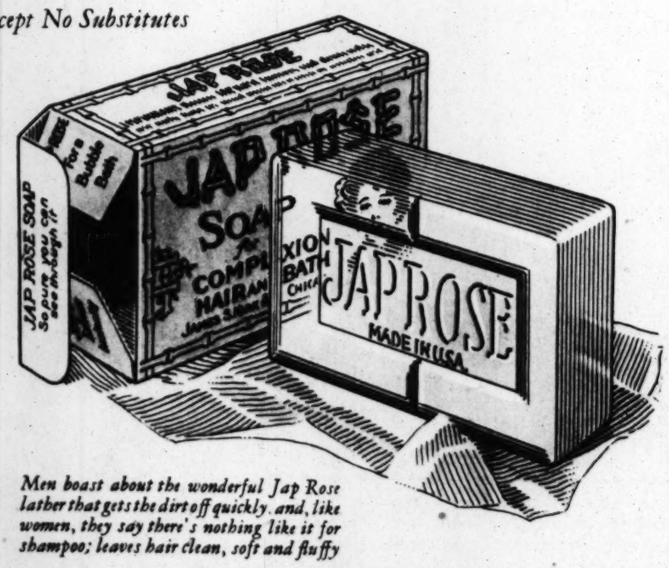
Of course, you cannot expect ordinary toilet soaps to do this; they're too coarse.

So well-informed women choose Jap Rose, so pure you can see through it.

Because of this extreme purity the fragrant ingredients blend perfectly with water. Hence they can enter, stimulate, cleanse and pass out of tiny pores that coarser soaps clog. The result is a clear skin, healthy and vigorous.

The temporary tingle that follows its first use tells you that it is bringing your skin new health and freshness; that the two tonics it contains are making it soft and lovely.

Accept No Substitutes



Men boast about the wonderful Jap Rose lather that gets the dirt off quickly. and, like women, they say there's nothing like it for shampoo; leaves hair clean, soft and fluffy

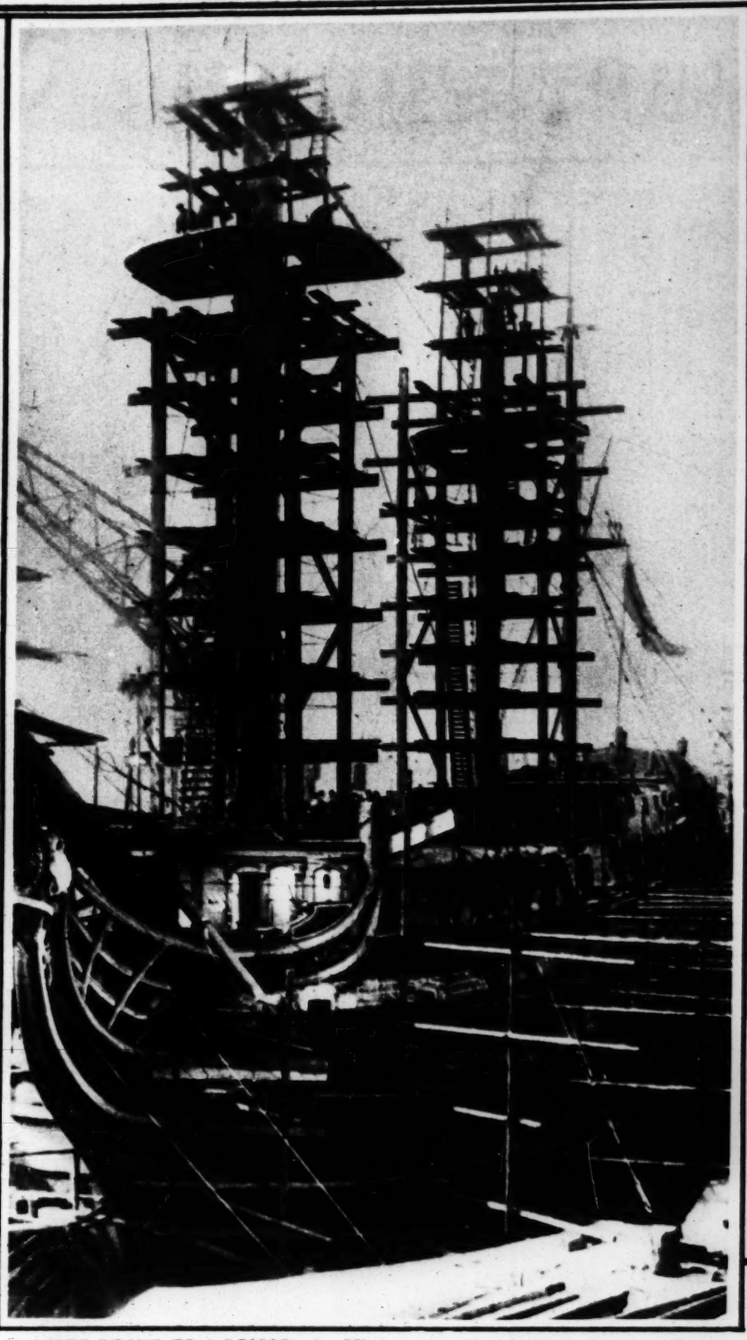
HONORED BY NEW YORK UNIVERSITY—Nicholas Longworth (left), speaker of the national house of representatives, received the degree of doctor of laws, and the degree of doctor of letters was conferred upon Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, during exercises in which 2,000 graduates were given letters. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)



NELSON'S FLAGSHIP, the Victory, is all propped up at the Portsmouth shipyard in England. The famous old vessel, which was surrendering rapidly to time, is being reconstructed to preserve it in its original aspect for the eyes of future generations. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

STORMY PETREL OF EDUCATION WEDS—Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, professor of philosophy at the University of Wisconsin, with his bride, who was Miss Helen Everett, daughter of Prof. Walter G. Everett of Brown university. Before going to Wisconsin Dr. Meiklejohn resigned from the presidency of Amherst because of alumni objections to his views. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

"FOR YEARS I suffered with sharp pains in the stomach. I tried many so-called remedies, but without permanent relief. One of my friends suggested Fleischmann's Yeast. I tried it. In a short time I felt better. Now I am absolutely well. Fleischmann's Yeast regulated my entire system. I am truly grateful for what it has done for me and advise everyone to try Fleischmann's Yeast when in a run-down condition."
Prince T. A. Alpheroff, New York, N. Y.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.

"I SUFFERED SERIOUSLY from chronic constipation. This condition brought about heartburn, dull eyes, a sallow skin blotched with pimples and boils, not to mention undue fatigue and headaches. On the advice of a specialist I began to take two yeast cakes every day. The result: Within five weeks my stomach was restored to normal working order. Today my body is vigorous and healthful."
R. W. Helser, Philadelphia, Pa.

"MY LITTLE GIRL was tired and listless and her skin was sallow. My physician recommended Fleischmann's Yeast. Her energy returned. Now chubby, bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked—she is indeed the very picture of health."
Mrs. F. G. Hagan, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I WAS ON THE VERGE of a nervous breakdown. My face was all broken out and my mouth was sensitive to most everything I ate. The doctors told me my stomach was the same way. I gave Fleischmann's Yeast a trial. I ate Yeast every day for two months and at the end of that time the breaking out on my face disappeared, and my nerves were much improved. What has helped one can help others."
Mrs. Marie Gleason, Los Angeles, Calif.

The Simple Way to Better Health

Freedom from constipation, skin and stomach troubles—abounding vitality again—with the aid of one fresh food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1¾ ounce. A cooling drink for the glorious Fourth at home or wherever you go

LET us hope the day will be bright and clear, for there are so many pleasant things to do on the Fourth of July.

The golf course calls. The tennis courts are freshly rolled and waiting. A double-header is scheduled for the ball park. Somewhere not so far away the trout are basking in a rippling stream and the green-clad woods beckon you to stop awhile for your motor picnic. Down by the seashore sands the boardwalk lights are twinkling a welcome and the moon is growing big and full, as if to tell you "all is well" for your moonlight sail.

Whatever you do on this holiday—wherever you go—remember "Canada Dry." It is the coolest and most refreshing drink of all in summer-time.

You will like its delicate, intriguing flavor. The gleam and sparkle of it. The joyous exhilaration in its delicate, enticing bouquet.

But there is a deeper and even more substantial reason than this for the popularity of "Canada Dry"—something that makes men and women prefer it above all other ginger ales.

Do you know what it is? It is the healthful zest of "Canada Dry." The keen, brisk refreshment that comes from pure ingredients. The way it lifts you up and invigorates. The very spirit of the northern pines that waits for you in every glass.

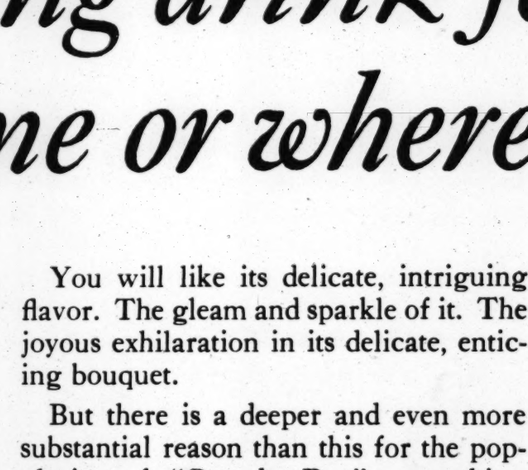
No other ginger ale will bring you this same refreshment because there is no other ginger ale like "Canada Dry." It is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger.

This is an important point to remember, because many ginger ales are reinforced with capsicum, or red pepper. That's why they have that false "gingery" taste, and that burning, biting taste. There is no capsicum in "Canada Dry."

and in the witchery of its matchless flavor it is, indeed, "The Champagne of Ginger Ales."

YOU WILL LIKE THIS HOSTESS PACKAGE

It offers a most convenient way for you to order "Canada Dry" for home use. Twelve bottles in a small but substantial carton. You will be especially glad to have it handy when good friends drop in unexpectedly—when seeking something cooling and refreshing for your Fourth of July dinner and just before retiring when you yearn for a delightful bedtime snack. Put this "Canada Dry" Hostess Package of twelve bottles on your grocery list with the rest of your pantry staples.



It is just the purest, finest, best ginger ale that it is possible to make—the choice of great hospitals in this country and in Canada—a safe drink even for children.

Keep it in mind for your Fourth of July dinner and entertaining—at home or wherever you go. In purity and quality

Look for the name on the bottle cap to be sure of the original.

THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS PACKED SOLDIERS' FIELD last Monday morning for the first great outdoor mass of the Eucharistic congress. Here, at a temporary altar beneath the golden domed pavilion, Cardinal Bonzano celebrated solemn pontifical high mass, and responses arose from a children's chorus of 62,000 voices drawn from the city's parochial schools. The stadium was filled to overflowing by the host that was successful in gaining entrance; and many other thousands, unable to reach the inclosure, remained listening outside in Grant park to the service as it came from the amplifiers.

A BOY EXPLORER—Kenneth Rawson is the son of the Chicago banker who is financing the MacMillan expedition which has just sailed for the subarctic for the Field museum. Mrs. Rowe Metcalf and Mrs. Maud Fisher, pictured with him here, also are members of the party. Kenneth was with MacMillan's arctic expedition last year. (Photograph from International.)

Nichols, G. E. Peterson, J. R. Miller, Karl P. Schmidt, Curzon Taylor, C. C. Sanborn, and B. E. Dahlgren. (Photograph from Wide World.)

130 KILLED WHEN A VOLCANO POURS LAKE DOWN ON JAP VILLAGES — Scene in Kamifurano, Hokkaido island, engulfed by lava, water and mud in the eruption of Mount Tokachi. Sixty-five houses were wrecked in this town; 600 persons were missing here and elsewhere, and 3,000 acres of land were devastated.

It's a curious thing—

Human beings are very inconsistent sometimes.

In looking out for our own welfare, many of us are still superstitious about walking under a step-ladder. Others still stop to pick up a pin for good luck.

Yet, strangely enough, we neglect a certain very important duty that in the end may have a much more serious bearing upon self-preservation and length of life.

And that is the care of the teeth. Most folks, for instance, are careless, actually lazy, about tooth-brushing. In the morning we're in a hurry. At night we're tired.

So this most important job is often neglected.

Realizing the truth of this, we set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In short, a tooth paste for lazy people—and in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to practically all of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a remarkable new cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing. Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.

*This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts pyorrhea and tooth decay.

Europe CANNOT match those ravishing Spanish Complexions

So fine, so firm, so clear—their complexions are half the armory of conquest to those seductive Spanish beauties, the most magnificent women in Europe. And they preserve those lovely skins—now as always—with nothing but Castile toilet soap. The soap that all the world acknowledges as the very finest for a woman's delicate skin—made first in Spain six hundred years ago. Yes, we have refined it for you. We give you a shape exquisitely molded for your hand; a "hard-milled" soap that will last amazingly; a soap that will give you an instant, generous lather even in lukewarm water—one that will rinse instantly too. An exquisite Castile. You can get it almost anywhere. Armour, U. S. A.

Pure Olive Oil gives Doña Castile its color, fragrance and delicious blandness for delicate skins.

CITY OF GOLD

SIDNEY SMITH

FOR TWO DAYS THE THREE ADVENTURERS HAVE CAMPED ON THE EDGE OF THE GREAT DESERT WAITING FOR A DENSE FOG TO LIFT - HIDDEN BEHIND ITS MISTY CURTAIN MAY LIE THE ROAD TO THE WONDERFUL CITY OF GOLD -

GEE, I WISH THIS OLD FOG WOULD DISAPPEAR SO WE COULD SEE WHERE WE ARE - I HOPE IT WON'T LAST MUCH LONGER -

THIS COMMONPLACE ONE ECHOES YOUR AMIABLE WISH -

NO MAN CAN TELL WHAT WIND OR FOG WILL DO - WHEN I WAS SECOND MATE OF THE CLIPPER "SAUCY SUSAN" - WE SAILED THROUGH A FOG AS DARK AS NIGHT FOR TWO WEEKS - IT WAS LIKE SAILING THROUGH AN OCEAN GRAVE-YARD HAUNTED BY THE GHOSTS OF LOST SHIPS -

WE'LL HAVE TO LEAVE HERE SOON, AS OUR SUPPLY OF FOOD WILL NOT LAST MUCH LONGER AND NOT BEING ABLE TO TELL NIGHT FROM DAY MAKES ME FEEL KIND OF CREEPY -

IT HAS BEEN TRULY SAID THAT DARKNESS IS A CLOAK FOR SINNERS, BUT A DENSE FOG CANNOT BE DISPELLED BY A FAN -

WE'LL TRY AND RISE ABOVE THE FOG SEZ YOU, BUT WHAT'S TO PREVENT US FROM BUMPING INTO A MOUNTAIN PEAK IN THIS KIND OF A FOG?

WHO CAN CONTROL THE WINDS OF DESTINY -

OH, BOY! IT'S DARK - WE SEEM TO BE SAILING THROUGH BLACK COTTON BATTING -

THIS INFERIOR INDIVIDUAL GAZES INTO THE FOG WITH UNCONCEALED APPREHENSION -

AFTER CRUISING FOR TWO HOURS WE ARE STILL IN THIS LUBBERLY OCEAN OF INK -

IT IS TRULY WRITTEN EVERYDAY CANNOT BE A FEAST OF LANTERNS -

GEE, WHIZ - THERE'S A STORM COMING UP -

THE LORDS OF THE UPPER AIR ARE BEGINNING TO EXPRESS THEIR HONORABLE ANGER -

MAN AND BOY - I'VE SAILED THE SEVEN SEAS FOR FORTY YEARS WITH OUT EVER SEEING SUCH A WILD STORM -

THE ENGINE IS STARTING TO MISS - WE'LL HAVE TO MAKE A LANDING AT ONCE -

HARD A-PORT! THERE'S A MOUNTAIN LOOMING UP IN FRONT OF YOU -

THIS UNWORTHY ONE BELIEVES HE SHALL SOON JOIN HIS HONORABLE ANCESTORS IN THE MIDDLE AIR -

WITH ONLY THE LIGHTNING FLASHES FOR A GUIDE LITTLE CHESTER STICKS TO HIS POST AND BRAVELY TRIES TO MAKE A LANDING AMONG THE JAGGED ROCKS THAT SEEM TO LEAP UP TO ENTRAP HIM - A VIVID FLASH OF LIGHTNING - A CRASH OF THUNDER - THEN ALL IS DARKNESS -
